INTRODUCTORY REMARKS •

ON

HOMER AND HIS WORKS.

---

THE city of Troy was the metropolis of Troas, a country on the shores of the Hellespont, watered by the rivers Satniois and Rhodius on the south and north, and Scamander and Simois in the middle part.

How long this city flourished is unknown, but it seems certain, that it arrived at a high degree of wealth and power. Its first king is said to have been Teucer, and its last Priam, who, by his wife Hecuba, had nineteen children.

The second son of Priam, Paris or Alexander, was, on account of a dream of his mother, denoting that he should set fire to Troy, brought up in obscurity as a shepherd. In this condition he is said to have decided the contest among the three goddesses for the prize of beauty. Afterwards, discovering his origin, and being acknowledged by his father, he made a voyage to Greece, where, being entertained by Menelaus, king of Sparta, he became enamoured of his queen, Helen, the most beautiful woman of her age, and fled with her to Troy, where she was received into the family of Priam as a daughter-in-law.

But Menelaus was less disposed to be satisfied with his loss, than Paris and Priam with their gain, and prevailed on the most eminent leaders and princes of Greece to join with him in an expedition to Troy to recover his wife by force of arms. Of the troops collected for the expedition, which is said to have been two years in preparation, Agamemnon, brother of Menelaus, and king of Mycenæ and a large portion of the Peloponnesus, was chosen commander-in-chief. The other most remarkable leaders were Achilles, from Phthiotis in Thessaly; Ajax, son of Telamon, from Salamis; Ajax, son of Oileus, from Locri; Ulysses, from Ithaca; Diomed from Argos; and Nestor from Pylos. There were many others of inferior note.

When the Grecian host, which filled twelve hundred such vessels as were then in use, arrived on the coast of Troas, they proceeded, it appears, to lay siege to the city of Troy. But the Trojans, headed by Hector, the son of Priam, with Æneas, a Trojan chief, Sarpedon, king of Lycia, Pandarus of Zeleia, Pylæmenes of Paphlagonia, and other auxiliaries, made so resolute and vigorous a resistance, that the siege or blockade was protracted for ten years. It is supposed by Thucydides,<sup>1</sup> however, that the whole of this period was not occupied in attacks on the town; but that the Greeks, when the provisions which they brought with them were exhausted, applied themselves, for subsistence, to the cultivation of the neighbouring land, and to predatory excursions, leaving before the walls of Troy only just a sufficient number to keep up the form of a siege. Had their whole force, under the command of such able leaders, maintained continuous assaults on the city, it is not likely that the inhabitants, however resolute or skilful, would have succeeded in delaying the capture of it for so long a period.

It was in the tenth year of the siege that discord arose between Agamemnon and Achilles, from the following cause. A pestilence spread through the Grecian army, and Calchas, the chief augur of the Greeks, being consulted respecting the origin of it, declared that it proceeded from Apollo, whose priest Chryses, having come to the camp to offer ransom for his daughter, (who had been taken prisoner by Achilles at the capture of the neighbouring city of Lyrnessus, and had been assigned, in the distribution of the spoil, to Agamemnon,) had been dismissed with a contumelious refusal by Agamemnon, and had in consequence called down the anger of Apollo on the Grecian army. Calchas foretold that the pestilence would not cease till Apollo should be appeased by the surrender of the captive to her father; and Aga-memnon at length consented to part with her, but ~~on~~ that, as he yielded her up for the public good, he must be indemnified by some equivalent; for that he, the commander-in-chief, must not be the only one of the leaders left without a due share of the spoil. Unless such equivalent were awarded him, he threatened that he would seize, by force, the portion of some one of the other chiefs. As no offer of indemnification was made, he carried his threat into execution, and seized upon Briseis, another female captive, who had been assigned to Achilles. Achilles, deeply offended, retired in wrath to his ships, and refused to take any farther part in the siege. By his absence, the Greeks were so weakened and dispirited that Hector and his troops had the advantage over them in several encounters, and spread among them great slaughter and dismay.

An embassy was sent to Achilles, offering him valuable presents, and the restoration of Briseis; but he refused to lend his countrymen any assistance until Hector was actually setting fire to the ships, when he allowed his friend Patroclus to lead his troops to the rescue. Patroclus encountered Hector, by whom he was killed and despoiled of the armour of Achilles, which he had assumed on taking the field. Achilles was seized with grief and rage at the loss of his friend, and, as soon as new armour was made for him, returned to the field of battle and slew Hector, after whose death the Trojans were no longer in a condition to offer any effectual resistance to the besiegers. Troy was taken by the Greeks, according to the chronology which we adopt, in the year 1184 before the commencement of the Christian era.

It is this tale that Homer has chosen to tell in that form of composition which we call an epic poem. He commences with the quarrel of Agamemnon and Achilles in the tenth year of the war, rushing, as Horace says, in medias res, and giving his reader to understand, in the course of his narration, what events had preceded the point of time from which he starts. At what period Homer lived, after the termination of the war which he relates, is utterly uncertain. Eratosthenes, the keeper of the Alexandrian library in the reign of Ptolemy Euergetes, and Crates, a grammarian contemporary with Aristarchus, place him in the first century after the capture of Troy; Aristotle and Aristarchus about a hundred and forty years after it. Philochorus, the Athenian antiquary, forty years later; Apollodorus, the Athenian chronologist, a pupil of Aristarchus, two hundred and forty years after the Trojan war; the Arundelian marble two hundred and seventy-seven; Herodotus, four hundred years after it. Most modern men of learning, on taking everything into consideration, adopt a date somewhat earlier than that of Herodotus, and think that Homer flourished about three hundred years after the Trojan era, or about 850 B.C.

But inquirers respecting Homer have been stopped at the threshold of their investigations by a party, of whom Frederic Augustus Wolf is the Hector, who have requested us to believe that no Homer, such as we have been accustomed to contemplate, ever lived at all; and that if there ever was a Homer, who had any concern in telling the history of the Trojan war, he was but a collector and arranger of other men's productions; for, as it is possible to conceive his name compounded of ἁμῶν, "together," and ἄρῳ, "to fit," it is very natural and proper, they say, to consider that he was but a "fitter together" of songs that other people had sung. But the representations of this party, though they had some effect a while ago, have ceased to be regarded with much attention by the learned and sensible part of mankind; who think it unlikely that such a production as the Iliad, of similar spirit, style, and consistence throughout, should have been the offspring of many minds, rather than of one. They consider that as, when they see a fine statue, of exquisite shape and symmetry, they are not apt to imagine that the different parts of it are the workmanship of different hands, but rather that one sculptor fashioned and finished the entire, so, when they read the Iliad or Odyssey, and find every part of it of a similar character, and each contributing to form a harmonious whole, they are not inclined to suppose its unity the result of the imaginations of several poets, but that of the single imagination of one. They reflect that, as the world has never produced many Shakspeares, or Miltons, or Spensers, at the same time, it is not probable that it produced many nearly contemporary Homers. They cannot deem it likely that Greece owes its two great epic poems to a number of verse-makers, whose very names are unrecorded; they cannot believe that the Homeric fire, glowing with a heat that no succeeding poet has equalled in its large intensity, burned on many poetic altars, but rather that it was consecrated on one, and maintained by one inspired priest of Apollo and the Muses. They cannot credit that Thucydides, Herodotus, Aristotle, Longinus, Cicero, Ovid, Horace, and all the great minds of antiquity, were wrong in believing that Homer, whom the greatest poets worshipped as their master, whose distant footsteps they adored as unapproachable, and from whom they were humbly content to draw such inspiration as they were capable of receiving, was one individual, and that a few modern German critics, of intellects utterly inferior to the great ancients whom we reverence, are right in admonishing us that we must distribute him into several.

We shall therefore consider that the Homer of antiquity was a real personage; and we should be glad to learn some particulars of his life. But when we look about for them, we find none on which we can depend. We have a life of him attributed to Herodotus; but it has long ceased to be regarded as genuine; and the short account of him ascribed to Plutarch is held in no higher estimation. Both are supposed to be the compilations of mere grammarians. The Life imputed to Herodotus differs in chronology from Herodotus's history, placing Homer nearly two centuries and a half earlier, and might for that reason, if for no other, be regarded as spurious.

The truth is, that, between the termination of the siege of Troy, and the date of the first Olympiad, B.C. 786, there occurs a dark interval, of apparently about four hundred years, of the events of which we have scarcely any knowledge. The return of the Heraclidæ, or Dorian invasion of the Peloponnesus, is said to have taken place eighty years after the fall of Troy, and the commencement of the emigration of the Ionians into Asia, about one hundred and forty-six after it; but of no other occurrences during that period is the chronology at all settled.

But we find Homer often called Mæonides and Melesigenes, and it is in the fictitious lives of him that we must search for the origin of those names. Whilst we are investigating these points, we may, perhaps, look a little farther, and see what account is to be found of Homer's life and fortunes. Of the place of his birth, none of the Greeks themselves pretended to any certain knowledge. Seven eminent cities claimed the honour of it, according to the old line given in Aulus Gellius from the Greek,

Smyrna, Rhodos, Colophon, Salamis, Chios, Argos, Athens;

but their claims found none to decide them. According to the life ascribed to Herodotus, however, it is said that he was born at Smyrna, and that his mother's name was Critheis, a native of Cumæ, daughter of Melanopus. Who was his father, the writer cannot tell us, for Homer was illegitimate. Critheis, being found with child by some person unknown, was sent away by Cleanax, under whose care she had been left by her father, to Smyrna, under the protection of a man named Ismenias. Soon after, she was delivered of Homer, on the bank of the Meles, a river near Smyrna, from whence he was called Melesigenes. Some said that Meles, the god of the river, was his father; others that his father's name was Mæon, and hence he is called Mæonides; though others, again, say that this name merely denotes him to have been a native of Mæonia, the old name of Lydia.

When his mother was delivered of her son, she left Ismenias, and became acquainted with one Phemius, who had a school in Smyrna, and who made her an offer of marriage, engaging to adopt and educate her son. This offer she accepted, and she and her husband lived till Homer was grown up, when they both died about the same time, and Homer took charge of the school, which he conducted with so much success, that he gained the admiration not only of the inhabitants, but also of the strangers whom the trade carried on there, especially in corn, attracted to the city. Amongst these was Mentès, master of a vessel from Leucadia, a man of some knowledge and intelligence, who prevailed on Homer to relinquish his school, and travel with him, offering to pay his expenses and allow him a salary, and observing that it was proper that he should see with his own eyes, while he was still young, the countries and cities which he might hereafter describe. With Mentès he visited Spain and Italy, and touched, on the way back, at Ithaca, where, having previously suffered from a defluxion in his eyes, he became much worse, and was left by Mentès, who was called away to Leucadia, under medical care, with a friend of his named Mentor, from whom he experienced great hospitality and kindness, and learned the principal incidents in the life of Ulysses. When Mentès returned, he accompanied him to Colophon, where, if not previously at Ithaca, he became entirely blind.

Whether he was deserted by Mentès, or how he became separated from him, does not appear; but, finding himself in great poverty, he resolved on going back to Smyrna, where he might hope for some support from those who knew him, and for some opportunity to display or cultivate his poetical abilities. But, being disappointed in his expectations, he set out for Cumæ, and was entertained on his way by one Tychius, an armourer or leather-dresser, at Neon Teichos; and the inhabitants of the place, says the biographer, still point out the spot where Homer sat and recited his verses, and pay it great honour.

He proceeded, however, after a time, to Cumæ, and being favourably received, and delighting the people with the recital of his poetry, he offered, if they would allow him a public maintenance, to do his utmost to make their city famous. His offer was taken into consideration in the public council, and the majority seemed favourable to the request; but one man observed, that if they resolved to maintain ὄμῆροι, they would gather about them a great number of useless people, whence, says the biographer, the poet, who had been previously called Mclesigenēs, first received the name of Homer, for the people of Cumæ call blind men ὄμῆροι. The remark had such effect, that the maintenance was refused, and the poet could not forbear uttering a wish that Cumæ might never find a poet to give it renown.

From Cumæ he went to Phocæa, where one Thestorides, another master of a school, offered him a maintenance if he would communicate his verses to him. As Homer's necessities obliged him to comply with this proposal, Thestorides, as soon as he had made himself master of a sufficient number of the verses, went off to Chios, where he gained subsistence and credit by repeating them, until some people from Chios brought word to Homer of what he was doing; when Homer determined to pursue and expose him. Having made his way to Erythræ, he prevailed on some seamen to carry him over to the island, where the first person that he encountered was a shepherd named Glaucus, by whose dogs he had nearly been worried, but who entertained him kindly, and conducted him to his master, who, finding him a man of knowledge, induced him to stay in his house, and undertake the education of his children. Thestorides was soon driven from the island, and Homer removed to the town of Chios, in which he raised a school of poetry, acquired a tolerable fortune, married, and had two daughters, one of whom died young, and the other married a Chian.

He now proceeded with his poems, and inserted in them, says the biographer, the names of those to whom he had been most indebted; as Mentor, whom he makes the companion of Ulysses in the Odyssey; and Phoenix, whom he represents as an eminent minstrel to delight the suitors. He has also introduced the name of Mentès both in the Iliad and Odyssey, and that of Tychius in the Iliad as the maker of Ajax's shield.

Resolving to visit Athens, also, he inserted something complimentary to the Athenians. On his way to Athens, the vessel in which he sailed made a circuit to Samos, where he remained the following winter; for, being recognized by a Samian who had known him in Chios, he was introduced to some of the richer inhabitants, and well entertained, reciting his poetry at their houses, and at the public festivals. In the spring he again set out for Athens, but the ship, which seems to have been doomed to deviations, found its way to Ios, one of the Cyclades, where he fell ill, and died.

Such is an abstract of the earliest attempt that has reached us at a life of Homer. We find no ground for its statements, and should suppose that they may have been the mere fictions of a grammarian; yet there may have been traditions prevailing at the time when the writer lived, to afford them some support; and the writer himself, de mortuis nil nisi bonum, may have been an anxious inquirer, desirous to advance nothing for which he could not find a basis. He was evidently, however, a man of no vigour or comprehension of mind. He has inserted in his performance, as Homer's, verses which it is wonderful that he could have supposed the author of the Iliad to have written.

That Homer was born at or near Smyrna seems to have been the general belief. Cicero, in his oration for Archias,<sup>2</sup> appears to consider the claim of Smyrna to be called his birth-place beyond those of Colophon, Chios, or Samos. "The people of Smyrna," says Strabo,<sup>3</sup> "were firmly convinced that he was born in their city, and erected a temple to Homer, with a portico attached to it, which they called Homercion, a name which they also gave to one of their coins; and some have said that they burnt Zeilus alive for having tried to lower Homer in their estimation. The Chians, indeed, paid him similar honours, and spoke of a family among them called the Homeridæ, descendants of Homer; appealing also to the end of the Hymn to the Delian Apollo, which Thucydides cited as genuine, but which every scholar now regards as posterior to Homer's age. The following is a literal translation of the passage: "Farewell, all ye virgins; and remember me hereafter, whenever any one of men upon the earth, any hapless stranger, may come hither and inquire of you, 'Who is, in your opinion, the sweetest of the minstrels that dwell here, and with which of them are you most charmed?' then do you all answer, with the utmost cheerfulness, 'A blind man, and he dwells in rocky Chios.'" But this only intimates that Homer lived in Chios, not that he was born there.

Some have said that he visited Egypt, and one Hephæstion, as recorded by Photius, says that he found at Memphis, in the Temple of Vulcan, two poems on the war of Troy, and the wanderings of Ulysses, which Phantasia, daughter of Nicarchus, had written and deposited there, and of which Homer contrived to get copies from one of the sacred scribes named Phanites, and composed from them his Iliad and Odyssey. But this Egyptian story, with Greek names, is doubtless a mere fabrication. Yet that Homer may have travelled into Egypt is not impossible; though the notion that he did so has perhaps arisen from the mention which he makes of Egypt and the Nile in the Odyssey.

If we can imagine, says Pope,<sup>5</sup> that there is any foundation of truth in what is offered to us as Homer's biography, we may gather from it "that he shewed a great thirst after knowledge, by undertaking such long and numerous travels; that he manifested an unexampled vigour of mind, by being able to write with more fire under the disadvantages of blindness, and the utmost poverty, than any poet after him in better circumstances; and that he had an unlimited sense of fame, the attendant of noble spirits, which prompted him to engage in new travels, both under these disadvantages, and the additional burden of old age."

That the writer of the Iliad lived some considerable time posterior to the Trojan war, is evident from what he says of the men of his own time having degenerated from those who fought before Troy, and of the report of the war only having reached him. Thus when Hector heaves a huge stone to burst the gate in the Grecian wall, Homer says :<sup>6</sup>

Not two strong men th' enormous weight could raise,
Such men as live in these degenerate days :

and when he invokes the aid of the muses in enumerating the forces of the Greeks, he says :<sup>7</sup>

Ἡμεῖς δ' ἐκ κλέος οἶον ἀκούομεν, οὐδὲ τι ἴδμεν,
We hear but a report, and nothing know.

Homer was able "to write," says Pope, "with more fire than any poet after him." In Pope's time it was no more doubted, at least by the public, that Homer wrote the Iliad and Odyssey, on whatever material, than that Virgil wrote the Æneid. But Wolf and his party, among whom we may regret to see Heyne, say that Homer, if a poet of that name ever lived, certainly never wrote at all, as the art of writing was not generally known among the Greeks in his time; that the poems which we have under the titles of the Iliad and Odyssey were sung by him, or by others, in the form of mere unconnected ballads, and preserved only in the memories of those who recited them, till Pésistratus of Athens made a collection of them about 540 B.C. Wolf refers for support of what he advances to Josephus,<sup>8</sup> who remarks that the Greeks were ignorant of writing till a late period, when it with difficulty made its way among them: and that "Homer, they say, did not leave his poetry in writing, but, being preserved in memory, it was afterwards put together from recitations." Wolf does not deny that writing may have been then used for inscriptions on temples or public monuments, but will not allow that it was in ordinary use for long compositions, especially as materials seem to have been wanting for it; for, to say nothing of lead, or brass, or stone, on which we can hardly suppose Homer to have written long poems, even skins, which were used by the Ionians, seem,

he thinks, too clumsy for the purpose, and papyrus was not easily to be obtained by the Greeks till the sixth century B.C., when Amasis first opened Egypt to Greek traders. The laws of Lycurgus, he observes, were not written, for those of Zaleucus, made for the Locrians, B.C. 664, are mentioned as the first laws that were written;<sup>9</sup> and those of Solon, made seventy years afterwards, were recorded on wood. But he lays still greater stress, than on any of these arguments, on inferences which he deduces from two or three passages in the Iliad and Odyssey themselves. When one of the Grecian chiefs is to fight with Hector,<sup>10</sup> and it is to be decided by lot which of seven is to undertake the combat, the lots of the several chiefs, each marked by its owner, are thrown into a helmet, which is shaken till one of them jumps out, when the herald carries it round till it comes to the hand of Ajax, who recognizes it, by the mark which he had put upon it; as his own; but, says Wolf, if this mark had consisted of writing, the herald would have read it at once, and have had no occasion to go round with it for the inspection of each hero; and therefore, as the heroes did not write on their lots, it is to be concluded that they could not write. When Bellerophon is sent by Proetus to Lycia,<sup>11</sup> to Proetus's father-in-law, Iobates, he is said to have carried with him σήματα λυγρά, "fatal signs," in a "folded tablet," in which Proetus had inscribed "many deadly things," γράψας θυμοφθόρα πολλά, indicating that Iobates was to put him to death; but Wolf says that these fatal signs, and inscribed deadly things, must have been some kind of marks, which doubtless Iobates would understand, but not letters or writing. In the Odyssey<sup>12</sup> a supercargo of a vessel is mentioned who has no written list of his goods, but must depend upon his memory to account for them; and therefore, says he, the art of writing could not then have been known to him or his employers.<sup>13</sup>

Such are the chief arguments on which Wolf rests his position that the Iliad and Odyssey could not have been written. Let us examine them, and see in what estimation they ought severally to be held. Let us inquire in the first place, whether it is absolutely necessary for us, to believe that the art of writing was wholly unknown among the Greeks three hundred years after the Trojan War. Herodotus, in whose time the art of writing was widely diffused, was born, it is supposed, about 484 B. C., or about four hundred years after Homer, if we suppose Homer to have flourished about the time which is given in the Arundelian marble, or three hundred years after the Trojan War, about which time Herodotus himself says that Homer flourished; and Herodotus had been preceded by Cadmus of Miletus, who is supposed to have flourished about B.C. 540, and who is universally called the first Greek writer of history, while Cadmus had perhaps been preceded, some few years, by Pherecydes of Scyros, who is said to have been the first that wrote Greek prose, and is generally allowed to have been the teacher of Pythagoras, who was born, according to Bentley and others, B.C. 608. If we suppose Pythagoras to have commenced his studies under Pherecydes at thirty years of age, he would have begun B.C. 578. We thus arrive at an earlier date than that at which Amasis, as Wolf says, first opened Egypt to Greek traders; (for Amasis came to the throne B.C. 569;) or within three hundred years of the time at which Homer is generally supposed to have lived by those who allow him to have lived at all; within two hundred, if we adopt the opinion of those who think that he lived five hundred years after the Trojan War.<sup>14</sup> But we will adhere to the chronology of Herodotus, and suppose that we are arrived within three hundred years of Homer's time. Pherecydes and Cadmus of Miletus wrote at this period, and, as they wrote, must have had some material on which to write. If they had not papyrus, they might have had skins or parchment, for Herodotus<sup>15</sup> expressly says that the Ionians of Asia Minor used skins before they had the papyrus, and that after they adopted the papyrus, they continued to call the rolls or books formed of it skins, from the material which they had previously used when papyrus was scarce with them. Why, then, may they not have used skins for writing, as far back as the time when we suppose the Iliad and Odyssey to have been composed, and why may not those poems have been written upon skins? Wolf observes that it is uncertain when skins came into use; but we are quite as much at liberty to believe that they were in use three hundred years before the time of Pythagoras as he is to insinuate that they were not.

At what time Cadmus and his colony brought letters from Phœnicia into Greece, (for that Phœnicians did bring them is attested by the voice of all antiquity,) it is impossible exactly to determine; but it is generally supposed to have been not less than three hundred years before the Trojan war, about the same time that Moses is considered to have written the Pentateuch. If such was the case, there was abundance of time for the knowledge of letters and writing to spread among the Greeks and their colonies before Homer wrote. The Asiatic Ionians, too, among whom we suppose Homer to have lived, preceded the other Greeks, as appears from Herodotus,<sup>16</sup> in acquiring the art of writing.

From the fact that the laws of Lycurgus were not written, we are not to infer that the art of writing was unknown in Greece in his time; for the reason why they were not written is said to have been that he wished them to be inscribed only in the hearts and minds of his countrymen. Writing, too, may have been little used at Sparta at that time, as indeed it always was, but it may have been well known in other parts of Greece. Lycurgus is also said, by Aristotle<sup>17</sup> and Plutarch,<sup>18</sup> and the account is not incredible, to have met during his travels in Asia Minor, with the poems of Homer in the custody of Creophylus, who was himself an epic poet, and, as he found that there was not only entertainment, but political and other instruction to be derived from them, is reported to have collected and transcribed them, with the intention, says Plutarch, of bringing them into Greece: for rumours of their excellence were then spreading abroad, and some few of the learned possessed portions of them. Whether he actually brought them into Greece, Plutarch does not say, but observes that he was the first who did much to make them known in that country. But Aristotle states positively that he brought them with him to Lacedæmon.

The tradition, which seems to have generally prevailed, that Phemius, the instructor of Homer, Thestorides, with whom

Homer was connected, and Homer himself, were schoolmasters, is a strong intimation that the art of writing was believed to have been known in his time; for, without it, what can be supposed to have been taught in a school? Homer, indeed, is said to have had a school after he was blind; but it is called a school of poetry, in which he may have given lectures, and others may have written from his dictation or under his direction.

The arguments which Wolf extracts from the Iliad and Odyssey themselves, against the use of writing at the time that they were produced, can hardly be considered of any greater weight than those which he brings from external sources. If the chiefs that were going to fight with Hector did not write their names on their lots, it is surely no proof that they could not write, or, if they could not, that no Greek of that day could write. Charlemagne is said to have been unable to write his own name, but there were plenty of his contemporaries that could write theirs. Even if the Grecian leaders could write, it may have been an old custom, in casting lots, to make a private mark on each lot, and they may but have adhered to the custom. It is very unsatisfactory to argue that because men, whom we see only through the mist of antiquity, did not do a certain thing, they therefore could not do it.

The passage relating to Bellerophon is of still less effect; for it is there said that Proetus had "written many deadly things," (γράψας θυμοφθόρα πολλά.) as the words are generally interpreted; but the full signification of the phrase, as Mr. Barker, in his edition of Lempriere, has properly observed, seems to be, that Proetus had written to Iobates many mind-corrupting things, many things intended to prejudice the mind of Iobates against Bellerophon, and induce him to put the youth to death. These things could hardly have been expressed by a few symbols, and therefore it can be no great presumption to suppose, with Bishop Thirlwall,<sup>18</sup> that Homer meant that they were expressed in alphabetic writing.

To lay any stress upon the passage from the Odyssey, in which an owner of a ship is said to have had no list of his cargo, would be utterly ridiculous. In the Economics of Xenophon, Socrates speaks of a master of a large Phœnician ship, who knew where all the numerous articles in it were deposited, and could name the place of each when he was out of sight of them, yet is not said to have had any written list; and we might as well argue from this passage of Xenophon, that writing was unknown to the Phœnicians in the time of Socrates, as from the passage of the Odyssey that it was unknown to the Greeks.

Even Bentley, who expressed an opinion similar to that of Wolf respecting the want of unity in the Iliad and Odyssey, did not deny that those poems were written by Homer. "Homer," he says, "wrote a sequel of songs and rhapsodies, to be sung by himself. * * * These loose songs were not collected together in the form of an epic poem till about Pisistratus' time, about five hundred years later."<sup>19</sup> Whether this notion was conceived in Bentley's own mind, or suggested to him from some other source, may be doubtful; for Charles Perrault, in his parallel between the Ancients and Moderns, published in 1692, had thrown out conjectures of that nature. The theory was then advocated, in 1728, by Giambattista Vico, who asserted that the formation of the Iliad and Odyssey into regular poems was the work of Pisistratus and his coadjutors. Wood, in his Essay on Homer, published in 1770, started the question whether the poems of Homer were originally written or not; and Wolf, excited by the suggestion, advocated that pretentious theory, at variance with all antiquity, of which we have already endeavoured to estimate the value.

Wolf, we have seen, places much dependance on a passage of Josephus, which affirms that the poems were not committed to writing till a later period. But "much reliance," as a writer in the Quarterly Review<sup>20</sup> has observed, "cannot fairly be placed on the authority of Josephus, writing in a controversial tract in which his avowed object is to exalt the antiquity of his own national records, and to depress those of other countries; nor are those who have most deeply studied the writings of Josephus, the most inclined to think favourably of his general accuracy. But besides this single passage of Josephus," adds the Reviewer, "which, after all, does not go much farther than the common story about Pisistratus, not even a grammarian [among the Greeks], although here and there one may appear to have made some advances towards the hypothesis of Wolf, explicitly denies that the poems were originally composed at a whole; the prevailing, indeed almost the universal opinion, asserted that the Pisistratid compilation was a reconstruction of poems, the parts of which time and accident had scattered asunder, not their first design and formation as consecutive and harmonious poetical histories."

That poems of such a nature, exhibiting such a connexion and dependence of parts, and such a variety of characters, each appearing qualis ab incepto; keeping the principal character in view, as Clarke says, à capite ad calcem, from the exordium to the peroration; relating such a variety of incidents, of which no one clashes with another, but all tend to one certain catastrophe, and so many deaths, of combatants of which no two are exactly similar; displaying, too, such a uniformity of style, adorned with such a variety of poetical similes, all of great excellence, such as Virgil and Milton were contented if they could but approach, were transmitted from the age of Homer to that of Pisistratus, in no other vehicle than that of the memory of rhapsodists, is a hypothesis which we know not how any man ordinarily qualified to judge of probabilities can bring himself to entertain. We are aware that there have been many instances of extraordinary memory, but we cannot convince ourselves that there ever existed a succession of men to communicate such poems, in the state in which we have them, from generation to generation through a long series of years. We have all heard of the man, mentioned in Mrs. Piozzi's Letters, who could repeat the Jerusalem Delivered from one end to another, forwards or backwards, without mistake; and the Quarterly Review<sup>21</sup> furnishes us a similar, or even more remarkable instance, of a man in Scotland who could repeat the whole Bible from beginning to end, and give any verse required from any part of it, the merest sand rope of proper names not excepted. But the appearances of such men in the world are "few and far between," and we cannot imagine that a succession of men ever existed of such power of memory as to hand down the poems of Homer century after century, without some writing to which they could refer for aid. It is easier to suppose, as Bishop Thirlwall says, that the poems were written at first, than that they were written at a subsequent period.

What we conclude from all we have considered, then, is, that Homer was not a creature of the imagination, but, as all antiquity believed, a real person, who lived about three hundred years after the Trojan war; that of the particulars of his life nothing is certainly known, but that it is probable there was a basis for the traditions that he was poor, blind for a time, and a wanderer, and that, if he was not born at Smyrna, he at least visited it, as well as Chios and Colophon; that he composed the Iliad and Odyssey, perhaps in detached parts, but doubtless connected them at last into consistent wholes; that the art of writing was known, if not in Greece, at least in Asia Minor, in his time, though it may have been confined to very few, and that those great poems were committed to writing, either by himself or under his superintendence; that the rhapsodists sang them in detached portions, in earlier times as in later, even in the days of Socrates, long after copies of them had been multiplied; that their excellence became gradually known, and that Lycurgus, whom Cicero<sup>1</sup> makes even contemporary with Homer, may have brought them to Sparta, or, if not, may at least have aided in disseminating a knowledge of them through Greece; and that Pisistratus, probably assisted by some of the great geniuses of his day, may have striven, as Cicero tells us,<sup>2</sup> to repair the damage that time had produced in them, and restore them to the state in which he conceived the illustrious author to have left them.

Let it be observed that no great poetical genius, no man fit to have a seat near the throne of Homer, no Byron, or Goethe, or Moore, has been in danger of being misled by the theory, as it is called, of Wolf; a theory started and upheld at first mostly by men of the standing of Kuster, Burman, and Wasse, who, to borrow Pope's illustration, will never see how the parts of a great poem consist with one another and with the whole, till a shall contemplate the structure of a human body, or, in the words of the same author, before whose uncrepting word light dies. If Wolf's hypothesis has since been patronized by men of a somewhat higher character, it has been patronized by them, in the general sense of mankind is beginning to degenerate, only to their discredit. We shall still have our Homer entire, and any attempts to distribute him into parts, or make him evaporate into a myth, will, we may fairly prophesy, prove as futile as the late fanciful project of dividing the plays of Shakspeare between Raleigh and Bacon.

Some remarks on the Odyssey in particular will be offered in the next volume.

Against the version of Pope, which is here once more reprinted, much criticism, and animadversions of various sorts, have at times been directed. But all the objections that have been made to it are little more than a repetition of Bentley's remark that "it is not Homer."

That it is not a literal translation of Homer, rendering every phrase in words exactly correspondent, is well known; but it is what the English world has been well content to accept instead of a literal translation.

Pope, as is now well understood, was not a great Greek scholar, notwithstanding Lord Bathurst's statement to Dr. Blair, that, when he was executing part of the Iliad at that nobleman's house, he would repeat at breakfast the Greek lines which he had previously been translating, accompanied with his own version. Much stress has been laid upon this anecdote by those who wish to make the most of Pope's knowledge of Greek; but it will not prove it to have been very deep; for a man may repeat a few Greek lines with but a very imperfect conception of their meaning.

But if Pope had not the Greek of a Bentley or a Porson, he had that which was of far more importance to a translator of Homer than a greater knowledge of Greek would have been. He had great acuteness and penetration, and was able to see far better into Homer's meaning than many who had far more knowledge of Homer's language; and when he had made himself master of

Homer's matter, he could express it in his own language with a fire and energy that a mere scholar would attempt in vain :

Sudet mult' stragus laboret,
Ausus idem..

He doubtless did not always compass the sense with equal success ; he sometimes perverts and sometimes exaggerates ; but his representations are chiefly in minor matters ; Homer's great thoughts and noble passages are in general rendered with all the fidelity and exactness that a great poet would desire.

In how much esteem Pope's version, with all its faults, is held by the English public, is shown by the fortune of all subsequent attempts that have been made to represent Homer in English with greater accuracy. Of these, the chief are Cowper's and Sotheby's. Cowper, though he had no superabundance of Greek, had enough to render Homer faithfully ; but he is guilty, alas ! of that from which every translator of the mighty Grecian should be free ; his blank verse is tame and unenergetic ; he has occasional warmth, but no ardour ; he has not even cherished the fire with which his master supplied him. Sotheby has succeeded better, though he ventured on the hazardous experiment of encountering Pope in the heroic couplet ; but he has only encountered, he has not rivalled ; his verses are smooth, and show a scholar's fidelity to the sense, but want

His version is to Pope's what Pitt's Virgil is to Dryden's ; more true to the original, but less pleasing to the reader.

After the fate of these efforts, it is futile to decry Pope's translation as mere “splendid varnish.” The public allow that there is varnish, but have found out that there is excellent stuff, whether Homer's or Pope's, below the varnish. They still regard Pope as the English Homer ; and all rival performances, except Sotheby's and Cowper's, have found favour neither with the learned nor the unlearned, neither with those who pretend to judge quid distent æra lupinis, nor with those who “give up the reins of their imagination into their author's hands, and are pleased they know not why, and care no wherefore.”

xxiv, INTRODUCTORY REMARKS ON HOMER AND HIS WORK.

In the following pages no pains have been spared to give a correct text. The few notes are intended chiefly for the elucidation of passages that might seem obscure to the mere English reader; they are mostly from Pope; some few from Cowper; both of whom borrowed liberally from Eustathius and the Greek scholiasts.

POPE'S PREFACE.

HOMER is universally allowed to have had the greatest invention of any writer whatever. The praise of judgment Virgil has justly contested with him, and others may have their pretensions as to particular excellencies ; but his invention remains yet unrivalled. Nor is it a wonder if he has ever been acknowledged the greatest of poets, who most excelled in that which is the very foundation of poetry. It is the invention that in different degrees distinguishes all great geniuses : the utmost stretch of human study, learning, and industry, which masters everything besides, can never attain to this. It furnishes Art with all her materials, and without it, Judgment itself can at best but steal wisely : for Art is only like a prudent steward, that lives on managing the riches of Nature. Whatever praises may be given to works of judgment, there is not even a single beauty in them but is owing to the invention : as in the most regular gardens, however Art may carry the greatest appearance, there is not a plant or flower but is the gift of Nature. The first can only reduce the beauties of the latter into a more obvious figure, which the common eye may better take in, and is therefore more entertained with them. And perhaps the reason why most critics are inclined to prefer a judicious and methodical genius to a great and fruitful one, is, because they find it easier for themselves to pursue their observations through an uniform and bounded walk of art, than to comprehend the vast and various extent of nature.

Our author's work is a wild paradise, where if we cannot see all the beauties so distinctly as in an ordered garden, it is only because the number of them is infinitely greater. It is like a copious nursery, which contains the seeds and first productions of every kind, out of which those who followed him have but selected some particular plants, each according to his fancy, to cultivate and beautify. If some things are too luxuriant, it is owing to the richness of the soil ; and if others are not arrived to perfection or maturity, it is only because they are over-run and oppressed by those of a stronger nature.

It is to the strength of this amazing invention we are to attribute that unequalled fire and rapture, which is so forcible in

Homer, that no man of a true poetical spirit is master of himself while he reads him. What he writes is of the most animated nature imaginable; everything moves, everything lives, and is put in action. If a council be called, or a battle fought, you are not coldly informed of what was said or done as from a third person; the reader is hurried out of himself by the force of the poet's imagination, and turns in one place to a hearer, in another to a spectator. The course of his verses resembles that of the army he describes,

Οἱ δ' ἀπ' ἰσάν, ὡς αἱ τε περὶ χθονὶ πᾶσι νιμφοῖτο·

They pour along like a fire that sweeps the whole earth before it. It is, however, remarkable that his fancy, which is every where vigorous, is not discovered immediately at the beginning of his poem in its fullest splendour; it grows in the progress both upon himself and others, and becomes on fire, like a chariot-wheel, by its own rapidity. Exact disposition, just thought, correct elocution, polished numbers, may have been found in a thousand; but this poetical fire, this vivida vis animi, in a very few. Even in works where all those are imperfect or neglected, this can overpower criticism, and make us admire even while we disapprove. Nay, where this appears, though attended with absurdities, it brightens all the rubbish about it, till we see nothing but its own splendour. This fire is discerned in Virgil, but discerned as through a glass, reflected from Homer, more shining than fierce, but every where equal and constant: in Lucan and Statius, it bursts out in sudden, short, and interrupted flashes: in Milton, it glows like a furnace kept up to an uncommon ardour by the force of art: in Shakspeare, it strikes before we are aware, like an accidental fire from heaven: but in Homer, and in him only, it burns every where clearly, and every where irresistibly.

I shall here endeavour to shew, how this vast invention exerts itself in a manner superior to that of any poet, through all the main constituent parts of his work, as it is the great and peculiar characteristic which distinguishes him from all other authors.

This strong and ruling faculty was like a powerful star, which, in the violence of its course, drew all things within its vortex. It seemed not enough to have taken in the whole circle of arts, and the whole compass of nature, to supply his maxims and reflections; all the inward passions and affections of mankind, to furnish his characters; and all the outward forms and images of things for his descriptions; but wanting yet an ampler sphere to expatiate in, he opened a new and boundless walk for his imagination, and created a world for himself in the invention of fable. That which Aristotle calls the soul of poetry, was first breathed into it by

Homer. I shall begin with considering him in this part, as it is naturally the first; and I speak of it both as it means the design of a poem, and as it is taken for fiction.

Fable may be divided into the probable, the allegorical, and the marvellous. The probable fable is the recital of such actions as, though they did not happen, yet might, in the common course of nature; or of such as, though they did, become fables by the additional episodes and manner of telling them. Of this sort is the main story of an Epic poem, the return of Ulysses, the settlement of the Trojans in Italy, or the like. That of the Iliad, is the wrath of Achilles, the most short and single subject that ever was chosen by any poet. Yet this he has supplied with a vaster variety of incidents and events, and crowded with a greater number of councils, speeches, battles, and episodes of all kinds, than are to be found even in those poems whose schemes are of the utmost latitude and irregularity. The action is hurried on with the most vehement spirit, and its whole duration employs not so much as fifty days. Virgil, for want of so warm a genius, aided himself by taking in a more extensive subject, as well as a greater length of time, and contracting the design of both Homer's poems into one, which is yet but a fourth part as large as his. The other Epic poets have used the same practice, but generally carried it so far as to superinduce a multiplicity of fables, destroy the unity of action, and lose their readers in an unreasonable length of time. Nor is it only in the main design that they have been unable to add to his invention, but they have followed him in every episode and part of story. If he has given a regular catalogue of an army, they all draw up their forces in the same order. If he has funeral games for Patroclus, Virgil has the same for Anchises, and Statius (rather than omit them) destroys the unity of his action for those of Archemorus. If Ulysses visit the shades, the Æneas of Virgil, and Scipio of Silius, are sent after him. If he be detained from his return by the allurements of Calypso, so is Æneas by Dido, and Rinaldo by Armida. If Achilles be absent from the army on the score of a quarrel through half the poem, Rinaldo must absent himself just as long, on the like account. If he gives his hero a suit of celestial armour, Virgil and Tasso make the same present to theirs. Virgil has not only observed this close imitation of Homer, but, where he had not led the way, supplied the want from other Greek authors. Thus the story of Sinon and the taking of Troy was copied (says Macrobius) almost word for word from Pisander, as the loves of Dido and Æneas are taken from those of Medea and Jason in Apollonius, and several others in the same manner.

To proceed to the allegorical fable. If we reflect upon those innumerable knowledges, those secrets of nature and physical philosophy, which Homer is generally supposed to have wrapped up in his allegories, what a new and ample scene of wonder may this consideration afford us? How fertile will that imagination appear, which was able to clothe all the properties of elements, the qualifications of the mind, the virtues and vices, in forms and persons; and to introduce them into actions agreeable to the nature of the things they shadowed! This is a field in which no succeeding poets could dispute with Homer; and whatever commendations have been allowed them on this head, are by no means for their invention in having enlarged the circle, but for their judgment in having contracted it. For when the mode of ~~learning~~ changed in following ages, and science was delivered in a plainer manner, it then became as reasonable in the more modern poets to lay it aside, as it was in Homer to make use of it. And perhaps it was no unhappy circumstance for Virgil, that there was not in his time that demand upon him of so great an invention, as might be capable of furnishing all those allegorical parts of a poem.

The marvellous fable includes whatever is supernatural, and especially the machines of the gods. If Homer was not the first who introduced the deities (as Herodotus imagines) into the religion of Greece, he seems the first who brought them into a system of machinery for poetry, and such a one as makes its greatest importance and dignity. For we find those authors who have been offended at the literal notion of the gods, constantly laying their accusation against Homer as the undoubted inventor of it. But whatever cause there might be to blame his machines in a philosophical or religious view, they are so perfect in the poetic, that mankind have been ever since contented to follow them: none have been able to enlarge the sphere of poetry beyond the limits he has set: every attempt of this nature has proved unsuccessful; and after all the various changes of times and religions, his gods continue to this day the gods of poetry.

We come now to the characters of his persons; and here we shall find no author has ever drawn so many, with so visible and surprising a variety, or given us such lively and affecting impressions of them. Every one has something so singularly his own, that no painter could have distinguished them more by their features, than the poet has by their manners. Nothing can be more exact than the distinctions he has observed in the different degrees of virtues and vices. The single quality of courage is wonderfully diversified in the several characters of the Iliad. That of Achilles is furious and untractable; that of Diomed forward, yet listening to advice and subject to command; that of Ajax is heavy, and self-confiding; of Hector, active and vigilant; the courage of Agamemnon is inspirited by love of empire and ambition; that of Menelaus mixed with softness, and tenderness for his people: we find in Idomeneus a plain direct soldier, in Sarpedon a gallant and generous one. Nor is this judicious and astonishing diversity to be found only in the principal quality which constitutes the main of each character, but even in the under-parts of it, to which he takes care to give a tincture of that principal one. For example, the main characters of Ulysses and Nestor consist in wisdom; and they are distinct in this, that the wisdom of one is artificial and various, of the other natural, open, and regular. But they have, besides, characters of courage; and this quality also takes a different turn in each from the difference of his prudence; for one in the war depends still upon caution, the other upon experience. It would be endless to produce instances of these kinds. The characters of Virgil are far from striking us in this open manner; they lie in a great degree hidden and undistinguished, and where they are marked most evidently, affect us not in proportion to those of Homer. His characters of valour are much alike; even that of Turnus seems no way peculiar, but as it is in a superior degree; and we see nothing that differences the courage of Mnestheus from that of Sergestus, Cloanthus, or the rest. In like manner it may be remarked of Statius's heroes, that an air of impetuosity runs through them all; the same horrid and savage courage appears in his Capaneus, Tydeus, Hippomedon, &c. They have a parity of character, which makes them seem brothers of one family. I believe when the reader is led into this track of reflection, if he will pursue it through the Epic and Tragic writers, he will be convinced how infinitely superior in this point the invention of Homer was to that of all others.

The speeches are to be considered as they flow from the characters, being perfect or defective as they agree or disagree with the manners of those who utter them. As there is more variety of characters in the Iliad, so there is of speeches, than in any other poem. Every thing in it has manners, (as Aristotle expresses it); that is, every thing is acted or spoken. It is hardly credible in a work of such length, how small a number of lines are employed in narration. In Virgil, the dramatic part is less in proportion to the narrative; and the speeches often consist of general reflections or thoughts, which might be equally just in any person's mouth upon the same occasion. As many of his persons have no apparent characters, so many of his speeches escape being applied and judged by the rule of propriety. We oftener think of the author himself when we read Virgil, than when we are engaged in Homer: all which are the effects of a colder invention, that interests us less in the action described: Homer makes us hearers, and Virgil leaves us readers.

If in the next place we take a view of the sentiments, the same presiding faculty is eminent in the sublimity and spirit of his thoughts. Longinus has given his opinion, that it was in this part Homer principally excelled. What were alone sufficient to prove the grandeur and excellence of his sentiments in general, is, that that they have so remarkable a parity with those of the Scripture: Duport, in his Gnomologia Homerica, has collected innumerable instances of this sort. And it is with justice an excellent modern writer allows, that if Virgil has not so many thoughts that are low and vulgar, he has not so many that are sublime and noble; and that the Roman author seldom rises into very astonishing sentiments where he is not fired by the Iliad.

If we observe his descriptions, images, and similes, we shall find the invention still predominant. To what else can we ascribe that vast comprehension of images of every sort, where we see each circumstance of art and individual of nature summoned together, by the extent and fecundity of his imagination; to which all things, in their various views, presented themselves in an instant, and had their impressions taken off to perfection, at a heat? Nay, he not only gives us the full prospects of things, but several unexpected peculiarities and side-views, unobserved by any painter but Homer. Nothing is so surprising as the descriptions of his battles, which take up no less than half the Iliad, and are supplied with so vast a variety of incidents, that no one bears a likeness to another; such different kinds of deaths, that no two heroes are wounded in the same manner; and such a profusion of noble ideas, that every battle rises above the last in greatness, horror, and confusion. It is certain there is not near the number of images and descriptions in any Epic poet; though every one has assisted himself with a great quantity out of him: and it is evident of Virgil especially, that he has scarce any comparisons which are not drawn from his master.

If we descend from hence to the expression, we see the bright imagination of Homer shining out in the most enlivened forms of it. We acknowledge him the father of poetical diction, the first who taught that language of the gods to men. His expression is like the colouring of some great masters, which discovers itself to be laid on boldly, and executed with rapidity. It is indeed the strongest and most glowing imaginable, and touched with the greatest spirit. Aristotle had reason to say, he was the only poet who had found out living words; there are in him more daring figures and metaphors than in any good author whatever. An arrow is impatient to be on the wing, a weapon thirsts to drink the blood of an enemy, and the like. Yet his expression is never too big for the sense, but justly great in proportion to it.

It is the sentiment that swells and fills out the diction; which rises with it, and forms itself about it; and in the same degree that a thought is warmer, an expression will be brighter; as that is more strong, this will become more perspicuous: like glass in the furnace, which grows to a greater magnitude, and refines to a greater clearness, only as the breath within is more powerful, and the heat more intense.

To throw his language more out of prose, Homer seems to have affected the compound epithets. This was a sort of composition peculiarly proper to poetry, not only as it heightened the diction, but as it assisted and filled the numbers with greater sound and pomp, and likewise conduced in some measure to thicken the images. On this last consideration I cannot but attribute these also to the fruitfulness of his invention; since (as he has managed them) they are a sort of supernumerary pictures of the persons or things to which they are joined. We see the motion of Hector's plumes in the epithet Κορυθαίολος, the landscape of mount Neritus in that of Εἰνοσίφυλλος, and so of others; which particular images could not have been insisted upon so long as to express them in a description (though but of a single line), without diverting the reader too much from the principal action or figure. As a metaphor is a short simile, one of these epithets is a short description.

Lastly, if we consider his versification, we shall be sensible what a share of praise is due to his invention in that. He was not satisfied with his language as he found it settled in any one part of Greece, but searched through its differing dialects with this particular view, to beautify and perfect his numbers: he considered these as they had a greater mixture of vowels or consonants, and accordingly employed them as the verse required either a greater smoothness or strength. What he most affected was the Ionic, which has a peculiar sweetness from its never using contractions, and from its custom of resolving the diphthongs into two syllables; so as to make the words open themselves with a more spreading and sonorous fluency. With this he mingled the Attic contractions, the broader Doric, and the feebler Æolic, which often rejects its aspirate, or takes off its accent; and completed this variety by altering some letters with the licence of poetry. Thus his measures, instead of being fetters to his sense, were always in readiness to run along with the warmth of his rapture, and even to give a farther representation of his notions in the correspondence of their sounds to what they signified. Out of all these he has derived that harmony, which makes us confess he had not only the richest head, but the finest ear, in the world. This is so great a truth, that whoever will but consult the tune of his verses, even without understanding them

(with the same sort of diligence as we daily see practised in the case of Italian operas), will find more sweetness, variety, and majesty of sound than in any other language or poetry. The beauty of his numbers is allowed by the critics to be copied but faintly by Virgil himself, though they are so just to ascribe it to the nature of the Latin tongue: indeed, the Greek has some advantages both from the natural sound of its words, and the turn and cadence of its verse, which agree with the genius of no other language. Virgil was very sensible of this, and used the utmost diligence in working up a more intractable language to whatsoever graces it was capable of; and in particular never failed to bring the sound of his line to a beautiful agreement with its sense. If the Grecian poet has not been so frequently celebrated on this account, as the Roman, the only reason is, that fewer critics have understood one language than the other. Dionysius of Halicarnassus has pointed out many of our author's beauties in this kind, in his treatise of the Composition of Works; and others will be taken notice of in the course of my notes. It suffices at present to observe of his numbers, that they flow with so much ease, as to make one imagine Homer had no other care than to transcribe as fast as the Muses dictated; and at the same time with so much force and inspiriting vigour, that they awaken and raise us like the sound of a trumpet. They roll along as a plentiful river, always in motion, and always full; while we are borne away by a tide of verse, the most rapid, and yet the most smooth imaginable.

Thus, on whatever side we contemplate Homer, what principally strikes us is his invention. It is that which forms the character of each part of his work; and accordingly we find it to have made his fable more extensive and copious than any other; his manners more lively and strongly marked, his speeches more affecting and transported, his sentiments more warm and sublime, his images and descriptions more full and animated, his expression more raised and daring, and his numbers more rapid and various. I hope, in what has been said of Virgil with regard to any of these heads, I have no way derogated from his character. Nothing is more absurd or endless, than the common method of comparing eminent writers by an opposition of particular passages in them, and forming a judgment from thence of their merit upon the whole. We ought to have a certain knowledge of the principal character and distinguishing excellence of each: it is in that we are to consider him, and in proportion to his degree in that we are to admire him. No author or man ever excelled all the world in more than one faculty, and as Homer has done this in invention, Virgil has in judgment. Not that we are to think Homer wanted judgment, because Virgil had it in a more eminent degree; or that Virgil wanted invention, because Homer possessed a larger share of it; each of these great authors had more of both than perhaps any man besides, and are only said to have less in comparison with one another. Homer was the greater genius, Virgil the better artist. In one we most admire the man, in the other the work. Homer hurries and transports us with a commanding impetuosity, Virgil leads us with an attractive majesty: Homer scatters with a generous profusion, Virgil bestows with a careful magnificence: Homer, like the Nile, pours out his riches with a boundless overflow; Virgil, like a river in its banks, with a gentle and constant stream. When we behold their battles, methinks the two poets resemble the heroes they celebrate: Homer, boundless and irresistible as Achilles, bears all before him, and shines more and more as the tumult increases; Virgil, calmly daring like Æneas, appears undisturbed in the midst of the action, disposes all about him, and conquers with tranquillity. And when we look upon their machines, Homer seems like his own Jupiter in his terrors, shaking Olympus, scattering the lightnings, and firing the heavens; Virgil, like the same power in his benevolence, counselling with the gods, laying plans for empires, and regularly ordering his whole creation.

But, after all, it is with great parts, as with great virtues; they naturally border on some imperfection; and it is often hard to distinguish exactly where the virtue ends, or the fault begins. As prudence may sometimes sink to suspicion, so may a great judgment decline to coldness; and as magnanimity may run up to profusion or extravagance, so may a great invention to redundancy or wildness. If we look upon Homer in this view, we shall perceive the chief objections against him to proceed from so noble a cause as the excess of this faculty.

Among these we may reckon some of his marvellous fictions, upon which so much criticism has been spent, as surpassing all the bounds of probability. Perhaps it may be with great and superior souls as with gigantic bodies, which, exerting themselves with unusual strength, exceed what is commonly thought the due proportion of parts, to become miracles in the whole; and, like the old heroes of that make, commit something near extravagance, amidst a series of glorious and inimitable performances. Thus Homer has his speaking horses, and Virgil his myrtles distilling blood; where the latter has not so much as contrived the easy intervention of a deity to save the probability.

It is owing to the same vast invention, that his similes have been thought too exuberant and full of circumstances. The force of this faculty is seen in nothing more, than in its inability to confine itself to that single circumstance upon which the comparison is grounded: it runs out into embellishments of additional images, which, however, are so managed as not to overpower the main one. His similes are like pictures, where the principal figure has not only its proportion given agreeable to the original, but is also set off with occasional ornaments and prospects. The same will account for his manner of heaping a number of comparisons together in one breath, when his fancy suggested to him at once so many various and correspondent images. The reader will easily extend this observation to more objections of the same kind.

If there are others which seem rather to charge him with a defect or narrowness of genius, than an excess of it, those seeming defects will be found upon examination to proceed wholly from the nature of the times he lived in. Such are his grosser representations of the gods, and the vicious and imperfect manners of his heroes; but I must here speak a word of the latter, as it is a point generally carried into extremes, both by the censurer and defenders of Homer. It must be a strange partiality to antiquity, to think with Madame Dacier, * "that those times and manners are so much the more excellent, as they are more contrary to ours." Who can be so prejudiced in their favour as to magnify the felicity of those ages, when a spirit of revenge and cruelty, joined with the practice of rapine and robbery, reigned through the world; when no mercy was shewn but for the sake of lucre; when the greatest princes were put to the sword, and their wives and daughters made slaves and concubines? On the other side, I would not be so delicate as those modern critics, who are shocked at the servile offices and mean employments in which we sometimes see the heroes of Homer engaged. There is a pleasure in taking a view of that simplicity, in opposition to the luxury of succeeding ages; in beholding monarchs without their guards, princes tending their flocks, and princesses drawing water from the springs. When we read Homer, we ought to reflect that we are reading the most ancient author in the heathen world; and those who consider him in this light, will double their pleasure in the perusal of him. Let them think they are growing acquainted with nations and people that are now no more; that they are stepping almost three thousand years back into the remotest antiquity, and entertaining themselves with a clear and surprising vision of things nowhere else to be found, the only true mirror of that ancient world. By this means alone their greatest obstacles will vanish; and what usually creates their dislike, will become a satisfaction.

This consideration may farther serve to answer for the constant use of the same epithets to his gods and heroes, such as the far-darting Phœbus, the blue-eyed Pallas, the swift-footed Achilles, &c., which some have censured as impertinent and tediously repeated. Those of the gods depended upon the powers and offices then believed to belong to them, and had contracted a weight and veneration from the rites and solemn devotions in which they were used: they were a sort of attributes with which it was a matter of religion to salute them on all occasions, and which it was an irreverence to omit. As for the epithets of great men, Mons. Boileau is of opinion, that they were in the nature of surnames, and repeated as such; for the Greeks, having no names derived from their fathers, were obliged to add some other distinction of each person; either naming his parents expressly, or his place of birth, profession, or the like: as Alexander, the son of Philip, Herodotus of Halicarnassus, Diogenes the Cynic, &c. Homer therefore, complying with the custom of his country, used such distinctive additions as better agreed with poetry. And indeed we have something parallel to these in modern times, such as the names of Harold Harefoot, Edmund Ironside, Edward Longshanks, Edward the Black Prince, &c. If yet this be thought to account better for the propriety than for the repetition, I shall add a farther conjecture. Hesiod, dividing the world into its different ages, has placed a fourth age between the brazen and the iron one, of heroes distinct from other men, a divine race, who fought at Thebes and Troy, are called demi-gods, and live by the care of Jupiter in the islands of the blessed.* Now among the divine honours which were paid them, they might have this also in common with the gods, not to be mentioned without the solemnity of an epithet, and such as might be acceptable to them by its celebrating their families, actions, or qualities.

What other cavils have been raised against Homer, are such as hardly deserve a reply, but will yet be taken notice of as they occur in the course of the work. Many have been occasioned by an injudicious endeavour to exalt Virgil; which is much the same, as if one should think to raise the superstructure by undermining the foundation: one would imagine by the whole course of their parallels, that these critics never so much as heard of Homer's having written first; a consideration which whoever compares these two poets ought to have always in his eye. Some accuse him for the same things which they overlook or praise him in the other; as when they prefer the fable and moral of the Æneis to those of the Iliad, for the same reasons which might set the Odyssey above the Æneis; as that the hero is a wise man, and the action of the one more beneficial to his country than that of the other: or else they blame him for not doing what he never designed; as because Achilles is not as good and perfect a prince as Æneas, when the very moral of his poem required a contrary character; it is thus that Rapin judges in his comparison of Homer and Virgil. Others select those particular passages of Homer, which are not so laboured as some that Virgil drew out of them: this is the whole management of Scaliger in his Poetics. Others quarrel with what they take for low and mean expressions, sometimes through a false delicacy and refinement, oftener from an ignorance of the graces of the original; and then triumph in the awkwardness of their own translations: this is the conduct of Perault in his Parallels. Lastly, there are others, who, pretending to a fairer proceeding, distinguish between the personal merit of Homer, and that of his work; but when they come to assign the causes of the great reputation of the Iliad, they found it upon the ignorance of his times, and the prejudice of those that followed: and in pursuance of this principle, they make those accidents (such as the contention of the cities, &c.) to be the causes of his fame, which were in reality the consequences of his merit. The same might as well be said of Virgil, or any great author, whose general character will infallibly raise many casual additions to their reputation. This is the method of Mons. de la Motte; who yet confesses upon the whole, that in whatever age Homer had lived, he must have been the greatest poet of his nation, and that he may be said in this sense to be the master even of those who surpassed him.

In all these objections we see nothing that contradicts his title to the honour of the chief invention: and as long as this (which is indeed the characteristic of poetry itself) remains unequalled by his followers, he still continues superior to them. A cooler judgment may commit fewer faults, and be more approved in the eyes of one sort of critics: but that warmth of fancy will carry the loudest and most universal applauses, which holds the heart of a reader under the strongest enchantment. Homer not only appears the inventor of poetry, but excels all the inventors of other arts in this, that he has swallowed up the honour of those who succeeded him. What he has done admitted no increase, it only left room for contraction or regulation. He showed all the stretch of fancy at once; and if he has failed in some of his flights, it was but because he attempted every thing. A work of this kind seems like a mighty tree which rises from the most vigorous seed, is improved with industry, flourishes, and produces the finest fruit; nature and art conspire to raise it; pleasure and profit join to make it valuable; and they who find the justest faults, have only said, that a few branches (which run luxuriant through a richness of nature) might be lopped into form to give it a more regular appearance.

Having now spoken of the beauties and defects of the original, it remains to treat of the translation, with the same view to the chief characteristic. As far as that is seen in the main parts of the poem, such as the fable, manners, and sentiments, no translator can prejudice it but by wilful omissions or contractions. As it also breaks out in every particular image, description, and simile; whoever lessens or too much softens those, takes off from this chief character. It is the first grand duty of an interpreter to give his author entire and unmaimed; and for the rest, the diction and versification only are his proper province; since these must be his own, but the others he is to take as he finds them.

It should then be considered what methods may afford some equivalent in our language for the graces of these in the Greek. It is certain no literal translation can be just to an excellent original in a superior language: but it is a great mistake to imagine (as many have done) that a rash paraphrase can make amends for this general defect: which is no less in danger to lose the spirit of an ancient, by deviating into the modern manners of expression. If there be sometimes a darkness, there is often a light in antiquity, which nothing better preserves than a version almost literal. I know no liberties one ought to take, but those which are necessary for transfusing the spirit of the original, and supporting the poetical style of the translation: and I will venture to say, there have not been more men misled in former times by a servile dull adherence to the letter, than have been deluded in ours by a chimerical insolent hope of raising and improving their author. It is not to be doubted that the fire of the poem is what a translator should principally regard, as it is most likely to expire in his managing: however, it is his safest way to be content with preserving this to his utmost in the whole, without endeavouring to be more than he finds his author is, in any particular place. It is a great secret in writing to know when to be plain, and when poetical and figurative; and it is what Homer will teach us, if we will but follow modestly in his footsteps. Where his diction is bold and lofty, let us raise ours as high as we can; but where his is plain and humble, we ought not to be deterred from imitating him by the fear of incurring the censure of a mere English critic. Nothing that belongs to Homer seems to have been more commonly mistaken than the just pitch of his style: some of his translators having swelled into fustian in a proud confidence of the sublime; others sunk into flatness in a cold and timorous notion of simplicity. Methinks I see these different followers of Homer, some sweating and straining after him by violent leaps and bounds (the certain signs of false mettle); others slowly and servilely creeping in his train, while the poet himself is all the time proceeding with an unaffected and equal majesty before them. However, of the two extremes one could sooner pardon frenzy than frigidity: no author is to be envied for such commendations as he may gain by that character of style, which his friends must agree together to call simplicity, and the rest of the world will call dulness. There is a graceful and dignified simplicity, as well as a bald and sordid one, which differ as much from each other as the air of a plain man from that of a sloven: it is one thing to be tricked up, and another not to be dressed at all. Simplicity is the mean between ostentation and rusticity.

This pure and noble simplicity is nowhere in such perfection as in the Scripture and our author. One may affirm, with all respect to the inspired writings, that the divine Spirit made use of no other words but what were intelligible and common to men at that time, and in that part of the world; and as Homer is the author nearest to those, his style must of course bear a greater resemblance to the sacred books than that of any other writer. This consideration (together with what has been observed of the parity of some of his thoughts) may, methinks, induce a translator on the one hand to give into several of those general phrases and manners of expression, which have attained a veneration even in our language from being used in the Old Testament; as, on the other, to avoid those which have been appropriated to the Divinity, and in a manner consigned to mystery and religion.

For a farther preservation of this air of simplicity, a particular care should be taken to express with all plainness those moral sentences and proverbial speeches which are so numerous in this poet. They have something venerable, and, as I may say, oracular, in that unadorned gravity and shortness with which they are delivered: a grace which would be utterly lost by endeavouring to give them what we call a more ingenious (that is, a more modern) turn in the paraphrase.

Perhaps the mixture of some Græcisms and old words after the manner of Milton, if done without too much affectation, might not have an ill effect in a version of this particular work, which most of any other seems to require a venerable antique cast. But certainly the use of modern terms of war and government, such as platoon, campaign, junto, or the like (into which some of his translators have fallen), cannot be allowable; those only excepted, without which it is impossible to treat the subjects in any living language.

There are two peculiarities in Homer's diction which are a sort of marks, or moles, by which every common eye distinguishes him at first sight: those who are not his greatest admirers look upon them as defects, and those who are, seem pleased with them as beauties. I speak of his compound epithets, and of his repetitions. Many of the former cannot be done literally into English without destroying the purity of our language. I believe such should be retained as slide easily of themselves into an English compound, without violence to the ear or to the received rules of composition: as well as those which have received a sanction from the authority of our best poets, and are become familiar through their use of them; such as the cloud-compelling Jove, &c. As for the rest, whenever they can be as fully and significantly expressed in a single word as in a compound one, the course to be taken is obvious.

Some that cannot be so turned as to preserve their full image by one or two words, may have justice done them by circumlocution; as the epithet εινόςφυλλος to a mountain, would appear little or ridiculous translated literally leaf-shaking, but affords a majestic idea in the periphrasis: The lofty mountain shakes his waving woods. Others that admit of differing significations, may receive an advantage by a judicious variation according to the occasions on which they are introduced. For example, the epithet of Apollo, ἐκηβόλος, or far-shooting, is capable of two explanations; one literal in respect of the darts and bow, the ensigns of that god; the other allegorical with regard to the rays of the sun: therefore in such places where Apollo is represented as a god in person, I would use the former interpretation, and where the effects of the sun are described, I would make choice of the latter. Upon the whole, it will be necessary to avoid that perpetual repetition of the same epithets which we find in Homer, and which, though it might be accommodated (as has been already shown) to the ear of those times, is by no means so to ours: but one may wait for opportunities of placing them where they derive an additional beauty from the occasions on which they are employed; and in doing this properly, a translator may at once shew his fancy and his judgment.

As for Homer's repetitions, we may divide them into three sorts; of whole narrations and speeches, of single sentences, and of one verse or hemistich. I hope it is not impossible to have such regard to these, as neither to lose so known a mark of the author on the one hand, nor to offend the reader too much on the other. The repetition is not ungraceful in those speeches where the dignity of the speaker renders it a sort of insolence to alter his words; as in the messages from gods to men, or from higher powers to inferiors in concerns of state, or where the ceremonial of religion seems to require it, in the solemn forms of prayers, oaths, or the like. In other cases, I believe the best rule is to be guided by the nearness or distance at which the repetitions are placed in the original: when they follow too close, one may vary the expression, but it is a question whether a professed translator be authorised to omit any; if they be tedious, the author is to answer for it.

It only remains to speak of the versification. Homer (as has been said) is perpetually applying the sound to the sense, and varying it on every new subject. This is indeed one of the most exquisite beauties of poetry, and attainable by very few: I know only of Homer eminent for it in the Greek, and Virgil in Latin. I am sensible it is what may sometimes happen by chance, when a writer is warm, and fully possessed of his image: however, it may reasonably be believed they designed this, in whose verse it so manifestly appears in a superior degree to all others. Few readers have the ear to be judges of it, but those who have, will see. I have endeavoured at this beauty.

Upon the whole, I must confess myself utterly incapable of doing justice to Homer. I attempt him in no other hope but that which one may entertain without much vanity, of giving a more tolerable copy of him than any entire translation in verse has yet done. We have only those of Chapman, Hobbes, and Ogilby. Chapman has taken the advantage of an immeasurable length of verse, notwithstanding which, there is scarce any paraphrase more loose and rambling than his. He has frequent interpolations of four or six lines, and I remember one in the thirteenth book of the Odyssey, ver. 312, where he has spun twenty verses out of two. He is often mistaken in so bold a manner, that one might think he deviated on purpose, if he did not in other places of his notes insist so much upon verbal trifles. He appears to have had a strong affectation of extracting new meanings out of his author, insomuch as to promise, in his rhyming preface, a poem of the mysteries he had revealed in Homer; and perhaps he endeavoured to strain the obvious sense to this end. His expression is involved in confusion; a fault for which he was remarkable in his original writings, as in the tragedy of Bussy d'Amboise, &c. In a word, the nature of the man may account for his whole performance; for he appears from his preface and remarks to have been of an arrogant turn, and an enthusiast in poetry. His own boast of having finished half the Iliad in less than fifteen weeks, shews with what negligence his version was performed. But that which is to be allowed him, and which very much contributed to cover his defects, is a daring fiery spirit that animates his translation, which is something like what one might imagining Homer himself would have writ before he arrived to years of discretion.

Hobbes has given us a correct explanation of the sense in general; but for particulars and circumstances, he continually lops them, and often omits the most beautiful. As for its being esteemed a close translation, I doubt not many have been led into that error by the shortness of it, which proceeds not from his following the original line by line, but from the contractions above mentioned. He sometimes omits whole similes and sentences, and is now and then guilty of mistakes, into which no writer of his learning could have fallen, but through carelessness. His poetry, as well as Ogilby's, is too mean for criticism.

It is a great loss to the poetical world that Mr. Dryden did not live to translate the Iliad. He has left us only the first book, and a small part of the sixth; in which if he has in some places not truly interpreted the sense, or preserved the antiquities, it ought to be excused on account of the haste he was obliged to write in. He seems to have had too much regard to Chapman, whose words he sometimes copies, and has unhappily followed him in passages where he wanders from the original. However, had he translated the whole work, I would no more have attempted Homer after him than Virgil, his version of whom (notwithstanding some human errors) is the most noble and spirited translation I know in any language. But the fate of great geniuses is like that of great ministers; though they are confessedly the first in the commonwealth of letters, they must be envied and calumniated only for being at the head of it.

That which in my opinion ought to be the endeavour of any one who translates Homer, is above all things to keep alive that spirit and fire which makes his chief character: in particular places, where the sense can bear any doubt, to follow the strongest and most poetical, as most agreeing with that character; to copy him in all the variations of his style, and the different modulations of his numbers; to preserve, in the more active or descriptive parts, a warmth and elevation; in the more sedate or narrative, a plainness and solemnity; in the speeches, a fulness and perspicuity; in the sentences, a shortness and gravity: not to neglect even the little figures and turns on the words, nor sometimes the very cast of the periods; neither to omit nor confound any rites or customs of antiquity; perhaps, too, he ought to comprehend the whole in a shorter compass than has hitherto been done by any translator who has tolerably preserved either the sense or poetry. What I would farther recommend to him, is to study his author rather from his own text, than from any commentaries, how learned soever, or whatever figure they may make in the estimation of the world; to consider him attentively in comparison with Virgil above all the ancients, and with Milton above all the moderns. Next these, the Archbishop of Cambray's Telemachus may give him the truest idea of the spirit and turn of our author, and Bossu's admirable treatise of the Epic Poem the justest notion of his design and conduct. But after all, with whatever judgment and study a man may proceed, or with whatever happiness he may perform such a work, he must hope to please but a few; those only who have at once a taste of poetry, and competent learning. For to satisfy such as want either, is not in the nature of this undertaking; since a mere modern wit can like nothing that is not modern, and a pedant nothing that is not Greek.

What I have done is submitted to the public, from whose opinions I am prepared to learn; though I fear no judges so little as our best poets, who are most sensible of the weight of this task. As for the worst, whatever they shall please to say, they may give me some concern as they are unhappy men, but none as they are malignant writers. I was guided in this translation by judgments very different from theirs, and by persons for whom they can have no kindness, if an old observation be true, that the strongest antipathy in the world is that of fools to men of wit. Mr. Addison was the first whose advice determined me to undertake this task; who was pleased to write to me upon that occasion in such terms as I cannot repeat without vanity. I was obliged to Sir Richard Steele for a very early recommendation of my undertaking to the public. Dr. Swift promoted my interest with that warmth with which he always serves his friend. The humanity and frankness of Sir Samuel Garth are what I never knew wanting on any occasion. I must also acknowledge, with infinite pleasure, the many friendly offices, as well as sincere criticisms, of Mr. Congreve, who had led me the way in translating some parts of Homer.* I must add the names of Mr. Rowe and Dr. Parnell, though I shall take a farther opportunity of doing justice to the last, whose good-nature (to give it a great panegyric) is no less extensive than his learning. The favour of these gentlemen is not entirely undeserved by one who bears them so true an affection. But what can I say of the honour so many of the great have done me, while the first names of the age appear as my subscribers, and the most distinguished patrons and ornaments of learning, as my chief encouragers? Among these it is a pain

* The words "as I wish, for the sake of the world, he had prevented me in the rest," were inserted here in the first edition, but subsequently added, apparently from a conviction that no reader would think them sincere.

ticular pleasure to me to find, that my highest obligations are to such who have done most honour to the name of poet: That his grace the Duke of Buckingham was not displeased I should undertake the author to whom he has given (in his excellent Essay) so complete a praise :

Read Homer, once, and you can read no more ;
For all books else appear so mean, so poor,
Verse will seem prose ; but still persists to read
And Homer will be all the books you need :

That the Earl of Halifax was one of the first to favour me, of whom it is hard to say whether the advancement of the polite arts is more owing to his generosity or his example : That such a genius as my Lord Bolingbroke, not more distinguished in the great scenes of business, than in all the useful and entertaining parts of learning, has not refused to be the critic of these sheets, and the patron of their writer : and that the noble author* of the tragedy of Heroic Love has continued his partiality to me, from my writing Pastorals, to my attempting the Iliad. I cannot deny myself the pride of confessing, that I have had the advantage not only of their advice for the conduct in general, but their correction of several particulars of this translation.

I could say a great deal of the pleasure of being distinguished by the Earl of Carnarvon, but it is almost absurd to particularize any one generous action in a person whose whole life is a continued series of them. Mr. Stanhope, the present secretary of state, will pardon my desire of having it known that he was pleased to promote this affair. The particular zeal of Mr. Harcourt (the son of the late Lord Chancellor) gave me a proof how much I am honoured in a share of his friendship. I must attribute to the same motive that of several others of my friends, to whom all acknowledgments are rendered unnecessary by the privileges of a familiar correspondence ; and I am satisfied I can no way better oblige men of their turn than by my silence.

In short, I have found more patrons than ever Homer wanted. He would have thought himself happy to have met the same favour at Athens, that has been shown me by its learned rival, the university of Oxford. And I can hardly envy him those pompous honours he received after death, when I reflect on the enjoyment of so many agreeable obligations, and easy friendships, which make the satisfaction of life. This distinction is the more to be acknowledged, as it is shewn to one whose pen has never gratified the prejudices of particular parties, or the vanities of Whatever the success may prove, I shall never repent of an undertaking in which I have experienced the candour and friendship of so many persons of merit ; and in which I hope to pass* some of those years of youth that are generally lost in a circle of follies, after a manner neither wholly unuseful to others, nor disagreeable to myself.

BOOK I.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE CONTENTION OF ACHILLES AND AGAMEMNON.

In the war of Troy, the Greeks having sacked some of the neighbouring towns, and taking from thence two beautiful captives, Chryseïs and Briseïs, allotted the first to Agamemnon, and the last to Achilles. Chryses, the father of Chryseïs, and priest of Apollo, comes to the Grecian camp to ransom her; with which the action of the poem opens, in the tenth year of the siege. The priest being refused and insolently dismissed by Agamemnon, entreats for vengeance from his god, who inflicts a pestilence on the Greeks. Achilles calls a council, and encourages Chalcas to declare the cause of it, who attributes it to the refusal of Chryseïs. The king being obliged to send back his captive, enters into a furious contest with Achilles, which Nestor pacifies; however, as he had the absolute command of the army, he seizes on Briseïs in revenge. Achilles in discontent withdraws himself and his forces from the rest of the Greeks; and complaining to Thetis, she supplicates Jupiter to render them sensible of the wrong done to her son, by giving victory to the Trojans. Jupiter granting her suit, incenses Juno, between whom the debate runs high, till they are reconciled by the address of Vulcan. The time of two-and-twenty days is taken up in this book; nine during the plague, one in the council and quarrel of the Princes, and twelve for Jupiter's stay with the Ethiopians, at whose return Thetis prefers her petition. The scene lies in the Grecian camp, then changes to Chrysa, and lastly to Olympus.

ACHILLES' wrath, to Greece the direful spring
Of woes unnumber'd, heavenly Goddess, sing!
The wrath which hurl'd to Pluto's gloomy reign,
The souls of mighty chiefs untimely slain:
Whose limbs, unburied on the naked shore,
Devouring dogs and hungry vultures tore:

Since great Achilles and Atreides strove,
 Such was the sovereign doom, and such the will of Jove !
 Declare, O Muse ! in what ill fated-hour
 Sprung the fierce strife, from what offended power ? 10
 Latona's son<sup>1</sup> a dire contagion spread,
 And heap'd the camp with mountains of the dead ;
 The king of men<sup>2</sup> his reverend priest defied,
 And, for the king's offence, the people died.
 For Chryses<sup>3</sup> sought with costly gifts to gain 15
 His captive daughter from the victor's chain.
 Suppliant the venerable father stands ;
 Apollo's awful ensigns grace his hands :
 By these he begs : and, lowly bending down,
 Extends the sceptre and the laurel crown. 20
 He sued to all, but chief implor'd for grace
 The brother-kings<sup>4</sup> of Atreus' royal race :
 ' Ye kings and warriors ! may your vows be crown'd
 ' And Troy's proud walls lie level with the ground ;
 ' May Jove restore you, when your toils are o'er, 25
 ' Safe to the pleasures of your native shore.
 ' But oh ! relieve a wretched parent's pain,
 ' And give Chryseis to these arms again ;
 ' If mercy fail, yet let my presents move,
 ' And dread avenging Phoebus, son of Jove.' 30
 The Greeks in shouts their joint assent declare,
 The priest to reverence, and release the fair.
 Not so Atreides : he, with kingly pride,
 Repuls'd the sacred sire, and thus replied :
 ' Hence on thy life, and fly these hostile plains, 35
 ' Nor ask, presumptuous, what the king detains :
 ' Hence, with thy laurel crown, and golden rod,
 ' Nor trust too far those ensigns of thy god.
 ' Mine is thy daughter, priest, and shall remain ;
 ' And prayers, and tears, and bribes, shall plead in vain ; 40
 ' Till time shall rob every youthful grace,
 ' And age dismiss her from my cold embrace,

'In daily labours of the loom employ'd,
'Or doom'd to deck the bed she once enjoy'd,
'Hence then! to Argos shall the maid retire)
'Far from her native soil, and weeping sire.

The trembling priest along the shore return'd
And in the anguish of a father mourn'd.

Disconsolate, not daring to complain,

Silent he wander'd by the sounding main,

50

Till, safe at distance, to his god he prays,

The god who darts around the world his rays.

'Thou guardian power of Cilla<sup>6</sup> the divine,

'Thou source of light! whom Tenedos adores,

55

'And whose bright presence gilds thy Chrysa's shores;

'If e'er with wreaths I hung thy sacred fane,

'Or fed the flames with fat of oxen slain;

'God of the silver bow! thy shafts employ,

'Avenge thy servant, and the Greeks destroy.'

Thus Chryses pray'd: the fav'ring power attends,
And from Olympus' lofty tops descends.

Bent was his bow, the Grecian hearts to wound;

Fierce as he mov'd, his silver shafts resound.

Breathing revenge, a sudden night he spread,

And gloomy darkness roll'd around his head.

The fleet in view, he twang'd his deadly bow,

And hissing fly the feather'd fates below.

On mules and dogs<sup>7</sup> th' infection first began;

And last, the vengeful arrows fix'd in man.

For nine long nights, through all the dusky air

The pyres thick-flaming shot a dismal glare.

But ere the tenth revolving day was run,

Inspir'd by Juno, Thetis' god-like son

Conven'd to council all the Grecian train;<sup>8</sup>

For much the goddess mourn'd her heroes slain.<sup>9</sup>

<sup>8</sup> Achilles, it appears, had, as one of the principal leaders, the right of calling a public assembly; he does so on another occasion, B. xix. 36. sq. <sup>9</sup> The goddess had two reasons for her partiality to the Greeks first, because she was in such high repute in Argos, that the whole country

Th' assembly seated, rising o'er the rest,
 Achilles thus the king of men address'd :
 ' Why leave we not the fatal Trojan shore,
 ' And measure back the seas we cross'd before ? 80
 ' The plague destroying whom the sword would spare,
 ' 'Tis time to save the few remains of war.
 ' But let some prophet or some sacred sage,
 ' Explore the cause of great Apollo's rage ;
 ' Or learn the wasteful vengeance to remove 85
 ' By mystic dreams, for dreams descend from Jove.
 ' If broken vows this heavy curse have laid,
 ' Let altars smoke, and hecatombs be paid.
 ' So heaven aton'd shall dying Greece restore,
 ' And Phœbus dart his burning shafts no more.' 90
 He said, and sat : when Chalcas thus replied
 Chalcas the wise, the Grecian priest and guide,
 That sacred seer, whose comprehensive view
 The past, the present, and the future knew :
 Uprising slow the venerable sage 95
 Thus spoke the prudence and the fears of age :
 ' Belov'd of Jove, Achilles ! would'st thou know
 ' Why angry Phœbus bends his fatal bow ?
 ' First give thy faith, and plight a prince's word
 ' Of sure protection, by thy pow'r and sword, 100
 ' For I must speak what wisdom would conceal,
 ' And truths, invidious to the great, reveal.
 ' Bold is the task, when subjects, grown too wise,
 ' Instruct a monarch where his error lies ;
 ' For though we deem the short-liv'd fury past, 105
 ' 'Tis sure, the mighty will revenge at last.
 To whom Pelides. ' From thy inmost soul
 ' Speak what thou know'st, and speak without control.
 ' Ev'n by that god I swear, who rules the day,
 ' To whom thy hands the vows of Greece convey, 110
 ' And whose blest oracles thy lips declare ;
 ' Long as Achilles breathes this vital air,
 ' No daring Greek, of all the numerous band,
 ' Against his priest shall lift an impious hand :
 ' Not ev'n the chief by whom our hosts are led, 115
 ' The king of kings, shall touch that sacred head.'
 Encouraged thus, the blameless man replies :
 ' For vows unpaid, nor slighted sacrifice,

said to be her temple : secondly, because Paris had decided against her as the best candidate with Minerva and Venus for the prize of beauty.
 Minerva on the latter account patronised them also. Cowper.

' But he, our chief, provok'd the raging pest,
 ' Apollo's vengeance for his injured priest. 120
 ' No! will the god's awaken'd fury cease,
 ' But plagues shall spread, and funeral fires increase,
 ' Till the great king, without a ransom paid,
 ' To her own Chrysa send the black-ey'd maid.
 ' Perhaps, with add'd sacrifice and prayer, 125
 ' The priest may pardon, and the god may spare.
 ' The prophet spoke; when, with a gloomy frown,
 ' The monarch started from his shining throne;
 ' Black choler fill'd his breast that boil'd with ire,
 ' And from his eyeballs flash'd the living fire. 130
 ' Augur accurs'd! denouncing mischief still,
 ' Prophet of plagues, for ever boding ill!
 ' Still must that tongue some wounding message bring,
 ' And still thy priestly pride provoke thy king?
 ' For this are Phœbus' oracles explor'd, 135
 ' To teach the Greeks to murmur at their lord?
 ' For this with falsehoods is my honour stain'd;
 ' Is heaven offended, and a priest profan'd,
 ' Because my prize, my beauteous maid, I hold,
 ' And heav'nly charms prefer to proffer'd gold? 140
 ' A maid, unmatched in manners as in face,
 ' Skill'd in each art, and crown'd with every grace
 ' Not half so dear were Clytemnestra's charms,
 ' When first her blooming beauties bless'd my arms.
 ' Yet, if the gods demand her, let her sail; 145
 ' Our cares are only for the public weal:
 ' Let me be deem'd the hateful cause of all,
 ' And suffer, rather than my people fall.
 ' The prize, the beauteous prize, I will resign,
 ' So dearly valued, and so justly mine. 150
 ' But since for common good I yield the fair,
 ' My private loss let grateful Greece repair;
 ' Nor unrewarded let your prince complain,
 ' That he alone has fought and bled in vain.
 ' 'Insatiate king!' (Achilles thus replies) 155
 ' Fond of the pow'r, but fonder of the prize!<sup>10</sup>
 ' Wouldst thou the Greeks their lawful prey should yield,
 ' The due reward of many a well-fought field?

<sup>10</sup> Covetousness was one of the vices in Agamemnon's character. The poet reproaches him with it, B. ii. 289, seq.; and Mercury, B. xxiv. 854, &c. Priam, when he goes to beg Hector's body of Achilles, not to linger too long within the Grecian camp, lest Agamemnon should make him prisoner, and exact a large sum for his ransom.

' The spoils of cities raz'd, and warriors slain,
 ' We share with justice, as with toil we gain : 160
 ' But to resume what'er thy avarice craves,
 ' (That trick of tyrants) may be borne by slaves.
 ' Yet if our chief for plunder only fight,
 ' The spoils of Ilion shall thy loss requite,
 ' Whene'er, by Jove's decree, our conqu'ring pow'rs 165
 ' Shall humble to the dust her lofty tow'rs.
 Then thus the king. ' Shall I my prize resign
 ' With tame content, and thou possess'd of thine ?
 ' Great as thou art, and like a god in fight,
 ' Think not to rob me of a soldier's right. 170
 ' At thy demand shall I restore the maid ?
 ' First let the just equivalent be paid ;
 ' Such as a king might ask, and let it be
 ' A treasure worthy her, and worthy me.
 ' Or grant me this, or with a monarch's claim 175
 ' This hand shall seize some other captive dame.
 ' The mighty Ajax shall his prize resign,
 ' Ulysses' spoils, or e'en thy own be mine.
 ' The man who suffers, loudly may complain ;
 ' And rage he may, but he shall rage in vain. 180
 ' But this when time requires. It now remains
 ' We launch a bark to plough the Cretan plains,
 ' And waft the sacrifice to Crete's shores,
 ' With chosen pilots, and with lab'ring oars.
 ' Soon shall the fair the sable ship ascend, 185
 ' And some deputed prince the charge attend.
 ' This Creta's king, or Ajax shall fulfil ;
 ' Or wise Ulysses see perform'd our will ;
 ' Or, if our royal pleasure shall ordain,
 ' Achilles' self conduct her o'er the main ; 190
 ' Let fierce Achilles, dreadful in his rage,
 ' The god propitiate, and the pest assuage.
 At this, Pelides, frowning stern, replied :
 ' O tyrant, arm'd with insolence and pride !
 ' Inglorious slave to interest, ever join'd 195
 ' With fraud, unworthy of a royal mind !
 ' What gen'rous Greek, obedient to thy word,
 ' Shall form an ambush, or shall lift the sword ?

I think the legal pretence for Agamemnon's seizing Briseis must have been founded upon that law whereby the commander-in-chief had the right of taking what part of the prey he pleased for his own use ; and he was obliged to restore what he had taken, it seemed but just that he should have a second choice. Pope. Comp. v. 245, seq.

'What cause have I to war at thy decree?
 'The distant Trojans never injured me : 200
 'To Phthia's realms no hostile troops they led ;
 'Safe in her vales my warlike coursers fed ;
 'Far hence remov'd, the hoarse-resounding main,
 'And walls of rocks, secure my native reign,
 'Whose fruitful soil luxuriant harvests grace, 205
 'Rich in her fruits, and in her martial race.
 'Hither we sail'd, a voluntary throng,
 'To avenge a private, not a public wrong :
 'What else to Troy th' assembled nations draws,
 'But thine, ungrateful, and thy brother's cause ? 210
 'Is this the pay our blood and toils deserve,
 'Disgraced and injur'd by the man we serve ?
 'And dar'st thou threat to snatch my prize away,
 'Due to the deeds of many a dreadful day ?
 'A prize as small, O tyrant ! match'd with thine, 215
 'As thy own actions if compared to mine,
 'Thine in each conquest is the wealthy prey,
 'Though mine the sweat and danger of the day.
 'Some trivial present to my ships I bear,
 'Or barren praises pay the wounds of war. 220
 'But know, proud monarch, I'm thy slave no more :
 'My fleet shall waft me to Thessalia's shore.
 'Left by Achilles on the Trojan plain,
 'What spoils, what conquests, shall Atrides gain ?
 'To this the king : 'Fly, mighty warrior ! fly, 225
 'Thy aid we need not, and thy threats defy :
 'There want not chiefs in such a cause to fight,
 'And Jove himself shall guard a monarch's right.
 'Of all the kings (the gods' distinguish'd care)
 'To pow'r superior none such hatred bear ; 230
 'Strife and debate thy restless soul employ,
 'And wars and horrors are thy savage joy.
 'If thou hast strength, 'twas Heaven that strength bestow'd,
 'For know, vain man ! thy valour is from God.
 'Haste, launch thy vessels, fly with speed away, 235
 'Rule thy own realms with arbitrary sway :
 'I heed thee not, but prize at equal rate
 'Thy short-liv'd friendship, and thy groundless hate.
 'Go, threat thy earth-born Myrmidons ;<sup>12</sup> but here
 'Tis mine to threaten, prince, and thine to fear.

<sup>12</sup> The Myrmidons are said to have been ants changed by Jupiter, into men, in order that Thessaly, in which they lived, might not be without inhabitants when his son Æacus was made king of it. Hygin. Fab. 62.

' Know, if the god the beauteous dame demand,
 ' My bark shall waft her to her native land ;
 ' But then prepare, imperious prince ! prepare,
 ' Fierce as thou art, to yield thy captive fair ;
 ' E'en in thy tent I'll seize the blooming prize, 245
 ' Thy lov'd Briseis, with the radiant eyes.
 ' Hence shalt thou prove my might, and curs'd the hour,
 ' Thou stood'st a rival of imperial pow'r ;
 ' And hence to all our host it shall be known
 ' That kings are subject to the gods alone.' 250
 Achilles heard, with grief and rage oppress'd ;
 His heart swell'd high, and labour'd in his breast.
 Distracting thoughts by turns his bosom rul'd,
 Now fir'd by wrath, and now by reason cool'd :
 ' That prompts his hand to draw the deadly sword, 255
 Force thro' the Greeks, and pierce their haughty lord ;
 This whispers soft, his vengeance to control,
 And calm the rising tempest of his soul.
 Just as in anguish of suspense he stay'd,
 While half unsheath'd appear'd the glitt'ring blade, 260
 Minerva swift descended from above,
 Sent by the sister<sup>13</sup> and the wife of Jove ;
 (For both the princes claim'd her equal care ;)
 Behind she stood, and by the golden hair
 Achilles seiz'd ; to him alone confess'd ; 265
 A sable cloud conceal'd her from the rest.
 He sees, and sudden to the goddess cries,
 (Known by the flames that sparkle from her eyes :)
 ' Descends Minerva, in her guardian care,
 ' A heav'nly witness of the wrongs I bear 270
 ' From Atreus' son ? Then let those eyes that view
 ' The daring crime, behold the vengeance too.'
 ' Forbear !' (the progeny of Jove replies)
 ' To calm thy fury I forsake the skies :
 ' Let great Achilles, to the gods resign'd, 275
 ' To reason yield the empire o'er his mind.
 ' By awful Juno this command is giv'n ;
 ' The king and you are both the care of heav'n.
 ' The force of keen reproaches let him feel,
 ' But sheath, obedient, thy revenging steel. 280
 ' For I pronounce (and trust a heav'nly pow'r)
 ' Thy injur'd honour has its fated hour,
 ' When the proud monarch shall thy arms implore,
 ' And bribe thy friendship with a boundless store.

- 'Then let revenge no longer bear the sway,
 'Command thy passions, and the gods obey.'
 To her Pelides: 'With regardful ear,
 'Tis just. O goddess! I thy dictates hear.
 'Hard as it is, my vengeance I suppress:
 'Those who revere the gods, the gods will bless.'
 He said, observant of the blue-ey'd maid;
 They in the sheath return'd the shining blade.
 The goddess swift to high Olympus flies,
 And joins the sacred senate of the skies.
 Nor yet the rage his boiling breast forsook,
 Which thus redoubling on Atrides broke:
 'O monster! mix'd of insolence and fear,
 'Thou dog in forehead, but in heart a deer!
 'When wert thou known in ambush'd fights to dare,
 'Or nobly face the horrid front of war?
 'Tis ours, the chance of fighting fields to try,
 'Thine to look on, and bid the valiant die,
 'So much 'tis safer through the camp to go,
 'And rob a subject, than despoil a foe.
 'Scourge of thy people, violent and base!
 'Sent in Jove's anger on a slavish race,
 'Who, lost to sense of generous freedom past,
 'Are torn to wrongs, or this had been thy last.
 'Now by this sacred sceptre hear me swear,
 'Which never more shall leaves or blossoms bear,
 'Which, sever'd from the trunk (as I from thee)
 'On the bare mountains left its parent tree;
 'This sceptre, form'd by temper'd steel to prove
 'An ensign of the delegates of Jove,
 'From whom the pow'r of laws and justice springs:
 '(Tremendous oath! inviolate to kings:)
 'By this I swear, when bleeding Greece again
 'Shall call Achilles, she shall call in vain.
 When, flush'd with slaughter, Hector comes to spread
 The purpled shore with mountains of the dead,
 'Then shalt thou mourn th' affront thy madness gave,
 Forced to deplore, when impotent to save:
 'Then rage in bitterness of soul to know
 'This act has made the bravest Greek thy foe.'
 He spoke; and furious hurl'd against the ground
 His sceptre starr'd with golden studs around;
 Then sternly silent sat. With like disdain,
 The raging king return'd his frowns again.
 To calm their passion with the words of age,
 Slow from his seat arose the Pylian sage,

Experienc'd Nestor, in persuasion skill'd ;
 Words sweet as honey from his lips distill'd :
 Two generations<sup>15</sup> now had pass'd away,
 Wise by his rules, and happy by his sway ;
 Two ages o'er his native realm he reign'd, 335
 And now th' example of the third remain'd.
 All view'd with awe the venerable man ;
 Who thus, with mild benevolence, began :
 ' What shame, what woe is this to Greece ! what joy
 ' To Troy's proud monarch, and the friends of Troy ! 340,
 ' That adverse gods commit to stern debate
 ' The best, the bravest of the Grecian state.
 ' Young as you are, this youthful heat restrain,
 ' Nor think your Nestor's years and wisdom vain.
 ' A godlike race of heroes, once I knew, 345
 ' Such as no more these aged eyes shall view !
 ' Lives there a chief to match Pirithous<sup>16</sup> fame,
 ' Dryas the bold, or Ceneus' deathless name ;
 ' Theseus, endued with more than mortal might,
 ' Or Polyphemus, like the gods in fight ? 350
 ' With these of old to toils of battle bred,
 ' In early youth my hardy days I led ;
 ' Fir'd with the thirst, which virtuous envy breeds,
 ' And smit with love of honourable deeds.
 ' Strongest of men, they pierced the mountain boar, 355
 ' Ranged the wild deserts red with monsters' gore,
 ' And from their hills the slaggish Centaurs tore.
 ' Yet these with soft persuasive arts I sway'd ;
 ' When Nestor spoke, they listen'd and obey'd.
 ' If in my youth, e'en these esteem'd me wise, 360
 ' Do you, young warriors, hear my age advice.
 ' Atrides, seize not on the beauteous slave ;
 ' That prize the Greeks by common suffrage gave :
 ' Nor thou, Achilles, treat our prince with pride ;
 ' Let kings be just, and sov'reign pow'r preside : 365
 ' Thee, the first honours of the war adorn,
 ' Like gods in strength, and of a goddess born ;

<sup>15</sup> A generation, in the common computation, is thirty years ; he was, therefore, about ninety years of age.

<sup>16</sup> Pirithous was a native of Athens, who lived among the Centaurs, and, when he married Hippodamia, invited them to his wedding feast. As they misconducted themselves, a quarrel ensued between them and the Lapithæ, who killed many of them, and drove the rest to Malea, a promontory off Peloponnesus. Ceneus was king of the Lapithæ, among whom Polyphemus was a leader, and, perhaps, Dryas ; unless the Dryas is to be understood among the hunters of the Calydonian boar be met

'Him, awful majesty exalts above
 'The pow'rs of earth, and sceptred sons of Jove.
 'Let both unite with well-consenting mind, 370
 'So shall authority with strength be join'd.
 'Leave me, O king! to calm Achilles' rage;
 'Run, thou thyself, as more advanced in age.
 'Forbid it gods! Achilles should be lost,
 'The pride of Greece, and bulwark of our host.' 375
 This said, he ceas'd: the king of men replies;
 'Thy years are awful, and thy words are wise.
 'But that imperious, that unconquer'd soul,
 'No laws can limit, no respect control:
 'Before his pride must his superiors fall, 380
 'His word the law, and he the lord of all?
 'Him must our hosts, our chiefs, ourself obey?
 'What king can bear a rival in his sway?
 'Grant that the gods his matchless force have giv'n;
 'Has foul reproach a privilege from heav'n?' 385
 Here on the monarch's speech Achilles broke,
 And furious, thus, and interrupting, spoke:
 'Tyrant, I well deserv'd thy galling chain,
 'To live thy slave, and still to serve in vain,
 'Should I submit to each unjust decree: 390
 'Command thy vassals, but command not me.
 'Seize on Briseis, whom the Grecians doom'd
 'My prize of war, yet tamely see resum'd;
 'And seize secure; no more Achilles draws
 'His conqu'ring sword in any woman's cause. 395
 'The gods command me to forgive the past;
 'But let this first invasion be the last:
 'For know, thy blood, when next thou dar'st invade,
 'Shall stream in vengeance on my reeking blade.'
 At this they ceas'd; the stern debate expir'd: 400
 The chiefs in sullen majesty retir'd.
 Achilles with Patroclus took his way,
 Where near his tents his hollow vessels lay.
 Mean time Atrides launch'd with numerous oars
 A well-rigg'd ship for Chrysa's sacred shores: 405
 High on the deck was fair Chryseis plac'd,
 And sage Ulysses with the conduct grac'd:
 Safe in her sides the hecatomb they stow'd,
 Then, swiftly sailing, cut the liquid road.
 The host to expiate, next the king prepares, 410:
 With pure lustrations and with solemn pray'rs.
 Wash'd by the briny wave, the pious train
 Are cleans'd; and cast th' ablutions in the main.

Along the shores whole hecatombs were laid,
 And bulls and goats to Phœbus' altars paid. 415
 The sable fumes in curling spires arise,
 And waft their grateful odours to the skies.

The army thus its sacred rites engaged,
 Atrides still with deep resentment raged.
 To wait his will two sacred heralds stood, 420
 Talthybius and Eurybates the good.

'Haste to the fierce Achilles' tent,' (he cries,)
 'Thence bear Briseïs as our royal prize :
 'Submit he must ; or, if they will not part,
 'Ourself in arms shall tear her from his heart.' 425

Th' unwilling heralds act their lord's commands ;
 Pensive they walk along the barren sands :
 Arriv'd, the hero in his tent they find,
 With gloomy aspect, on his arm reclin'd. 430

At awful distance long they silent stand,
 Loth to advance, or speak their hard command ;
 Decent confusion ! This the godlike man
 Perceiv'd, and thus with accent mild began :

'With leave and honour enter our abodes,
 'Ye sacred ministers of men and gods ! 435

'I know your message ; by constraint you came ;
 'Not you, but your imperious lord, I blame.

'Patroclus, haste, the fair Briseïs bring ;
 'Conduct my captive to the haughty king.

'But witness, heralds, and proclaim my vow, 440
 'Witness to gods above, and men below !

'But first, and loudest, to your prince declare,
 'That lawless tyrant whose commands you bear ;

'Unmov'd as death Achilles shall remain,
 'Though prostrate Greece should bleed at every vein : 445

'The raging chief in frantic passion lost,
 'Blind to himself, and useless to his host,

'Unskill'd to judge the future by the past,
 'In blood and slaughter shall repent at last.'

Patroclus now th' unwilling beauty brought ;
 She, in soft sorrows, and in pensive thought,
 Pass'd silent, as the heralds held her hand,
 And oft look'd back, slow-moving o'er the strand.

Not so his loss the fierce Achilles bore ;
 But sad retiring to the sounding shore, 450
 O'er the wild margin of the deep he hung,
 That kindred deep from whence his mother sprung ;
 There, joath'd in tears of anger and disdain,
 Thus loud lamented to the stormy main :

O parent goddess! since in early bloom
 Thy son must fall, by too severe a doom;<sup>17</sup>
 Sure, to so short a race of glory born,
 Great Jove in justice should this span adorn.
 Honour and fame at least the Thunderer owed;
 And ill he pays the promise of a god.
 If yon proud monarch thus thy son defies,
 Obscures my glories, and resumes my prize.
 Far in the deep recesses of the main,
 Where aged Ocean holds his watery reign,
 The goddess-mother<sup>18</sup> heard. The waves divide;
 And like a mist she rose above the tide;
 Beheld him mourning on the naked shores,
 And thus the sorrows of his soul explores:
 Why grieves my son? thy anguish let me share,
 Reveal the cause, and trust a parent's care.
 He deeply sighing said: 'To tell my woe,
 Is but to mention what too well you know.
 From Thebè,<sup>19</sup> sacred to Apollo's name, (Ætión's<sup>19</sup> realm,) our conqu'ring army came,
 With treasure loaded and triumphant spoils.
 Whose just division crown'd the soldier's toils;
 But bright Chryseis, heav'nly prize! was led
 By vote selected to the general's bed.
 The priest of Phœbus sought by gifts to gain
 His beauteous daughter from the victor's chain;
 The fleet he reach'd, and, lowly bending down,
 Held forth the sceptre and the laurel crown,
 Entreating all; but chief implor'd for grace
 The brother-kings of Atreus' royal race:
 The gen'rous Greeks their joint consent declare,
 The priest to reverence, and release the fair.
 Not so Atreides: he, with wonted pride,
 The sire insulted, and his gifts denied:
 Th' insulted sire (his god's peculiar care)
 To Phœbus pray'd, and Phœbus heard the pray'r:

17 This alludes to a story which Achilles tells the ambassadors of Agamemnon, II. ix., that he had the choice of two fates; one, less glorious, at home, but blessed with a very long life; the other full of glory at Troy, but then he was never to return. . Pope.

<sup>18</sup> His mother was Thetis, a sea-nymph, whose hand had been sought by Jupiter and Neptune; but as it was fated that she should have a son more powerful than his father, it was resolved to marry her to a mortal, and she accordingly became the wife of Pelous. Conquer.

19. Pope incorrectly writes Aëtior.

' A dreadful plague ensues; th' avenging darts
 ' Incessant fly, and pierce the Grecian hearts.
 ' A prophet then, inspir'd by heaven, arose,
 ' And points the crime, and thence derives the woes :
 ' Myself the first th' assembled chiefs incline 500
 ' T' avert the vengeance of the pow'r divine ;
 ' Then, rising in his wrath, the monarch storm'd ;
 ' Incens'd he threaten'd, and his threats perform'd .
 ' The fair Chryseis to her sire was sent,
 ' With offer'd gifts to make the god relent . . . 505
 ' But now he seiz'd Briseis' heavenly charms,
 ' And of my valour's prize defrauds my arms,
 ' Defrauds the votes of all the Grecian train ;<sup>20</sup>
 ' And service, faith, and justice, plead in vain.
 ' But, goddess ! thou thy suppliant son attend, 510
 ' To high Olympus' shining court ascend,
 ' Urge all the ties to former service ow'd,
 ' And sue for vengeance to the thundering god.
 ' Oft hast thou triump'd in the glorious boast
 ' That thou stood'st forth, of all the ethereal host,<sup>21</sup> 515
 ' When bold rebellion shook the realms above,
 ' Th' undaunted guard of cloud-compelling Jove.
 ' When the bright partner of his awful reign,
 ' The warlike maid, and monarch of the main,
 ' The traitor-gods, by mad ambition driv'n, 520
 ' Durs't threat with chains th' omnipotence of heav'n.
 ' Then call'd by thee, the monster Titan came ;
 ' (Whom gods Briareus, men Ægeon name ;)
 ' Through wondering skies enormous stalk'd along ;
 ' Not he<sup>22</sup> that shakes the solid earth so strong : 525
 ' With giant-pride at Jove's high throne he stands,
 ' And brandish'd round him all his hundred hands.
 ' Th' affrighted gods confess'd their awful lord,
 ' They dropp'd the fetters, trembled and ador'd.

<sup>21</sup> Jupiter, having acquired supremacy in heaven, made an exorbitant use of his power, and treated the other gods with much haughtiness. A sedition among them was the consequence, and a conspiracy to bind him. But Thetis, apprised of their intentions by her father Nereus, hastened to the aid of Jupiter, attended by Ægeon, who terrified them from their purpose. Jupiter, learning the particulars of this cabal from Thetis, suspended Juno by the wrists, commanded Neptune and Apollo to work for Laomedon, and, in recompense of such signal service rendered him by Thetis, transferred on her son Achilles the honour of complete vengeance for the injury done him by Agamemnon. Achilles, in this passage desiring the punishment of the Grecians, very artfully reminds his mother, that those deities who now assist them had formerly been confederated against Jupiter.

'This, goddess, this to his rememb'rance call,
 530 Embrace his knees, at his tribunal fall;
 'Conjere him far to drive the Grecian train,
 'To hurl them headlong to their fleet and main,
 'To heap the shores with copious death, and bring
 'The Greeks to know the curse of such a king :
 535 'Let Agamemnon lift his haughty head
 'O'er all his wide dominion of the dead,
 'And mourn in blood, that e'er he durst disgrace
 'The boldest warrior of the Grecian race.'
 'Unhappy son !' (fau Thetis thus replies, While tears celestial trickle from her eyes,)
 'Why have I borne thee with a mother's throes,
 'To fates averse, and nurs'd for future wogs ?
 'So short a space the light of heav'n to view !
 'So short a space ! and fill'd with sorrow too !
 545 'O might a parent's careful wish prevail,
 'Far, far from Ilion should thy vessels sail,
 'And thou, from camps remote, the danger shun,
 'Which now, alas ! too nearly threatens my son.
 'Yet (what I can) to move thy suit I'll go
 550 'To great Olympus crown'd with fleecy snow.
 'Meantime, secure within thy ships from far
 'Behold the field, nor mingle in the war.
 'The sire of gods, and all th' etherial train,
 'On the warm limits of the farthest main,
 555 'Now mix with mortals, nor disdain to grace
 'The feasts of Æthiopia's blameless race :<sup>23</sup>
 'Twelve days the pow'rs indulge the genial rite,
 'Returning with the twelfth revolving light.
 'Then will I mount the brazen dome, and move
 560 'The high tribunal of immortal Jove.'
 'The goddess spoke : the rolling waves uncloze ;
 Then down the deep she plunged, from whence she rose,
 And left him sorrowing on the lonely coast
 In wild resentment for the fair he lost.
 565 In Chrysa's port now sage Ulysses rode ;
 Beneath the deck the destin'd victims stow'd :
 The sails they furl'd, they lash'd the mast aside.
 And dropp'd their anchors, and the pinnace tied.
 Next on the shore their hecatomb they land,
 570 Chryseis last descending on the strand.

<sup>23</sup> The Æthiopians, says Diodorus, l. iii., are said to be the inventors of
 pomps, sacrifices, solemn meetings, and other honours paid to the gods.
 From hence arose their character of piety which is here celebrated. P.

Her, thus returning from the furrow'd main,
 Ulysses led to Phœbus' sacred fane;
 Where at his solemn altar, as the maid
 He gave to Chryses, thus the hero said : 575
 ' Hail, reverend priest ! to Phœbus' awful dome
 ' A suppliant I from great Atrides come :
 ' Unransom'd here receive the spotless fair ;
 ' Accept the hecatomb the Greeks prepare ;
 ' And may thy god-who scatters darts around, 580
 ' Aton'd by sacrifice, desist to wound.'
 At this the sire embraced the maid again,
 So sadly lost, so lately sought in vain.
 Then near the altar of the darting king,
 Dispos'd in rank their hecatomb they bring : 585
 With water purify their hands, and take
 The sacred offering of the salted cake ;<sup>24</sup>
 While thus with arms devoutly raised in air,
 And solemn voice, the priest directs his prayer :
 ' God of the silver bow, thy ear incline, 590
 ' Whose power encircles Cilla the divine ;
 ' Whose sacred eye thy Tenedos surveys,
 ' And gilds fair Chrysa with distinguish'd rays !
 ' If, fir'd to vengeance at thy priest's request,
 ' Thy direful darts inflict the raging pest ; 595
 ' Once more attend ! avert the wasteful woe,
 ' And smile propitious, and unbend thy bow.'
 So Chryses pray'd, Apollo heard his prayer :
 And now the Greeks their hecatomb prepare ;
 Between their horns the salted barley threw, 600
 And with their heads to heaven the victims slew :<sup>24*</sup>
 The limbs they sever from th' inclosing hide ;
 The thighs, selected to the gods, divide :
 On these, in double cauls involv'd with art,
 The choicest morsels lay from every part. 605
 The priest himself before his altar stands,
 And burns the offering with his holy hands,
 Pours the black wine, and sees the flame aspire ;
 The youths with instruments surround the fire :

<sup>24*</sup> Their heads were turned to heaven, as being offered to the celestial gods ; such as were offered to the infernal deities were sacrificed with their heads turned downwards.

The thighs thus sacrificed, and entrails drest, 610
 The assistants part, transfix, and roast the rest :
 Then spread the tables, the repast prepare,
 Each takes his seat, and each receives his share.
 When now the rage of hunger was repress'd,
 With pure libations they conclude the feast ; 615
 The youths with wine the copious goblets crown'd,<sup>26</sup>
 And, pleas'd dispense the flowing bowls around.
 With hymns divine the joyous banquet ends,
 The Paeans lengthen'd till the sun descends :
 The Greeks, restor'd, the grateful notes prolong : 620
 Apollo listens, and approves the song.
 'Twas night ; the chiefs beside their vessel lie,
 Till rosy morn had purpl'd o'er the sky :
 Then launch, and hoist the mast ; indulgent gales
 Supplied by Phœbus, fill the swelling sails ; 625
 The milk-white canvas bellying as they blow,
 The parted ocean foams and roars below :
 Above the bounding billows swift they flew,
 Till now the Grecian camp appear'd in view.
 Far on the beach they haul their barks to land, 630
 (The crooked keel divides the yellow sand.)
 Then part, where stretch'd along the winding bay
 The ships and tents in mingled prospect lay.
 But, raging still, amidst his navy sat
 The stern Achilles, steadfast in his hate ; 635
 Nor mix'd in combat, nor in council join'd ;
 But wasting cares lay heavy on his mind :
 In his black thoughts revenge and slaughter roll,
 And scenes of blood rise dreadful in his soul.
 Twelve days were past, and now the dawning light 640
 The gods had summon'd to th' Olympian height :
 Jove, first ascending from the watery bowers,<sup>27</sup>
 Leads the long order of ethereal powers.
 When like the morning mist, in early day,
 Rose from the flood the daughter of the sea ; 645
 And to the seats divine her flight address'd.
 There, far apart, and high above the rest,

Jove at their head ascending from the sea :

whereas Homer had only said that Jupiter was gone towards the ocean on a visit to the Ethiopians, who are said in the Odyssey, I. 27. to be the remotest of mankind !

The Thunderer sat ; where old Olympus shrouds
His hundred heads in heaven, and props the clouds.
Suppliant the goddess stood : one hand she placed
Beneath his beard, and one his knees embraced.

' If e'er, O father of the gods !' she said,
' My words could please thee, or my actions aid ;
' Some marks of honour on thy son bestow,
' And pay in glory what in life you owe.

' Fame is at least by heavenly promise due
' To life so short, and now dishonour'd too.
' Avenge this wrong, oh ever just and wise !
' Let Greece be humbled, and the Trojans rise ;
' Till the proud king, and all th' Achaian race
' Shall heap with honours him they now disgrace.'

Thus Thetis spoke, but Jove in silence held
The sacred councils of his breast conceal'd.
Not so repuls'd, the goddess closer press'd,
Still grasp'd his knees, and urged the dear request.

' O sire of gods and men ! thy suppliant hear,
' Refuse, or grant ; for what has Jove to fear ?
' Or, oh ! declare, of all the powers above,
Is wretched Thetis least the care of Jove ?'

She said, and sighing thus the god replies,
Who rolls the thunder o'er the vaulted skies :
' What hast thou ask'd ? Ah why should Jove engage

' In foreign contests, and domestic rage,
' The gods' complaints, and Juno's fierce alarms,
' While I, too partial, aid the Trojan arms ?

675

' Go, lest the haughty partner of my sway
' With jealous eyes thy close access survey ;
' But part in peace, secure thy prayer is sped :
' Witness the sacred honours of our head,

680

' The nod that ratifies the will divine,
' The faithful, fix'd, irrevocable sign ;
' This seals thy suit, and this fulfils thy vows—'

He spoke, and awful bends his sable brows ;<sup>28</sup>
Shakes his ambrosial curls, and gives the nod ;
The stamp of fate, and sanction of the god :
High heaven with trembling the dread signal took,
And all Olympus to the centre shook.

685

Swift to the seas profound the goddess flies,
Jove to his starry mansion in the skies.

The shining synod of th' immortals wait 690
 The coming god, and from their thrones of state
 Arising silent, rapt in holy fear,
 Before the majesty of heaven appear.
 Trembling they stand, while Jove assumes the throne,<sup>29</sup>
 All, but the god's imperious queen alone : 695
 Late had she view'd the silver-footed dame,
 And all her passions kindled into flame.
 ' Say, artful manager of heaven,' (she cries,)
 ' Who now partakes the secrets of the skies ?
 ' Thy Juno knows not the decrees of fate, 700
 ' In vain the partner of imperial state.
 ' What fav'rite goddess then those cares divides,
 ' Which Jove in prudence from his consort hides ?
 To this the Thunderer : ' Seek not thou to find
 ' The sacred counsels of almighty mind : 705
 ' Involv'd in darkness lies the great decree,
 ' Nor can the depths of fate be pierced by thee.
 ' What fits thy knowledge, thou the first shalt know :
 ' The first of gods above and men below :
 ' But thou, nor they, shall search the thoughts that roll 710
 ' Deep in the close recesses of my soul.
 Full on the sire, the goddess of the skies
 Roll'd the large orbs of her majestic eyes,
 And thus return'd ; ' Austere Saturnius, say,
 ' From whence this wrath, or who controls thy sway ? 715
 ' Thy boundless will, for me, remains in force.
 ' And all thy counsels take the destin'd course.
 ' But 'tis for Greece I fear : for late was seen
 ' In close consult the silver-footed queen.
 ' Jove to his Thetis nothing could deny, 720
 ' Nor was the signal vain that shook the sky.
 ' What fatal favour has the goddess won,
 ' To grace her fierce inexorable son ?
 ' Perhaps in Grecian blood to drench the plain,
 ' And glut his vengeance with my people slain.' 725
 Then thus the god : ' Oh restless fate of pride,
 ' That strives to learn what heaven resolves to hide ;
 ' Vain is the search, presumptuous and abhorr'd,
 ' Anxious to thee, and odious to thy lord.

'Let this suffice: th' immutable decree
 'No force can shake: what is, that ought to be.
 'Goddess submit, nor dare our will withstand,
 'But dread the power of this avenging hand;
 'Th' united strength of all the gods above
 'In vain resists th' omnipotence of Jove.' 735
 •The Thunderer spoke, nor durst the queen reply;
 A reverend horror silenced all the sky.
 The feast disturb'd, with sorrow Vulcan saw
 His mother menaced, and the gods in awe;
 Peace at his heart, and pleasure his design, 740
 Thus interpos'd the architect divine:
 'The wretched quarrels of the mortal state
 'Are far unworthy, gods! of your debate:
 'Let men their days in senseless strife employ,
 'We, in eternal peace, and constant joy. 745
 'Thou, goddess-mother, with our sire comply,
 'Nor break the sacred union of the sky:
 'Lest, rous'd to rage, he shake the blest abodes,
 'Launch the red lightning, and dethrone the gods.
 'If you submit, the Thunderer stands pleas'd:
 'The gracious power is willing to be pleas'd.' 750
 Thus Vulcan spoke, and, rising with a bound,
 The double bowl<sup>31</sup> with sparkling nectar crown'd,
 Which held to Juno in a cheerful way,
 'Goddess,' (he cried,) 'be patient and obey. 755
 'Dear as you are, if Jove his arm extend,
 'I can but grieve, unable to defend.
 'What god so daring in your aid to move,
 'Or lift his hand against the force of Jove?
 'Once in your cause I felt his matchless might, 760
 'Hurl'd headlong downward from th' ethereal height;
 'Toss'd all the day in rapid circles round;
 'Nor, till the sun descended, touch'd the ground:
 'Breathless I fell, in giddy motion lost;
 'The Sinthians<sup>32</sup> raised me on the Lemnian coast.' 765
 He said, and to her hands the goblet heav'd,
 Which, with a smile, the white-arm'd queen receiv'd.
 Then to the rest he fill'd; and, in his turn,
 Each to his lips applied the nectar'd urn.
 Vulcan with awkward grace his office plies, 770
 And unextinguish'd laughter shakes the skies.<sup>32</sup>

A vessel formed like two bells united at the apices, so that it was equally a goblet, whichever way it was turned up.

<sup>31</sup> A people of the isle of Lemnos, where Vulcan is said to have had his forge underground. <sup>32</sup> Vulcan designed to move laughter, observes

Thus the blest gods the genial day prolong,
 In feasts ambrosial, and celestial song.
 Apollo tun'd the lyre; the muses round
 With voice alternate aid the silver sound. 775
 Meantime the radiant sun, to mortal sight
 Descending swift, roll'd down the rapid light.
 Then to their starry domes the gods depart,
 The shining monuments of Vulcan's art:
 Jove on his couch reclin'd his awful head, 780
 And Juno slumber'd on the golden bed.

BOOK II.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE TRIAL OF THE ARMY AND CATALOGUE OF THE FORCES.

Jupiter, in pursuance of the request of Thetis, sends a deceitful vision to Agamemnon, persuading him to lead the army to battle; in order to make the Greeks sensible of their want of Achilles. The general, who is deluded with the hopes of taking Troy without his assistance, but fears the army was discouraged by his absence and the late plague, as well as by length of time, contrives to make trial of their disposition by a stratagem. He first communicates his design to the princes in council, that he would propose a return to the soldiers, and that they should put a stop to them if the proposal was embraced. Then he assembles the whole host, and upon moving for a return to Greece, they unanimously agree to it, and run to prepare the ships. They are detained by the management of Ulysses, who chastises the insolence of Thersites. The assembly is recalled several speeches made on the occasion, and at length the advice of Nestor followed, which was to make a general muster of the troops, and to divide them into their several nations, before they proceeded to battle. This gives occasion to the poet to enumerate all the forces of the Greeks and Trojans, in a large catalogue. The time employed in this book consists not entirely of one day. The scene lies in the Grecian camp and upon the sea-shore; toward the end it removes to Troy.

Now pleasing sleep had seal'd each mortal eye,
 Stretch'd in the tents the Grecian leaders lie,
 Th' immortal slumber'd on their thrones above;
 All but the ever-wakeful eyes of Jove.
 To honour Thetis' son he bends his care,
 And plunge the Greeks in all the woes of war: 5

Pope, but it was by his awkward performance of the part of Ganymede for the gods were not so unfeeling as to laugh at his lameness.

Then bids an empty phantom rise to sight
 And thus commands the vision of the night :
 ' Fly hence, deluding Dream ! and, light as air,
 ' To Agamemnon's ample tent repair. / 10
 ' Bid him in arms draw forth th' embattled train,
 ' Lead all his Grecians to the dusty plain.
 ' Declare, e'en now 'tis given him to destroy
 ' The lofty towers of wide-extended Troy.<sup>1</sup>
 ' For now no more the gods with fate contend, \ 15
 ' At Juno's suit the heavenly factions end.
 ' Destruction hangs o'er yon devoted wall,
 ' And nodding Ilion waits th' impending fall.'
 Swift as the word the vain illusion fled,
 Descends, and hovers o'er Atreides' head ; 20
 Cloth'd in the figure of the Pylian sage,
 Renown'd for wisdom, and revered for age ;
 Around his temples spreads his golden wing.
 And thus the flatt'ring dream deceives the king :
 ' Canst thou, with all a monarch's cares oppress'd 25
 ' Oh Atreus' son ! canst thou indulge thy rest ?
 ' Ill fits a chief who mighty nations guides,
 ' Directs in council, and in war presides,
 ' To whom its safety a whole people owes,
 ' To waste long nights in indolent repose. 30
 ' Monarch awake ! 'tis Jove's command I bear,
 ' Thou and thy glory claim his heavenly care.
 ' In just array draw forth th' embattled train,
 ' Lead all thy Grecians to the dusty plain ;
 ' E'en now, O king ! 'tis given thee to destroy 35
 ' The lofty towers of wide-extended Troy.
 ' For now no more the gods with fate contend,
 At Juno's suit the heavenly factions end.

<sup>1</sup> It appears from Aristotle, Poet. c. 26, that Homer was accused of impiety for making Jupiter the author of a lie in this passage. * * * But Macrobius, de Somn. Scip. I. 7, takes off this imputation entirely, and will not allow there was any lie in the case. "Agamemnon," says he, "was ordered by the dream to lead out all the forces of the Greeks ; now Achilles and his forces not being summoned to the assembly with the rest, that neglect absolved Jupiter from his promise." * * * Mr. Dacier takes notice of a passage in the Scripture exactly parallel to this, where God is represented making use of the malignity of his creatures to accomplish his judgments. It is in 2 Chron. xviii. 19—21. "And the Lord said, who will persuade Ahab, that he may go up and fall at Ramoth Gilead ? And there came forth a spirit and stood before the Lord, and said, I will persuade him. And the Lord said unto him, Wherewith ? And he said, I will go forth, and I will be a lying spirit in the mouth of all his prophets. And he said, Thou shalt persuade him, and prevail also. Go forth and do so." Pope.

' Destruction hangs o'er yon devoted wall,
 ' And nodding Illion waits th' impending fall. 40
 ' Awake, but, waking, this advice approve,
 ' And trust the vision that descends from Jove.'
 The phantom said; then vanish'd from his sight,
 Resolves to air, and mixes with the night.
 A thousand schemes the monarch's mind employ; 45
 Elate in thought, he sacks untaken Troy:
 Vain as he was, and to the future blind;
 Nor saw what Jove and secret fate design'd;
 What mighty toils to either host remain,
 What scenes of grief, and numbers of the slain! 50
 Eager he vises, and in fancy hears
 The voice celestial murmuring in his ears.
 First on his limbs a slender vest he drew,
 Around him next the regal mantle threw,
 Th' embroider'd sandals on his feet were tied; 55
 The starry falchion glitter'd at his side:
 And last his arm the massy sceptre loads,
 Unstain'd, immortal, and the gift of gods.
 Now rosy morn ascends the court of Jove,
 Lifts up her light, and opens day above. 60
 The king dispatch'd his heralds with commands
 To range the camp and summon all the bands:
 The gath'ring hosts the monarch's word obey;
 While to the fleet Atrides bends his way.
 In his black ship the Pylian prince he found; 65
 There calls a senate of the peers around:
 Th' assembly placed, the king of men express'd
 The counsels labouring in his artful breast:
 ' Friends and confed'rates! with attentive ear 70
 ' Receive my words, and credit what you hear.
 ' Late as I slumber'd in the shades of night,
 ' A dream divine appear'd before my sight;
 ' Whose visionary form like Nestor came,
 ' The same in habit, and in mien the same.
 ' The heavenly phantom hover'd o'er my head, 75
 ' And, Dost thou sleep, O Atreus' son? (he said)
 ' Ill fits a chief who mighty nations guides,
 ' Directs in council, and in war presides,
 ' To whom its safety a whole people owes,
 ' To waste long nights in indolent repose. 80
 ' Monarch awake! 'tis Jove's command I bear,
 ' Thou and thy glory claim his heavenly care;
 ' In just array draw forth th' embattled train,
 ' And lead the Grecians to the dusty plain;

'E'en now, O king ! 'tis given thee to destroy 85
 'The lofty towers of wide extended Troy.
 'For now no more the gods with fate contend,
 'At Juno's suit the heavenly factions end.
 'Destruction hangs o'er yon devoted wall,
 'And nodding Ilion waits th' impending fall. 90
 'This hear observant, and the gods obey !
 'The vision spoke, and pass'd in air away.
 'Now, valiant chiefs ! since heaven itself alarms,
 'Unite, and rouse the sons of Greece to arms.
 'But first, with caution, try what yet they dare, 95
 'Worn with nine years of unsuccessful war.
 'To move the troops to measure back the main,
 'Be mine ; and yours the province to detain.'
 He spoke, and sat ; when Nestor rising said,
 (Nestor, whom Pylos' sandy realms obey'd :) 100
 'Princes of Greece, your faithful ears incline,
 'Nor doubt the vision of the powers divine ;
 'Sent by great Jove to him who rules the host,
 'Forbid it heaven ! this warning should be lost !
 'Then let us haste, obey the god's alarms, 105
 'And join to rouse the sons of Greece to arms.'
 Thus spoke the sage : the kings without delay
 Dissolve the council, and their chief obey :
 The sceptred rulers lead ; the following host,
 Pour'd forth by thousands, darkens all the coast. 110
 As from some rocky cleft the shepherd sees
 Clustering in heaps of heaps the driving bees,
 Rolling and blackening, swarms succeeding swarms
 With deeper murmurs and more hoarse alarms ;
 Dusky they spread, a close-embodied crowd, 115
 And o'er the vale descends the living cloud.
 So, from the tents and ships, a lengthening train
 Spreads all the beach, and wide o'er shades the plain
 Along the region runs a deafening sound ;
 Beneath their footsteps groans the trembling ground. 120
 Fame flies before, the messenger of Jove,
 And shining soars, and claps her wings above.
 Nine sacred heralds now proclaiming loud
 The monarch's will, suspend the listening crowd.
 Soon as the throngs in order ranged appear, 125
 And fainter murmurs died upon the ear,
 The king of kings his awful figure rais'd ;
 High in his hand the golden sceptre blaz'd :
 The golden sceptre, of celestial frame,
 By Vulcan form'd, from Jove to Hermes came : 130

To Pelops he th' immortal gift resign'd ;
 The immortal gift great Pelops left behind,
 In Atreus' hand, which not with Atreus ends,
 To rich Thyestes next the prize descends ;
 And now, the mark of Agamemnon's reign, 135
 Subjects all Argos, and controls the main.

On this bright sceptre now the king reclin'd,
 And artful thus pronounced the speech design'd ;
 ' Ye sons of Mars !—partake your leader's care,
 ' Heroes of Greece, and brothers of the war ! 140
 ' Of partial Jove with justice I complain,
 ' And heavenly oracles believ'd in vain.
 ' A safe return was promis'd to our toils,<sup>2</sup>
 ' Renown'd, triumphant, and enrich'd with spoils.
 ' Now shameful flight alone can save the host, 145
 ' Our blood, our treasure, and our glory lost.
 ' So Jove decrees, resistless lord of all !
 ' At whose command whole empires rise or fall :
 ' He shakes the feeble props of human trust,
 ' And towns and armies humbles to the dust. 150
 ' What shame to Greece a fruitless war to wage,
 ' Oh lasting shame in every future age !
 ' Once great in arms, the common scorn we grow,
 ' Repuls'd and baffled by a feeble foe.
 ' So small their number, that, if wars were ceas'd, 155
 ' And Greece triumphant held a general feast,
 ' All rank'd by tens ; whole decades, when they dine,
 ' Must want a Trojan slave to pour the wine.
 ' But other forces have our hopes o'erthrown,
 ' And Troy prevails by armies not her own. 160
 ' Now nine long years of mighty Jove are run,
 ' Since first the labours of this war begun ;
 ' Our cordage torn, decay'd our vessels lie,
 ' And scarce ensure the wretched power to fly.
 ' Haste then, for ever leave the Trojan wall ! 165
 ' Our weeping wives, our tender children call :
 ' Love, duty, safety, summon us away,
 ' 'Tis nature's voice, and nature we obey.
 ' Our shatter'd barks may yet transport us o'er,
 ' Safe and inglorious, to our native shore. 170
 ' Fly, Grecians, fly ! your sails and oars employ,
 ' And dream no more of heaven-defended Troy.'<sup>3</sup>

<sup>3</sup> I must take notice that this speech of Agamemnon is again put into his mouth in the ninth Iliad, and, according to Dionysius, for the same

His deep design unknown, the hosts approve
 Atrides' speech. The mighty numbers move. 175
 So roll the billows to th' Icarian shore,
 From east and south when winds begin to roar,
 Burst their dark mansions in the clouds, and sweep
 The whitening surface of the ruffled deep :
 And as on corn when western gusts descend,
 Before the blast the lofty harvests bend ; 180
 Thus o'er the field the moving host appears.
 With nodding plumes and groves of waving spears.
 The gathering murmur spreads, their trampling feet
 Beat the loose sands, and thicken to the fleet.
 With long-resounding cries they surge the train 185
 To fit the ships, and launch into the main.
 They toil, they sweat, thick clouds of dust arise,
 The doubling clamours echo through the skies.
 E'en then the Greeks had left the hostile plain,
 And fate decreed the fall of Troy in vain ; 190
 But Jove's imperial queen their flight survey'd,
 And sighing thus bespoke the blue-ey'd maid :
 ' Shall then the Grecians fly ? O dire disgrace !
 ' And leave unpunish'd this perfidious race ?
 ' Shall Troy, shall Priam, and the adulterous spouse, 195
 ' In peace enjoy the fruits of broken vows ?
 ' And bravest chiefs, in Helen's quarrel slain,
 ' Lie unavenged on yon detested plain ?
 ' No : let my Greeks, unmov'd by vain alarms,
 ' Once more refulgent shine in brazen arms, 200
 ' Haste, goddess, haste ! the flying host detain,
 ' Nor let one sail be hoisted on the main.'
 Pallas obeys, and from Olympus' height
 Swift to the ships precipitates her flight ;
 Ulysses, first in public cares, she found, 205
 For prudent counsel like the gods renown'd ;
 Oppress'd with generous grief the hero stood,
 Nor drew his sable vessels to the flood.
 ' And is it thus, divine Laërtes' son !
 ' Thus fly the Greeks ?' (the martial maid begun) 210
 ' Thus to their country bear their own disgrace,
 ' And fame eternal leave to Priam's race ?

purpose, to detain the army at a siege after a defeat ; though it seems unartful to put the same trick twice upon the Greeks by the same person, and in the same words too. We may indeed suppose the first feint to have remained undiscovered, but at best it is a management in the poet not very entertaining to the readers. Pope.

' Shall haughty Helen still remain unfroed,
 ' Still unrevenge'd a thousand heroes bleed?
 ' Haste, generous Ithacus! prevent the shame,
 ' Recall your armies, and your chiefs reclaim. 215
 ' Your own resistless eloquence employ,
 ' And to th' immortals trust the fall of Troy.'
 ' The voice divine confess'd the warlike maid,
 Ulysses heard, nor uninspir'd obey'd: 220
 Then, meeting first Atrides, from his hand
 Receiv'd th' imperial sceptre of command.
 Thus grac'd, attention and respect to gain,
 He runs, he flies through all the Grecian train,
 Each prince of name, or chief in arms approv'd, 225
 He fir'd with praise, or with persuasion mov'd:
 ' Warriors like you, with strength and wisdom blest,
 ' By brave examples should confirm the rest.
 ' The monarch's will not yet reveal'd appears;
 ' He tries our courage, but resents our fears. 230
 ' Th' unwary Greeks his fury may provoke;
 ' Not thus the king in secret council spoke.
 ' Jove loves our chief, from Jove his honour springs,
 ' Beware! for dreadful is the wrath of kings.'
 But if a clamorous vile plebeian rose, 235
 Him with reproof he check'd, or tam'd with blows.
 ' Be still, thou slave, and to thy betters yield;
 ' Unknown alike in council and in field:
 ' Ye gods, what dastards would our host command?
 ' Swept to the war, the lumber of a land. 240
 ' Be silent, wretch, and think not here allow'd
 ' That worst of tyrants, an usurping crowd.'
 ' To one sole monarch Jove commits the sway;
 ' His are the laws, and him let all obey.'
 With words like these the troops Ulysses rul'd, 245
 The loudest silenced, and the fiercest cool'd.
 Back to th' assembly roll the thronging train,
 Desert the ships, and pour upon the plain.
 Murmuring they move, as when old ocean roars,
 And heaves huge surges to the trembling shores: 250
 The groaning banks are burst with bellowing sound,
 The rocks remurmur, and the deeps rebound.

"This sentence," says Pope, "is not to be understood as a praise of absolute monarchy. Homer spoke it only with regard to a general of an army during the time of his commission. Nor is Agamemnon styled king of kings in any other sense, than as the rest of the princes had given him the supreme authority over them in the siege."

At length the tumult sinks, the noises cease,
 And a still silence lulls the camp to peace.
 Thersites only clamour'd in the throng,<sup>5</sup> 255
 Loquacious, loud, and turbulent of tongue :
 Awed by no shame, by no respect controll'd,
 In scandal busy, in reproaches bold ;
 With witty malice studious to defame ;
 Scorn all his joy, and laughter all his aim. 260
 But chief he gloried with licentious style
 To lash the great, and monarchs to revile.
 His figure such as might his soul proclaim :
 One eye was blinking, and one leg was lame :
 His mountain-shoulders half his breast o'erspread ; 265
 Thin hairs bestrew'd his long mis-shapen head.
 Spleen to mankind his envious heart possess'd,
 And much he hated all, but most the best.
 Ulysses or Achilles still his theme ;
 But royal scandal his delight supreme. 270
 Long had he liv'd the scorn of every Greek ;
 Vex'd when he spoke, yet still they heard him speak.
 Sharp was his voice ; which, in the shrillest tone,
 Thus with injurious taunts attack'd the throne :
 ' Amidst the glories of so bright a reign,' 275
 ' What moves the great Atrides to complain ?

<sup>5</sup> Homer has shewn great judgment in the particulars he has chosen to compose the picture of a pernicious creature of wit ; the chief of which are a desire of promoting laughter at any rate, and a contempt of his superiors. And he sums up the whole very strongly, by saying, that Thersites hated Achilles and Ulysses ; in which, as Matarch has remarked in his treatise of envy and hatred, he makes it the utmost completion of an ill character to bear a malevolence to the best men. What is farther observable is, that Thersites is never heard of after this, his first appearance : such a scandalous character is to be taken no more notice of, than just to shew that it is despised. The same conduct is observed with regard to the most deformed and most beautiful person of the poem : for Nireus is thus mentioned once, and no more throughout the Iliad. He places a worthless beauty and an ill-natured wit upon the same footing, and shews that the gifts of the body without those of the mind are not more despicable than those of the mind itself without virtue. Pope.

<sup>6</sup> "When the army," says Pope, "were offended at their general in favour of Achilles, nothing could more weaken Achilles' interest than to make such a fellow as Thersites appear of his party, whose impertinence would give them a disgust of thinking or acting like him. There is no surer method to reduce generous spirits, than to make them see they are pursuing the same views with people of no merit, and such whom they cannot forbear despising themselves. Had Nestor made this speech, the army had certainly set sail for Greece ; but because it was uttered by a

'Tis thine whate'er the warrior's breast inflames,
 'The golden spoil, and thine the lovely dames.
 'With all the wealth our wars and blood bestow,
 'Thy tents are crowded, and thy chests o'erflow. 280
 'Thus at full ease, in heaps of riches roll'd,
 'What grieves the monarch? Is it thirst of gold?
 'Say, shall we march with our unconquer'd powers,
 '(The Greeks and I) to Ilion's hostile towers,
 'And bring the race of royal bastards here, 285
 'For Troy to ransom at a price too dear?
 'But safer plunder thy own host supplies;
 'Say, wouldst thou seize some valiant leader's prize?
 'Or, if thy heart to generous love be led,
 'Some captive fair, to bless thy kingly bed? 290
 'Whate'er our master craves, submit we must,
 'Plagued with his pride, or punish'd for his lust.
 'Oh women of Achaia! men no more!
 'Hence let us fly, and let him waste his store
 'In loves and pleasures on the Phrygian shore. 295
 'We may be wanted on some busy day,
 'When Hector comes: so great Achilles may:
 'From him be forced the prize we jointly gave,
 'From him, the fierce, the fearless, and the brave:
 'And durst he, as he ought, resent that wrong, 300
 'This mighty tyrant were no tyrant long.'
 Fierce from his seat, at this, Ulysses springs,
 In generous vengeance of the king of kings.
 With indignation sparkling in his eyes,
 He views the wretch, and sternly thus replies: 305
 'Peace, factious monster! born to vex the state,
 'With wrangling talents form'd for foul debate:
 'Curb that impetuous tongue, nor, rashly vain
 'And singly mad, asperse the sovereign reign.
 'Have we not known thee, slave! of all our host, 310
 'The man who acts the least, upbraids the most?
 'Think not the Greeks to shameful flight to bring,
 'Nor let those lips profane the name of king.
 'For our return we trust the heavenly powers;
 'Be that their care; to fight like men be ours. 315
 'But grant the host with wealth the general load,
 'Except detraction, what hast thou bestow'd?
 'Suppose some hero should his spoils resign.
 'Art thou that hero, could those spoils be thine?

ridiculous fellow whom they are ashamed to follow, they are reduced, and set to continue the siege."

' Gods! let me perish on this hateful shore, 320
 ' And let these eyes behold my son no more ;
 ' If, on thy next offence, this hand forbear
 ' To strip those arms thou ill deserv'st to wear,
 ' Expel the council where our princes meet,
 ' And send thee scourged, and howling through the fleet.' 325

He said, and cowering as the dastard kends,<sup>7</sup>
 The weighty sceptre on his back descends,
 On the round bunch the bloody tumours rise ;
 The tears spring starting from his haggard eyes :
 Trembling he sat, and, shrunk in abject fears, 330
 From his vile visage wiped the scalding tears.

While to his neighbor each express'd his thought :
 ' Ye gods! what wonders has Ulysses wrought !
 ' What fruits his conduct and his courage yield,
 ' Great in the council, glorious in the field ! 335
 ' Generous he rises in the crown's defence,
 ' To curb the factious tongue of insolence.
 ' Such just examples on offenders shewn,
 ' Sedition silence, and assert the throne.'

'Twas thus the general voice the hero prais'd,
 Who, rising, high th' imperial sceptre rais'd :
 The blue-ey'd Pallas, his celestial friend,
 (In form a herald;) bade the crowds attend ;
 Th' expecting crowds in still attention hung,
 To hear the wisdom of his heavenly tongue. 345
 Then, deeply thoughtful, pausing ere he spoke,
 His silence thus the prudent hero broke :

' Unhappy monarch! whom the Grecian race
 ' With shame deserting, heap with vile disgrace.
 ' Not such at Argos was their generous vow, 350
 ' Once all their voice, but ah! forgotten now :
 ' Ne'er to return, was then the common cry,
 ' Till Troy's proud structures should in ashes lie.
 ' Behold them weeping for their native shore!
 ' What could their wives or helpless children more ? 355
 ' What heart but melts to leave the tender train,
 ' And, one short month, endure the wintry main ?
 ' Few leagues remov'd, we wish our peaceful seat,
 ' When the ship tosses, and the tempests beat :

Then well may this long stay provoke their tears, 360
 The tedious length of nine revolving years.
 'Not for their grief the Grecian host I blame ;
 'But vanquish'd ! baffled ! oh eternal shame !
 'Expect the time to Troy's destruction given,
 'And try the faith of Calchas and of heaven. 365
 'What pass'd at Aulis, Greece can witness bear,
 'And all who live to breathe this Phrygian air.
 'Beside a fountain's sacred brink we rais'd
 'Our verdant altars, and the victims blaz'd ;
 '('Twas where the plane-tree spread its shades around ;) 370
 'The altars heav'd ; and from the crumbling ground
 'A mighty dragon shot, of dire portent ;
 'From Jove himself the dreadful sign was sent.
 'Straight to the tree his sanguine spires he roll'd,
 'And curl'd around in many a winding fold. 375
 'The topmost branch a mother-bird possess'd ;
 'Eight callow infants fill'd the mossy nest ;
 'Herself the ninth : the serpent, as he hung,
 'Stretch'd his black jaws, and crash'd the crying young ;
 'While hovering near, with miserable moan, 380
 'The drooping mother wail'd her children gone.
 'The mother last, as round the nest she flew,
 'Seiz'd by the beating wing, the monster slew :
 'Nor long surviv'd ; to marble turn'd he stands
 'A lasting prodigy on Aulis' sands, 385
 'Such was the will of Jove ; and hence we dare
 'Trust in his omen, and support the war.
 'For while around we gaz'd with wondering eyes,
 'And trembling sought the powers with sacrifice,
 'Full of his god,<sup>a</sup> the reverend Calchas cried, 390
 'Ye Grecian warriors ! lay your fears aside :
 'This wondrous signal Jove himself displays,
 'Of ~~long, long~~ labours, but eternal praise.
 'As many birds as by the snake were slain,
 'So many years the toils of Greece remain ; 395
 'But wait the tenth, for Ilion's fall decreed :
 'Thus spoke the prophet, thus the fates succeed.
 'Obey, ye Grecians, with submission wait,
 'Nor let your flight avert the Trojan fate.'
 He said : the shores with loud applauses sound, 400
 The hollow ships each deafening shout rebound.
 Then Nestor thus : 'These vain debates forbear :'
 'Ye talk like children, not like heroes dare.

' Where now are all your high resolves at last ?
 ' Your leagues concluded, your engagements past ?
 ' Vow'd with libations and with victims then,
 ' Now vanish'd like their smoke : the faith of men !
 ' While useless words consume th' unactive hours,
 ' No wonder Troy so long resists our powers.
 ' Rise, great Atrides ! and with courage sway ; 411
 ' We march to war, if thou direct the way.
 ' But leave the few that dare resist thy laws,
 ' The mean deserters of the Grecian cause,
 ' To grudge the conquests mighty Jove prepares,
 ' And view, with envy, our successful wars. 414
 ' On that great day when first the martial train,
 ' Big with the fate of Ilion, plough'd the main ;
 ' Jove on the right a prosperous signal sent,
 ' And thunder rolling shook the firmament.
 ' Encouraged hence, maintain the glorious strife, 420
 ' Till every soldier grasp a Phrygian wife,
 ' Till Helen's woes at full revenged appear.
 ' And Troy's proud matrons render tear for tear.
 ' Before that day, if any Greek invite
 ' His country's troops to base, inglorious flight,
 ' Stand forth that Greek ! and hoist his sail to fly ;
 ' And die the dastard first, who dreads to die.
 ' But now, O monarch ! all thy chiefs advise :
 ' Nor what they offer, thou thyself despise.
 ' Among those counsels, let not mine be vain ; 430
 ' In tribes and nations to divide thy train :
 ' His separate troops let every leader call,
 ' Each strengthen each, and all encourage all.
 ' What chief, or soldier, of the numerous band,
 ' Or bravely fights, or ill obeys command, 435
 ' When thus distinct they war, shall soon be known,
 ' And what the cause of Ilion not o'erthrown ;
 ' If fate resists, or if our arms are slow,
 ' If gods above prevent, or men below.
 ' To him the king : ' How much thy years excel<sup>10</sup> 440 reader's attention to the artful and excellent management of the poet in this important crisis. Ulysses exhorts the people to stay ; Nestor recommends immediate battle ; and Agamemnon makes an early and public confession of his fault, that the army may the less resent it."

<sup>10</sup> Every one has observed how glorious an eulogium of wisdom is here given, where Agamemnon so far prefers it to valour, as to wish not for ten Ajaxes, or Achilleses, but only for ten Nestors. Pope. The observation was first made by Cicero, De Senectute.

'Oh would the gods, in love to Greece, decree
 'But ten such sages as they grant in thee ;
 'Such wisdom soon should Priam's force destroy,
 'And soon should fall the haughty towers of Troy ! 445
 'But Jove forbids, who plunges those he hates
 'In fierce contention and in vain debates.
 'Now great Achilles from our aid withdraws,
 'By me provok'd ; a captive maid the cause :
 'If e'er as friends we join, the Trojan wall 450
 'Must shake, and heavy will the vengeance fall !
 'But now, ye warriors, take a short repast ;
 'And, well-refresh'd, to bloody conflict haste.
 'His sharpen'd spear let every Grecian wield
 'And every Grecian fix his brazen shield ; 455
 'Let all excite the fiery steeds of war,
 'And all for combat fit the rattling car.
 'This day, this dreadful day, let each contend ;
 'No rest, no respite, till the shades descend ;
 'Till darkness, or till death shall cover all, 460
 'Let the war bleed, and let the mighty fall ;
 'Till bath'd in sweat be every manly breast,
 'With the huge shield each brawny arm depress'd,
 'Each aching nerve refuse the lance to throw,
 'And each spent courser at the chariot blow, 465
 'Who dares, inglorious, in his ships to stay,
 'Who dares to tremble on this signal day,
 'That wretch, too mean to fall by martial power,
 'The birds shall mangle and the dogs devour.'
 The monarch spoke : and straight a murmur rose, 470
 Loud as the surges when the tempest blows,
 That dash'd on broken rocks tumultuous roar,
 And foam and thunder on the stony shore.
 Straight to the tents the troops dispersing bend,
 The fires are kindled, and the smokes ascend ; 475
 With hasty feasts they sacrifice, and pray
 I' avert the dangers of the doubtful day.
 A steer of five years' age, large limb'd, and fed,
 To Jove's high altars Agamemnon led :
 There bade the noblest of the Grecian peers, 480
 And Nestor first, as most advanced in years.
 Next came Idomeneus and Tydeus' son,
 Ajax the less, and Ajax Telamon ;
 Then wise Ulysses in his rank was placed ;
 And Menelaus came unbid,<sup>11</sup> the last. 485

<sup>11</sup> Menelaus came of his own accord, not waiting for an invitation, as

'Low in the dust be laid yon hostile spires,

495

'In Hector's breast be plung'd this shining sword,

'And slaughter'd heroes groan around their lord!'

Thus pray'd the chief: his unavailing prayer

Great Jove refus'd, and toss'd in empty air :

The god, averse, while yet the fumes arose,

Prepar'd new toils, and doubled woes on woes.

Their prayers perform'd, the chiefs the rites pursue,

The barley sprinkled, and the victim slew.

The limbs they sever from th' enclosing hide,

The thighs, selected to the gods, divide.

On these, in double cauls involved with art,

From the cleft wood the crackling flames aspire,

'Now bid thy heralds sound the loud alarms,

High in the midst the blue-ey'd virgin flies ;
 From rank to rank she darts her ardent eyes : 525

 Blaz'd on her arm, and lighten'd all the field :
 Round the vast orb a hundred serpents roll'd,
 Form'd the bright fringes, and seem'd to burn in gold.
 With this each Grecian's manly breast she warms, 530
 Swells their bold hearts, and strings their nervous arms ;
 No more they sigh inglorious to return,
 But breathe revenge, and for the combat burn.
 As on some mountain, through the lofty grove,<sup>14</sup>
 The crackling flames ascend and blaze above, 535
 The fires, expanding as the winds arise,
 Shoot their long beams, and kindle half the skies

 Now light with noise ; with noise the field resounds. 545

 With rushing troops the plains are cover'd o'er,
 And thundering footsteps shake the sounding shore ;

<sup>14</sup> Homer, on the sight of the march of this numerous army, gives us five similes, but all entirely different. The first regards the splendour of their armour, as a fire, &c. The second, the various movements of so many thousands before they can range themselves in battle array, like the swans, &c. The third respects their number, as the leaves or flowers, &c. The fourth, the ardour with which they run to the combat, like the legions of insects, &c. And the fifth, the obedience and exact discipline of the troops, ranged without confusion under their leaders, as flocks under their shepherds. 'This fecundity and variety' can never be enough admired.—

Dacier. So when, at the close of the seventeenth book, he would give an adequate idea of the difficulty with which the body of Patroclus, so long a subject of contest, was at last rescued by Ajax and Menelaus, he expends five similes on the occasion ; and three in the fifteenth, to magnify in our apprehension the force of Hector, and the firmness of the Grecians.

 Or leaves the trees; or thick as insects' play,
 The wandering nation of a summer's day,
 That, drawn by milky steams, at evening hours,
 In gather'd swarms surround the rural bowers; 555
 From pail to pail with busy murmur run
 The gilded legions, glittering in the sun.
 So throng'd, so close, the Grecian squadrons stood
 In radiant arms, and thirst for Trojan blood.
 Each leader now his scatter'd force conjoins 560
 In close array, and forms the deepening lines.
 Not with more ease the skilful shepherd awain
 Collects his flock from thousands on the plain.
 The king of kings, majestically tall,
 Towers o'er his armies, and outshines them all: 565
 Like some proud bull that round the pastures leads
 His subject-herds, the monarch of the meads.
 Great as the gods th' exalted chief was seen,<sup>17</sup>
 His strength like Neptune, and like Mars his mien;
 Jove o'er his eyes celestial glories spread, 570
 And dawning conquest play'd around his head.
 Say, Virgins, seated round the throne divine,
 All-knowing goddesses! immortal Nine!
 Since earth's wide regions, heaven's unmeasur'd height,
 And hell's abyss, hide nothing from your sight, 575
 (We, wretched mortals! lost in doubts below,
 But guess by rumour, and but boast we know,)
 Oh say what heroes, fir'd by thirst of fame,
 Or urged by wrongs, to Troy's destruction came?
 To count them all, demands a thousand tongues, 580
 A throat of brass, and adamantine lungs,
 Daughters of Jove, assist! inspir'd by you,
 The nightly labour dauntless I pursue:
 What crowded armies, from what climes, they bring,
 Their names, their numbers, and their chiefs, I sing. 585

THE CATALOGUE OF THE SHIPS.

The hardy warriors whom Bœotia<sup>18</sup> bred,
 Peneleus, Leitus, Prothoenor led:

<sup>18</sup> Homer, who, it might have been

With these Arcesilaus and Clonius stand,
 Equal in arms, and equal in command.
 These head the troops that rocky Aulis yields, 590
 And Eteon's hills, and Hyrie's watery fields,
 And Schœnos, Scolos, Græa near the main,
 And Mycale's ample piny plain.
 Those who in Petœon or Ilesion dwell,
 Or Harma, where Apollo's prophet fell; 595
 Heleon and Hylê, which the springs o'erflow;
 And Medœon lofty, and Otalea low;
 Or in the meads of Haliartus stray,
 Or Thespiæ, sacred to the god of day.
 Onchestus, Neptune's celebrated groves;
 Copæ, and Thisbê, famed for silver doves,
 For flocks Erythræ, Glissa for the vine;
 Platæa green, and Nisa the divine.
 And they whom Thebê's well-built walls enclose,
 Where Mydê, Eutresis, Coronê rose; 605
 And Arnê rich, with purple harvests crown'd;
 And Anthedon, Bœotia's utmost bound.
 Full fifty ships they send, and each conveys
 Twice sixty<sup>19</sup> warriors through the foaming seas.
 To these succeed Asplendon's martial train, 610
 Who plough the spacious Orchomenian plain.
 Two valiant brothers rule th' undaunted throng,
 Ialmen and Ascalaphus the strong,
 Sons of Astyochê, the heavenly fair,
 Whose virgin charms subdued the god of war:

supposed, would have begun his geographical account from Athens or Sparta, or, more probably, from Mycenæ, the city of the sovereign, chose to begin it from Bœotia; not for the sake of any peculiar dignity in the character of it, but merely because, as a promontory, it afforded him a point of particular notoriety. He is highly applauded by Macrobius for the exactness with which he performs his poetical journey, who, on the contrary, much censures Virgil for his inattention in that article. Cooper.

<sup>19</sup> Thucydides remarks that the Bœotian vessels, which carried one hundred and twenty men each, were probably mentioned as the largest in the fleet; and those of Philoctetes, which carried fifty each, as the smallest; and that there were few men passengers, except the chiefs, the great majority being men for service in the field, who navigated the ships themselves. If, then, the total number of ships was twelve hundred, and their crews averaged eighty men each, the amount of the army would be about ninety-six thousand men. This is probably more than the real number, and Jacob Bryant, comparing it with the army at Platæa, thinks it so much of an exaggeration as to render the whole tale of the siege of Troy incredible. See Coleridge's Classic Poets, p. 211.

(In Actor's court as she retired to rest, *
 The strength of Mars the blushing maid compress'd :)
 Their troops in thirty sable vessels sweep,
 With equal oars, the hoarse-resounding deep
 The Phocians next in forty barks repair, 620
 Epistrophus and Schedius head the war;
 From those rich regions where Cephissus leads
 His silver current through the flowery meads;
 From Panopea, Chryse the divine,
 Where Anemoria's stately turrets shine, 625
 Where Pytho, Daulis, Cyparissus stood,
 And fair Lulæa views the rising flood.
 These, ranged in order on the floating tide,
 Close, on the left, the bold Bootians' side.
 Fierce Ajax led the Locrian squadrons on, 630
 Ajax the less, Oileus' valiant son;
 Skill'd to direct the flying dart aright;
 Swift in pursuit, and active in the fight.
 Him, as their chief, the chosen troops attend,
 Which Bessa, Thronus, and rich Cynos send; 635
 Opus, Calliarus, and Scarphe's bands;
 And those who dwell where pleasing Augia stands,
 And where Boagrius floats the lowly lands,
 Or in fair Tarphe's sylvan seats reside;
 In forty vessels cut the yielding tide. 640
 Eubœa next her martial sons prepares,
 And sends the brave Abantes to the wars;
 Breathing revenge, in arms they take their way
 From Chalcis' walls, and strong Eretria;
 Th' Isteian fields for generous vines renown'd, 645
 The fair Carystos, and the Styrian ground;
 Where Dios from her towers o'erlooks the plain,
 And high Cerinthus views the neighbouring main,
 Down their broad shoulders falls a length of hair;<sup>20</sup>
 Their hands dismiss not the long lance in air: 650
 But with portended spears, in fighting fields,
 Pierce the tough corselets and the brazen shields.
 Twice twenty ships transport the warlike bands,
 Which bold Elphenor, fierce in arms, commands.
 Full fifty more from Athens stem the main, 655
 Led by Menestheus through the liquid plain;

<sup>20</sup> It was the custom of these people to shave the fore part of their heads, which they did that their enemies might not take the advantage of seizing them by the hair: the hinder-part they let grow, as a valiant race that would never turn their backs. Pope.

(Athens the fair, where great Eretheus sway'd,
 That owed his nurture to the blue-eyed maid,
 But from the teeming furrow took his birth,
 The mighty offspring of the foodfull earth. 660
 Him Pallas placed amidst her wealthy fane,
 Ador'd with sacrifice and oxen slain;
 Where as the years revolve her altars blaze,
 And all the tribes resound the goddess' praise.)
 No chief like thee, Menestheus! Greece could yield, 665
 To marshal armies in the dusty field,
 Th' extended wings of battle to display,
 Or close th' embodied host in firm array.
 Nestor alone, improv'd by length of days,
 For martial conduct bore an equal praise. 670
 With these appear the Salaminian bands,
 Whom the gigantic Telamon commands;
 In twelve black ships to Troy they steer their course
 And with the great Athenians join their force.
 Next move to war the generous Argive train 675
 From high Trœzenè, and Maseta's plain,
 And fair Ægina circled by the main:
 Whom strong Tirynthe's lofty walls surround,
 And Epidaurè with viny harvests crown'd:
 And where fair Asinen and Hermion shew 680
 Their cliffs above, and ample bay below.
 These by the brave Euryalus were led,
 Great Sthenelus, and greater Diomed,
 But chief Tydides bore the sovereign sway;
 In fourscore barks they plough the watery way. 685
 The proud Mycenè arms her martial powers,
 Cleonè, Corinth, with imperial towers,
 Fair Aræthyrea, Ornia's fruitful plain,
 And Ægion, and Adrastus' ancient reign;
 And those who dwell along the sandy shore, 690
 And where Pellènè yields her fleecy store,
 Where Helicè and Hyperesia lie,
 And Gonoëssa's spires salute the sky.
 Great Agamemnôn rules the numerous band,
 A hundred vessels in long order stand, 695
 And crowded nations wait his dread command.
 High on the deck the king of men appears,
 And his refulgent arms in triumph wears;
 Proud of his host, unrivall'd in his reign,
 In silent pomp he moves along the main.
 His brother follows, and to vengeance warms
 The hardy Spartans, exercis'd in arms:

Phares and Brysia's valiant troops, and those Whom Lacedæmon's lofty hills enclose :
 Or Messô's towers for silver doves renown'd, 705
 Amyclæ, Læis, Augia's happy ground,
 And those whom Cētylos' low walls contain,
 And Helos, on the margin of the main :
 These o'er the bending ocean, Helen's cause
 In sixty ships with Menelaus draws : 710
 Eager and loud, from 'man to man he flies,
 Revenge and fury flaming in his eyes ;<sup>1</sup>
 While, vainly fond, in fancy oft he hears
 The fair one's grief, and sees her falling tears.
 In ninety sail, from Pylos' sandy coast, 715
 Nestor the sage conducts his chosen host :
 From Amphigenia's ever-fruitful land ;
 Where Æpy high, and little Pteleon stand ;
 Where beauteous Arenè her structures shows,
 And Thryon's walls Alphæus' streams enclose : 720
 And Dorion, famed for Thamyris' disgrace,
 Superior once of all the tuneful race,
 Till, vain of mortal's empty praise, he strove
 To match the seed of cloud-compelling Jove !
 Too daring bard ! whose unsuccessful pride 725
 Th' immortal Muses in their art defied.
 Th' avenging Muses of the light of day
 Depriv'd his eyes, and snatch'd his voice away ;
 No more his heavenly voice was heard to sing ;
 His hand no more awaked the silver string. 730
 Where under high Cyllenè, crown'd with wood,
 The shaded tomb of old Æpytus stood ;
 From Ripè, Stratiè, Tegea's bordering towns,
 The Phenean fields, and Orchomenian downs,
 Where the fat herds in plenteous pasture rove ; 735
 And Stymphehus with her surrounding grove,
 Parrhasia, on her snowy cliffs reclin'd,
 And high Enispè shook by wintry wind,
 And fair Mantinea's ever-pleasing site ;
 In sixty sail th' Arcadian bands unite. 740
 Bold Agapenor, glorious at their head,
 (Ancæus' son) the mighty squadron led.

<sup>1</sup> These two lines are an enormous exaggeration of the original, which, to quote Wakefield, "runs literally thus :

He in the midst, with ardent vigour bold,
 Exhorts to war, for much he wish'd revenge
 For Helen's sorrows and uneasy thoughts."

Their Ships, supplied by Agamemnon's care,
 Through roaring seas the wond'ring warriors bear ;
 The first to battle on th' appointed plain,
 But new to all the dangers of the main."<sup>22</sup> 745

Those, where fair Elis and Buprasium join ;
 Whom Hyrmin, here, and Myrsinus confine,
 And bounded there, where o'er the valleys rose
 Th' Olenian rock ; and where Alisium flows ; 750
 Beneath four chiefs (a numerous army) came :
 The strength and glory of th' Epean name.

In separate squadrons these their train divide,
 Each leads ten vessels through the yielding tide.
 One was Amphinachus, and Thalphius one ; 755
 (Eurytus' this, and that Teatus' son ;) •
 Diorez sprung from Amarynceus' hue ; •
 And great Polyxenus, of force divine.

But those who view fair Elis o'er the seas
 From the blest islands of th' Echinades, 760
 In forty vessels under Megez move,
 Begot by Phyleus, the belov'd of Jove.
 To strong Dulichium from his sire he fled,
 And thence to Troy his hardy warriors led.

Ulysses follow'd through the wat'ry road, 765
 A chief, in wisdom equal to a god.
 With those whom Cephallenia's isle enclos'd,
 Or till their fields along the coast oppos'd ;
 Or where fair Ithaca o'erlooks the floods, • • •
 Where high Noritos shakes his waving woods, 770
 Where Ægilipa's rugged sides are seen,
 Urocylia rocky, and Zacynthus green.

These, in twelve galleys with vermilion prores,
 Beneath his conduct sought the Phrygian shores. 775

Thoas came next, Andraemon's valiant son,
 From Pleuron's walls and chalky Calydon,
 And rough Pylenè, and th' Olenian steep,
 And Chalcis, beaten by the rolling deep.
 He led the warriors from th' Ætolian shore,
 For now the sons of Ceneus were no more ! 780
 The glories of the mighty race were fled !
 Ceneus himself; and Meleager dead !
 To Thoas' care now trust the martial train :
 His forty vessels follow through the main.

<sup>22</sup> The Arcadians being an inland people were unskilled in navigation, for which reason Agamemnon furnished them with shipping. I'oss. •

Next eighty barks the Cretan king commands, 785
 Of Gnosus, Lyctus, and Gortyna's bands,
 And those who dwell where Rhytion's domes arise,
 Or white Lycastus glitters to the skies,
 Or where by Phæstus silver Jardan runs ;
 Crete's hundred cities pour forth all her sons. 790
 These march'd, Idomeneus, beneath thy care,
 And Merion, dreadful as the god of war.

Tlepolemus, the son of Hercules,
 Led nine swift vessels through the foamy seas ;
 From Rhodes, with everlasting sunshine bright, 795
 Jalyssus, Lindus, and Camirus white.
 His captive mother fierce Alcides bore
 From Ephyr's walls, and Sellè's winding shore,
 Where mighty towns in ruins spread the plain,
 And saw their blooming warriors early slain. 800
 The hero, when to manly years he grew,
 Alcides' uncle, old Licymnius, slew ;
 For this constrain'd to quit his native place,
 And shun the vengeance of th' Herculean race,
 A fleet he built, and with a numerous train 805
 Of willing exiles, wander'd o'er the main ;
 Where, many seas and many sufferings past,
 On happy Rhodes the chief arriv'd at last :
 There in three tribes divides his native band,
 And rules them peaceful in a foreign land ; 810
 Increas'd and prosper'd in their new abodes
 By mighty Jovè, the sire of men and gods ;
 With joy they saw the growing empire rise,
 And showers of wealth descending from the skies.

Three ships with Nireus sought the Trojan shore, 815
 Nireus, whom Aglæo to Charopus bore,
 Nireus, in faultless shape, and blooming grace,
 The loveliest youth of all the Grecian race ;
 Pelides only match'd his early charms ;
 But few his troops, and small his strength in arms. 820

Next thirty galleys cleave the liquid plain,
 Of those Calydnæ's sea-girt isles contain ;
 With them the youth of Nisyrus repair,
 Casus the strong, and Crapathus the fair ;
 Cos, where Eurypylus possess'd the sway, 825
 Till great Alcides made the realms obey :
 These Antiphus and bold Phidippus bring,
 Sprung from the god by Thessalus the king.

Now, Muse, recount Pelasgic Argos' powers,
 From Alos, Alopè, and Trechin's towers ;

From Phthia's spacious vales ; and Hella, bless'd
 With female beauty far beyond the rest.
 Full fifty ships beneath Achilles' care
 Th' Achaians, Myrmidons, Hellenians bear ;
 Thessalians all, though various in their name, 836
 The same their nation, and their chief the same.
 But now inglorious, stretch'd along the shore,
 They hear the brazen voice of war no more ;
 No more the foe they face in dire array :
 Close in his fleet their angry leader lay ; 840
 Since fair Briseis from his arms was torn.
 The noblest spoil from sack'd Myrnessus borne,
 Then, when the chief the Theban walls o'erthrew,
 And the bold sons of great Evenus slew.
 There mourn'd Achilles, plunged in depth of care, 845
 But soon to rise in slaughter, blood, and war.
 To these the youth of Phylacè succeed,
 Itona, famous for her fleecy breed,
 And grassy Pteleon deck'd with cheerful greens,
 The bowers of Ceres, and the sylvan scenes, 850
 Sweet Pyrrhasus, with blooming flowerets crown'd,
 And Antron's wat'ry dens, and cavern'd ground.
 These own'd as chief Protesilas the brave,
 Who now lay silent in the gloomy grave :
 The first who boldly touch'd the Trojan shore 855
 And dyed a Phrygian lance with Grecian gore ;
 There lies, far distant from his native plain ;
 Unfinish'd his proud palaces remain,
 And his sad consort beats her breast in vain.
 His troops in forty ships Podarces led, 860
 Iphiclus' son, and brother to the dead ;
 Nor he unworthy to command the host ;
 Yet still they mourn'd their ancient leader lost.
 The men who Glaphyra's fair soil partake,
 Where hills encircle Boëbe's lowly lake, 865
 Where Phœræ hears the neighbouring waters fall,
 Or proud Iolcus lifts her airy wall,
 In ten black ships embark'd for Ilion's shore,
 With bold Eumelus, whom Alcestè bore ;
 All Pelias' race Alcestè far outshin'd, 870
 The grace and glory of the beautiful kind.<sup>24</sup>

The troops Methonè, or Thaumacia yields,
 Olizon's rocks, or Melibœa's fields,
 With Philoctetes sail'd, whose matchless art
 From the tough bow directs the feather'd dart. 875
 Seven were his ships : each vessel fifty row,
 Skill'd in his science of the dart and bow.
 But he lay raging on the Lemnian ground ;
 A poisonous Hydra gave the burning wound ;
 There groan'd the chief in agonizing pain, 880
 Whom Greece at length shall wish, nor wish in vain.<sup>25</sup>
 His forces Medon led from Lemnos' shore,
 Oileus' son, whom beauteous Rhesa bore.
 Th' Æchalian race, in those high towers contain'd,
 Where once Eurytus in proud triumph reign'd, 885
 Or where her humbler turrets Tricca rears,
 Or where Ithomè, rough with rocks, appears ;
 In thirty sail the sparkling waves divide,
 Which Podalirius and Machaon guide.
 To these his skill their parent-god<sup>26</sup> imparts, 890
 Divine professors of the healing arts.
 The bold Ormenian and Asterian bands
 In forty barks Eurypylus commands,
 Where Titan hides his hoary head in snow,
 And where Hyperia's silver fountains flow. 895
 Thy troops, Argissa, Polypœtes leads,
 And Eleon, shelter'd by Olympus' shades,
 Gyrtônè's warriors ; and where Orthè lies,
 And Oloösson's chalky cliffs arise.
 Sprung from Prithoüs of immortal race, 900
 The fruit of fair Hippodamè's embrace.
 (That day, when, hurl'd from Pelion's cloudy head,
 To distant dens the shaggy Centaurs fled,)
 With Polypœtes join'd in equal sway,
 Leonteus leads, and forty ships obey. 905

<sup>25</sup> Philoctetes, while he cleansed the altar of Minerva in Lemnos, was bitten by a serpent, and left there by the Greeks, because the priests of Vulcan were accounted singularly skilful in the cure of such wounds. But it was decreed in heaven, that, without the arrows of Hercules, Troy should not be taken, which arrows Philoctetes had in his possession, consigned to him by their owner at his death. The Greeks regretted him, therefore, as a person necessary to the success of their enterprise ; and after the death of Achilles, Ulysses was despatched to Lemnos, that he might obtain the important arrows. He succeeded, and returned with them to the camp. Paris fell by one of them, and the destruction of Troy soon followed.
Cæcyper. <sup>26</sup> Æsculapius.

In twenty sail the bold Perrhæbians came
 From Cyphus, Guneus was their leader's name.
 With these the Enians join'd, and those who freeze
 Where cold Dodona lifts her holy trees ;
 Or where the pleasing Titaresius glides, 910
 And into Peneus rolls his easy tides ;
 Yet o'er the silver surface pure they flow,
 The sacred stream unmix'd with streams below,
 Sacred and awful ! From the dark abodes
 Styx pours them forth, the dreadful oath of gods ! 915
 Last under Prothous the Magnesians stood,
 Prothous the swift, of old Tenthrædon's blood ;
 Who dwell where Pelion, crown'd with piny boughs,
 Obscures the glade, and nods his shaggy brows :
 Or where through flowery Tompe Peneus stray'd, 920
 The region stretch'd beneath his mighty shade :)
 In forty sable barks they stemm'd the main ;
 Such were the chiefs, and such the Grecian train.
 Say next, O Muse ! of all Achaïa breeds,
 Who bravest fought, or rein'd the noblest steeds ? 925
 Eumelus' mares were foremost in the chase,
 As eagles fleet, and of Pheretian race ;
 Bred where Pieria's fruitful fountains flow,
 And train'd by him who bears the silver bow.
 Fierce in the fight, their nostrils breath'd a flame,
 Their height, their colour, and their age, the same ;
 O'er fields of death they whirl the rapid car,
 And break the ranks, and thunder through the
 Ajax in arms the first renown acquir'd,
 While stern Achilles in his wrath retir'd ; 935
 His was the strength that mortal might exceeds,
 And his th' unrivall'd race of heavenly steeds :)
 But Thetis' son now shines in arms no more ;
 His troops, neglected on the sandy shore,
 In empty air their sportive javelins throw, 940
 Or whirl the disk, or bend an idle bow :
 Unstain'd with blood his cover'd chariots stand ;
 Th' immortal coursers graze along the strand ;
 But the brave chiefs th' inglorious life deplor'd,
 And, wandering o'er the camp, requir'd their lord, 945
 Now, like a deluge, covering all around,
 The shining armies swept along the ground ;
 Swift as a flood of fire, when storms arise,
 Floats the wide field, and blazes to the skies.
 Earth groan'd beneath them ; as when angry Jove 950
 Hurls down the fork'd lightning from above,

On Arimé<sup>27</sup> when he the thunder throws,
And fires Typhceus with redoubled blows,
Where Typhon, press'd beneath the burning load,
Still feels the fury of th' avenging god. 955

But various Iris, Jove's commands to bear,
Speeds on the wings of winds through liquid air;
In Priam's porch the Trojan chiefs she found,
The old consulting, and the youths around;
Polites' shape, the monarch's son, she chose, 960
Who from Æetes' tomb observ'd the foes,
High on the mound; from whence in prospect lay
The fields, the tents, the navy, and the bay.
In this dissembled form she hastes to bring
Th' unwelcome message to the Phrygian king: 965

'Cease to consult, the time for action calls,
'War, horrid war, approaches to your walls!
'Assembled armies oft have I beheld,
'But ne'er till now such numbers charged a field. 970
'Thick as autumnal leaves, or driving sand,
'The moving squadrons blacken all the strand.
'Thou, godlike Hector! all thy force employ,
'Assemble all th' united bands of Troy;
'In just array let every leader call
'The foreign troops: this day demands them all.' 975

The voice divine the mighty chief alarms;
The council breaks, the warriors rush to arms.
The gates unfolding pour forth all their train,
Nations on nations fill the dusky plain,
Men, steeds, and chariots, shake the trembling ground; 980
The tumult thickens, and the skies resound.
Amidst the plain in sight of Ilion stands
A rising mount, the work of human hands;
(This for Myrinne's tomb th' immortals know,
Though call'd Bateia in the world below;) 985
Beneath their chiefs in martial order here
Th' auxiliar troops and Trojan hosts appear.

The godlike Hector, high above the rest,
Shakes his huge spear, and nods his plumed crest:

<sup>27</sup> The wind or the original is Arima. From Homer's Εἰς Ἀρίμοις. Virgil seems to have formed his Inarime:

Inarime Jovis imperis imposita Typhæo; Æn. ix. 716;
which has been adopted by Ovid, Valerius Flaccus, and other Latin poets. Arima or Arimi is generally supposed to have been a district or range of mountains in Asia Minor; but Virgil makes his Inarime an island on the coast of Campania.

- In throngs around his native bands appear, 990
 And groves of lances glitter in the air.
 Divine Æneas brings the Dardan race,
 Anchises' son, by Venus' stol'n embrace,
 Born in the shades of Ida's secret grove,
 (A mortal mixing with the queen of love;) 995
 Archilochus and Acamas divide
 The warrior's toils, and combat by his side,
 Who fair Zeleia's wealthy valleys till,
 Fast by the foot of Ida's sacred hill;
 Or drink, Æsepus, of thy sable flood; 1000
 Were led by Pandarus, of regal blood.
 To whom his art Apollo deign'd to shew,
 Graced with the present of his shafts and bow.
 From rich Apesus and Adrestia's towers,
 High Tereë's summits, and Pityea's bowers; 1005
 From these the congregated troops obey
 Young Amphius and Adrastus' equal sway;
 Old Merops' sons; whom, skill'd in fates to come,
 The sire forewarn'd, and prophesied their doom:
 Fate urg'd them on! the sire forewarn'd in vain, 1010
 They rush'd to war, and perish'd on the plain.
 From Practius' stream, Percotë's pasture lands,
 And Sestos and Abydos' neighbouring strands,
 From great Arisba's walls and Sellè's coast,
 Asius Hyrtacides conducts his host: 1015
 High on his car he shakes the flowing reins,
 His fiery coursers thunder o'er the plains.
 The fierce Pelasgi next, in war renown'd,
 March from Larissa's ever-fertile ground:
 In equal arms their brother leaders shine, 1020
 Hippothous bold, and Pyleus the divine.
 Next Acamas and Pyroüs lead their hosts
 In dread array, from Thracia's wintry coasts;
 Round the black realms where Hellespontus roars,
 And Boreas beats the hoarse-resounding shores. 1025
 With great Euphemus the Ciconians move,
 Sprung from Trœzenian Cœus, loved by Jove.
 Pyramenes the Pæonian troops attend,
 Skill'd in the fight their crooked bows to bend;
 From Axius' ample bed he leads them on, 1030
 Axius, that laves the distant Amydon,
 Axius, that swells with all his neighbouring rills,
 And wide around the floating region fills.
 The Paphlagonians Pylamenes rules,
 Where rich Henetia breeds her savage mules, 1035

Where Erythinus' rising cliffs are seen,
 Thy groves of box, Cytorus! ever green;
 And where Ægialus and Cromna lie,
 And lofty Sesamus invades the sky;
 And where Parthenius, roll'd thro' banks of flowers, 1040
 Reflects her bordering palaces and bowers.

Here march'd in arms the Halizonian band,
 Whom Odius and Epistrophus command;
 From those far regions where the sun refines
 The ripening silver in Alybean mines. 1045

There, mighty Chromis led the Mysian train,
 And augur Ennomus, inspired in vain,
 For stern Achilles lopp'd his sacred head.
 Roll'd down Scamander with the vulgar dead.

Phorcys and brave Ascanius here unite 1050
 Th' Ascanian Phrygians, eager for the fight.

Of those who round Mæonia's realms reside,
 Or whom the vales in shade of Tmolus hide,
 Mestlec and Antiphus the charge partake;
 Born on the banks of Gyges' silent lake. 1055

There, from the fields where wild Mæander flows,
 High Mycalè, and Latmos' shady brows,
 And proud Miletus, came the Carian throngs,
 With mingled clamours, and with barb'rous tongues.

Amphimachus and Naustes guide the train, 1060
 Naustes the bold, Amphimachus the vain,
 Who, trick'd with gold, and glittering on his car,
 Rode like a woman to the field of war.

Fool that he was! by fierce Achilles slain, 1065
 The river swept him to the briny main:
 There whelm'd with waves the gaudy warrior lies;
 The valiant victor seiz'd the golden prize.

The forces last in fair array succeed,
 Which blameless Glaucus and Sarpedon lead;
 The warlike bands that distant Lycia yields, 1070
 Where gulfy Xanthus foams along the fields.<sup>28</sup>

<sup>28</sup> If we look upon this Catalogue with an eye to ancient learning, it may be observed, that however fabulous the other parts of Homer's poem, may be, according to the nature of Epic poetry, this account of the people, princes, and countries, is purely historical, founded on the real transactions of those times, and by far the most valuable piece of history and geography left us concerning the state of Greece in that early period. Greece was then divided into several Dynasties, which our author has enumerated under their respective princes; and his division was looked upon so exact, that we are told of many controversies concerning the boundaries of Grecian cities, which have been decided upon the authority of this piece. Euse-

Cathius has collected together the following instances. The city of Calydon was adjudged to the Ætolians notwithstanding the pretensions of Æolia, because Homer had ranked it among the towns belonging to the former. Sestos was given to those of Abydos, upon the plea that he had said the Abydonians were possessors of Sestos, Abydos, and Arisbe. When the Milesians and people of Priene disputed their claim to Mycale, a verse of Homer carried it in favour of the Milesians. And the Athenians were put in possession of Salamis by another which was cited by Solon, or (as some think) interpolated by him for that purpose. Nay, in so high estimation has the catalogue been held, that (as Porphyry has written) there have been laws in some nations for the youth to learn it by heart, and particularly Cerdias, (whom Cuperus de Apophth. Homer. takes to be Cercyus, a lawgiver of the Megalopolitans,) made it one to his countrymen.

But if we consider the catalogue purely as poetical, it will not want its beauties in that light. Rapsin, who was none of the most superstitious admirers of our author, reckons it among those parts which had particularly charmed him. We may observe first, what an air of probability is spread over the whole poem by the particularizing of every nation and people concerned in this war. Secondly, what an entertaining scene he presents to us, of so many countries drawn in their liveliest and most natural colours, while we wander along with him amidst a beautiful variety of towns, havens, forests, vineyards, groves, mountains, and rivers; and are perpetually amused with his observations on the different soils, products, situations, or prospects. Thirdly, what a noble review he passes before us of so mighty an army, drawn out in order, troop by troop; which, had the number only been told in the gross, had never filled the reader with so great a notion of the importance of the action. Fourthly, the description of the differing arms and manner of fighting of the soldiers, and the various attitudes he has given to the commanders: of these leaders, the greatest part are either the immediate sons of gods, or the descendants of gods; and how great an idea must we have of a war, to the waging of which so many demi-gods and heroes are assembled! Fifthly, the several artful compliments he paid by this means to his own country in general, and many of his contemporaries in particular, by a celebration of the genealogies, ancient seats, and dominions of the great men of his time. Sixthly, the agreeable mixture of narrations from passages of history or fables, with which he amuses and relieves us at proper intervals. And lastly, the admirable judgment wherewith he introduces this whole catalogue, just at a time when the posture of affairs in the army rendered such a review of absolute necessity to the Greeks; and in a pause of action, while each was refreshing himself to prepare for the ensuing battles. Pope.

BOOK III.<sup>1</sup>

THE ARGUMENT.

THE DUEL OF MENELAUS AND PARIS.

The armies being ready to engage, a single combat is agreed upon between Menelaus and Paris (by the intervention of Hector) for the determination of the war. Iris is sent to call Helena to behold the fight. She leads her to the walls of Troy, where Priam sat with his counsellors, observing the Grecian leaders on the plain below, to whom Helen gives an account of the war of them. The kings on either part take the solemn oath for the conditions of the combat. The duel ensues, wherein Paris being overcome, is snatched away in a cloud by Venus, and transported to his apartment. She then calls Helen from the walls, and brings the lovers together. Agamemnon, on the part of the Grecians, demands the restoration of Helen, and the performance of the articles.

The three-and-twentieth day still continues throughout this book. The scene is sometimes in the field before Troy, and sometimes in Troy itself.

Thus by their leader's care each martial band
 Moves into ranks, and stretches o'er the land.
 With shouts the Trojans, rushing from afar,
 Proclaim their motions, and provoke the war:

<sup>1</sup> Of all the books of the Iliad, there is scarce any more pleasing than the third. It may be divided into five parts, each of which has a beauty different from the other. The first contains what passed between the two armies, and the proposal of the combat between Paris and Menelaus: the attention and suspense of these mighty hosts, which were just upon the point of joining battle, and the lofty manner of offering and accepting this important and unexpected challenge, have something in them wonderfully pompous, and of an amusing solemnity. The second part, which describes the behaviour of Helen in this juncture, her conference with the old king and his counsellors, with the review of the heroes from the battlements, is an episode entirely of another sort, which excels in the natural and pathetic. The third consists of the ceremonies of the oath on both sides, and the preliminaries to the combat; with the beautiful retreat of Priam, who, in the tenderness of a parent, withdraws from the sight of the duel. These particulars detain the reader in expectation, and heighten his impatience for the fight itself. The fourth is the description of the duel, an exact piece of painting, where we see every attitude, motion, and action of the combatants particularly and distinctly, and which concludes with a surprising propriety, in the rescue of Paris by Venus. The machine of that goddess, which makes the fifth part, and whose end is to reconcile Paris and Helena, is admirable in every circumstance; the remonstrance

So when inclement winters vex the plain 5
 With piercing frosts, or thick-descending rain,
 To warmer seas the cranes embodied fly,
 With noise, and order, through the mid-way sky ;
 To pigmy nations wounds and death they bring,
 And all the war descends upon the wing. 10
 But silent, breathing rage, resolv'd, and skill'd
 By mutual aids to fix a doubtful field,
 Swift march the Greeks : the rapid dust around
 Darkening rises from the labour'd ground. 15
 Thus from his flaggy wings when Notus sheds
 A night of vapours round the mountain-heads,
 Swift-gliding mists the dusky fields invade,
 To thieves more grateful than the midnight shade ;
 While scarce the swains their feeding flocks survey,
 Lost and confus'd amidst the thicken'd day : 20
 So, wrapt in gathering dust, the Grecian train,
 A moving cloud, swept on, and hid the plain.
 Now front to front the hostile armies stand,
 Eager of fight, and only wait command :
 When to the van, before the sons of fame 25
 Whom Troy sent forth, the beauteous Paris came :<sup>2</sup>
 In form a god ! the panther's speckled hide
 Flow'd o'er his armour with an easy pride ;
 His bended bow across his shoulders flung,
 His sword beside him negligently hung ; 30

she holds with the goddess, the reluctance with which she obeys her, the reproaches she casts upon Paris, and the flattery and courtship with which he so soon wins her over to him. Helen (the main cause of this war) was not to be made an odious character ; she is drawn by this great master with the finest strokes, as a frail, but not as an abandoned creature. She has perpetual struggles of virtue on one side, and softnesses which overcome them on the other. Our author has been remarkably careful to tell us this ; whenever he but slightly names her in the foregoing part of his work, she is represented at the same time as repentant ; and it is thus we see her at first at her first appearance in the present book ; which is one of the shortest of the whole Iliad, but in recompense has beauties almost in every line, and most of them so obvious, that to acknowledge them we need only to read them. Pope.

Two pointed spears he shook with gallant grace,
And dared the bravest of the Grecian race.

As thus, with glorious air and proud disdain,
He boldly stalk'd, the foremost on the plain,
Him Menelaus, lov'd of Mars, espies, 35
With heart elated, and with joyful eyes :
So joys a lion, if the branching deer
Or mountain goat, his bulky prize, appear ;
In vain the youths oppose, the mastiff bay,
The lordly savage rends the panting prey. 40
Thus, fond of vengeance, with a furious bound,
In clanging arms he leaps upon the ground
From his high chariot, ~~him~~ approaching near,
The beauteous champion views with marks of fear,
Smit with a conscious sense, retires behind 45
And shuns the fate he well deserved to find.
As when some shepherd, from the rustling trees
Shot forth to view, a scaly serpent sees ;
Trembling and pale, he starts with wild affright,
And, all confus'd, precipitates his flight : 50
So from the king the shining warrior flies,
And plung'd amid the thickest Trojans lies.
As godlike Hector sees the prince retreat,
He thus upbraids him with a generous heat :
' Unhappy Paris ! but to women brave ! 55
' So fairly form'd, and only to deceive !
' Oh, hast thou died when first thou saw'st the light,
' Or died at least before thy nuptial rite !
' A better fate, than vainly thus to boast,
' And fly, the scandal of thy Trojan host. 60
' Gods ! how the scornful Greeks exult to see
' Their fears of danger undeceived in thee !
' Thy figure promis'd with a martial air,
' But ill thy soul supplies a form so fair.

<sup>3</sup> This is the first place of the poem where Hector makes a figure, and as he is not the chief hero of the Iliad, he is at least the most amiable. He has no other blemish than that he fights in an unjust cause, which Homer has been careful to tell us he would not do, if his opinion were followed. But since he cannot prevail, the affection he bears to his parents and kindred, and his desire of defending them, incites him to do his utmost for their safety. It may be added, that Homer having so many Greeks to celebrate, makes them shine in their turns, and singly in their several books, one succeeding in the absence of another : whereas Hector appears in every battle the life and soul of his party, and the constant bulwark against every enemy : he stands against Agamemnon's magnanimity, Diomed's bravery, Ajax's strength, and Achilles' fury. Pope.

' In former days, in all thy gallant pride, 65
 ' When thy tall ships triumphant stemm'd the tide,
 ' When Greece beheld thy painted canvas flow,
 ' And crowds stood wondering at the passing show ;
 ' Say, was it thus, with such a baffled mien,
 ' You met th' approaches of the Spartan queen, 70
 ' Thus from her realm convey'd the beauteous prize,
 ' And both her warlike lords' outshin'd in Helen's eyes ?
 ' This deed, thy foes' delight, thy own disgrace,
 ' Thy father's grief, and ruin of thy race ;
 ' This deed recalls thee to the proffer'd fight ; 75
 ' Or hast thou injur'd whom thou dar'st not right ?
 ' Soon to thy cost the field would make thee know
 ' Thou keep'st the consort of a braver foe.
 ' Thy graceful form instilling soft desire,
 ' Thy curling tresses, and thy silver lyre, 80
 ' Beauty and youth, in vain to these you trust,
 ' When youth and beauty shall be laid in dust :
 ' Troy yet may wake, and one avenging blow
 ' Crush the dire author of his country's woe.
 ' His silence here, with blushes, Paris breaks : 85
 ' 'Tis just, my brother, what your anger speaks :<sup>d</sup>
 ' But who like thee can boast a soul sedate,
 ' So firmly proof to all the shocks of fate ?
 ' Thy force, like steel, a temper'd hardness shews,
 ' Still edged to wound, and still untired with blows, 90
 ' Like steel, uplifted by some strenuous swain,
 ' With falling woods to strow the wasted plain.
 ' Thy gifts I praise ; nor thou despise the charms
 ' With which a lover golden Venus arms ;
 ' Soft moving speech, and pleasing outward show, 95
 ' No wish can gain them, but the gods bestow.
 ' Yet, wouldst thou have the proffer'd combat stand,
 ' The Greeks and Trojans seat on either hand ;
 ' Then let a mid-way space our hosts divide,
 ' And on that stage of war the cause be tried : 100
 ' By Paris there the Spartan king be fought,
 ' For beauteous Helen and the wealth she brought ;
 ' And who his rival can in arms subdue,
 ' His be the fair, and his the treasure too.

<sup>d</sup> Theseus and Menelaus.      <sup>e</sup> This speech is a further opening of the true character of Paris. He is master of civility, no less well-bred to his own sex than courtly to the other. The reproof of Hector was of a severe nature, yet he receives it as from a brother and a friend, with candour and modesty. Pope.

- ' Thus with a lasting league your toils may cease, 105
 ' And Troy possess her fertile fields in peace ;
 ' Thus may the Greeks review their native shore,
 ' Much fam'd for generous steeds, for beauty more.
 He said. The challenge Hector heard with joy,<sup>s</sup>
 Then with his spear restrain'd the youth of Troy, 110
 Held by the midst, athwart ; and near the foe
 Advanced with steps majestically slow ;
 While round his dauntless head the Grecians pour
 Their stones and arrows in a mingled shower..
 Then thus the monarch great Atides cried : 115
 ' Forbear, ye warriors ! lay the darts aside :
 ' A parley Hector asks, a message bears ;
 ' We know him by the various plume he wears.
 Aw'd by his high command the Greeks attend,
 The tumult silence, and the fight suspend. 120
 ' While from the centre Hector rolls his eyes
 On either host, and thus to both applies :
 ' Hear, all ye Trojan, all ye Grecian bands !
 ' What Paris, author of the war, demands.
 ' Your shining swords within the sheath restrain, 125
 ' And pitch your lances in the yielding plain.
 Here, in the midst, in either army's sight,
 He dares the Spartan king to single fight ;
 And wills, that Helen and the ravish'd spoil,
 That caused the contest, shall reward the toil. 130
 Let these the brave triumphant victor grace,
 And differing nations part in leagues of peace.
 He spoke : in still suspense on either side
 Each army stood. The Spartan chief replied :
 ' Me too, ye warriors, hear, whose fatal right 135
 ' A world engages in the toils of fight-
 ' To me the labour of the field resign ;
 ' Me Paris injur'd ; all the war be mine.
 ' Fall he that must, beneath his rival's arms,
 ' And live the rest secure of future harms. 140
 ' Two lambs, devoted by your country's rite,
 ' To Earth a sable, to the sun a white,
 ' Prepare, ye Trojans ! while a third we bring Select to Jove, th' inviolable king.
 ' Let reverend Priam in the truce engage, 145
 ' And add the sanction of considerate age ;
 ' Hector stays not to reply to his brother, but runs away with the challenge immediately. He looks upon all the Trojans as disgraced by the late flight of Paris, and thinks not a moment is to be lost to regain the honour-of his country. Pope.

' His sons are faithless, headlong in debate,
 ' And youth itself an empty wavering state :
 ' Cool age advances venerably wise,
 ' Turns on all hands its deep-discerning eyes ;
 ' Sees what befell, and what may yet befall,
 ' Concludes from both, and best provides for all.'

150

The nations hear, with rising hopes possess'd,
 And peaceful prospects dawn in every breast.
 Within the lines they drew their steeds around,
 And from their chariots issued on the ground :

155

Next all, unbuckling the rash mail they wore,
 Laid their bright arms along the sable shore.
 On either side the meeting hosts are seen
 With lances fix'd, and close the space between.
 Two heralds now, despatch'd to Troy, invite
 The Phrygian monarch to the peaceful rite ;
 Talthybius hastens to the fleet, to bring
 The lamb for Jove, th' inviolable king.

160

Meantime, to beauteous Helen, from the skies
 The various goddess of the rainbow flies :
 (Like fair Laodice in form and face,
 The loveliest nymph of Priam's royal race).
 Her in the palace, at her loom she found :
 The golden web her own sad story crown'd.
 The Trojan wars she weav'd, (herself the prize,)

165

And the dire triumphs of her fatal eyes.
 To whom the goddess of the painted bow :
 ' Approach, and view the wondrous scene below !
 ' Each hardy Greek, and valiant Trojan knight,
 ' So dreadful late, and furious for the fight,
 ' Now rest their spears, or lean upon their shields ;
 ' Ceas'd is the war, and silent all the fields.

175

' Paris alone and Sparta's king advance,
 ' In single fight to toss the beamy lance ;
 ' Each met in arms, the fate of combat tries,
 ' Thy love the motive, and thy charms the prize.'

180

This said, the many-colour'd maid inspires
 Her husband's love, and wakes her former fires ;
 Her country, parents, all that once were dear,
 Rush to her thought, and force a tender tear.
 O'er her fair face a snowy veil she threw,
 And, softly sighing, from the loom withdrew.
 Her handmaids Clymené and Æthra wait
 Her silent footsteps to the Scæan gate.

* This is a very agreeable fiction, to represent Helena weaving in a large veil, or piece of tapestry, the story of the Trojan war. Pope

There sat the seniors of the Trojan race;
 (Old Priam's chiefs, and most in Priam's grace;) 195
 The king the first; Thymcetes at his side;
 Lampus and Clytius, long in council tried;
 Panthus, and Hicetion, once the strong;
 And next the wisest of the reverend throng,
 Antenor grave, and sage Ucalegon,
 Lean'd on the walls, and bask'd before the sun.
 Chiefs, who no more in bloody fights engage,
 But, wise through time, and narrative with age, 200

A bloodless race,
 These, when the Spartan
 In secret own'd resistless
 They cried. 'No wonder, such celestial charms
 For nine long years have set the world in arms!
 What winning graces! what majestic mien!
 She moves a goddess, and she looks a queen.
 Yet hence, oh heaven! convey that fatal fado,
 And from destruction save the Trojan race.' 210
 The good old Priam welcomed her, and cried,
 Approach, my child, and grace thy father's side.
 See on the plain thy Grecian spouse appears,
 The friends and kindred of thy former years.
 The crime of thine our present sufferings draws,
 Thou, but heaven's disposing will, the cause;
 The gods these armies and this force employ,
 The hostile gods conspire the fate of Troy.
 But lift thine eyes, and say, what Greek is he,
 (Far as from hence these aged orbs can see.) 220
 Around whose brow such martial graces shine,
 So tall, so awful, and almost divine?
 Though some of larger stature tread the green,
 None match his grandeur and exalted mien:
 He seems a monarch and his country's pride.' 225
 Thus ceas'd the king, and thus the fair replied:
 Before thy presence, father, I appear
 With conscious shame and reverential fear.
 Ah! had I died, ere to these walls I fled,
 False to my country, and my nuptial bed, 230

This is one of the most just and natural images in the world. The garrulity so common to old men, their delight in associating with each other, the feeble sound of their voices, the pleasure they take on a sun-shining day, the effects of decay in their chilliness, leanness, and scarcity of blood, are all circumstances exactly paralleled in this comparison. Pope.

- ' My brothers, friends, and daughter left behind,
 ' False to them all, to Paris only kind !
 ' For this I mourn, till grief or dire disease
 ' Shall waste the form whose crime it was to please !
 ' The king of kings, Atrides, you survey, 235
 ' Great in the war, and great in arts of sway :
 ' My brother once, before my days of shame :
 ' And oh ! that still he bore a brother's name !
 With wonder Priam view'd the godlike man,
 Extoll'd the happy prince, and thus began : 240
 ' O blest Atrides ! born to prosperous fate,
 ' Successful monarch of a mighty state !
 ' How vast thy empire ! Of yon matchless train
 ' What numbers lost, what numbers yet remain !
 ' In Phrygia once were gallant armies known, 245
 ' In ancient time, when Otreus fill'd the throne ;
 ' When godlike Mygdon led their troops of horse,
 ' And I, to join them, rais'd the Trojan force :
 ' Against the manlike Amazons we stood,
 ' And Sangar's stream<sup>a</sup> ran purple with their blood. 250
 ' But far inferior those, in martial grace
 ' And strength of numbers, to this Grecian race.'
 This said, once more he view'd the warrior-train :
 ' What's he, whose arms lie scatter'd on the plain ?
 ' Broad is his breast, his shoulders larger spread, 255
 ' Though great Atrides overtops his head.
 ' Nor yet appear his care and conduct small ;
 ' From rank to rank he moves, and orders all.
 ' The stately ram thus measures o'er the ground,
 ' And, master of the flocks, surveys them round. 260
 Then Helen thus : ' Whom your discerning eyes
 ' Have singled out, is Ithacus the wise :
 ' A barren island boasts his glorious birth ;
 ' His fame for wisdom fills the spacious earth.'
 Antenor took the word, and thus began : 265
 ' Myself, O king ! have seen that wondrous man ;
 ' When, trusting Jove and hospitable laws,
 ' To Troy he came, to plead the Grecian cause ;
 ' (Great Menelaus urged the same request :)
 ' My house was honour'd with each royal guest : 270
 ' I knew their persons, and admired their parts,
 Both brave in arms, and both approv'd in arts.

'Erect, the Spartan most engaged our view,<sup>10</sup>
 'Ulysses seated greater reverence drew.
 'When Atreus' son harangu'd the list'ning train, 275
 'Just was his sense, and his expression plain,
 'His words succinct, yet full, without a fault;
 'He spoke no more than just the thing he ought.
 'But when Ulysses rose, in thought profound,
 'His modest eyes he fix'd upon the ground;
 'As one unskill'd or dumb, he seem'd to stand, 280
 'Nor rais'd his head, nor stretch'd his sceptred hand,
 'But when he speaks, what elocution flows!
 'Soft as the fleeces of descending snows,
 'The copious accents fall with easy art; 285
 'Melting they fall, and sink into the heart!
 'Wondering we hear, and, fix'd in deep surprise,
 'Our ears refute the censure of our eyes.'
 'The king then ask'd, (as yet the camp he view'd,) 290
 'What chief is that, with giant strength endued,
 'Whose brawny shoulders, and whose swelling chest,
 'And lofty stature, far exceed the rest?
 'Ajax the great,' (the beauteous queen repli'd,)
 'Himself a host: the Grecian strength and pride.
 'See! bold Idomeneus superior towers 295
 'Amidst yon circle of his Cretan powers,
 'Great as a god! I saw him once before,
 'With Menelaus on the Spartan shore.
 'The rest I know, and could in order name;
 'All valiant chiefs, and men of mighty fame. 300
 'Yet two are wanting of the numerous train,
 'Whom long my eyes have sought, but sought in vain;
 'Castor and Pollux, first in martial force,
 'One bold on foot, and one renown'd for horse.
 'My brothers these; the same our native shore, 305
 'One house contain'd us, as one mother bore.
 'Perhaps the chiefs, from warlike toils at ease,
 'For distant Troy refus'd to sail the seas:
 'Perhaps their sword some nobler quarrel draws,
 'Ashamed to combat in their sister's cause.' 310
 So spoke the fair, nor knew her brothers' doom,
 'Wrapt in the cold embraces of the tomb;
 'Adorn'd with honours in their native shore,
 'Silent they slept, and heard of wars no more.

<sup>10</sup> This, as Pope has well observed, is perfectly well managed. It was not fit, that on such an occasion, Menelaus should remain unnoticed, yet Helen was not the proper person to notice him; the poet therefore employs Antenor to give him his just eulogium Cowper.

- Meantime, the heralds, through the crowded town,
 Bring the rich wine and destin'd victims down. 315
 Idæus' arms the golden goblets press'd,
 Who thus the venerable king address'd :
 ' Arise, O father of the Trojan state !
 ' The nations call, thy joyful people wait, 320
 ' To seal the truce, and end the dire debate.
 ' Paris, thy son, and Sparta's king advance,
 ' In measur'd lists to toss the weighty lance ;
 ' And who his rival shall in arms subdue,
 ' His be the dame, and his the treasure too. 325
 ' Thus with a lasting league our toils may cease,
 ' And Troy possess her fertile fields in peace :
 ' So shall the Greeks review their native shore,
 ' Much fam'd for generous steeds, for Beauty more.'
 With grief he heard, and bade the chiefs prepare 330
 To join his milk-white coursers to the car :
 He mounts the seat, Antenor at his side ;
 The gentle steeds through Scæa's<sup>11</sup> gates they guide :
 Next from the car, descending on the plain,
 Amid the Grecian host and Trojan train 335
 Slow they proceed : the sage Ulysses then
 Arose, and with him rose the king of men.
 On either side a sacred herald stands ;
 The wine they mix, and on each monarch's hands
 Pour the full urn ; then draws the Grecian lord 340
 His cutlass, sheath'd beside his ponderous sword ;
 From the sign'd victims crops the curling hair,
 The heralds part it, and the princes share ;<sup>12</sup>
 Then loudly thus before th' attentive bands
 He calls the gods, and spreads his lifted hands : 345
 ' O first and greatest power ! whom all obey,
 ' Who high on Ida's holy mountain sway,
 ' Eternal Jove ! and you bright Orb that roll
 ' From east to west, and view from pole to pole !
 ' Thou mother Earth ! and all ye living Floods ! 350
 ' Infernal Furies, and Tartarean gods,
 ' Who rule the dead, and horrid woes prepare
 ' For perjurd kings, and all who falsely swear !
 ' Hear, and be witness. If, by Paris slain,
 ' Great Menelaus press the fatal plain ; 355

<sup>12</sup> Each prince received a portion, that each might share in the obligation of the ceremony. It was afterwards, when fire was used, thrown into the fire ; if no fire was used, as on the present occasion, and as in B. xix. 261, it was probably thrown on the ground with the libation.

'The dame and treasures let the Trojan keep;
 'And Greece returning plough the watery deep.
 'If by my brother's lance the Trojan bleed
 'Be his the wealth and beauteous dame desired :
 'Th' appointed fine let Ilion justly pay, 360
 'And age to age record the signal day.
 'This if the Phrygians shall refuse to yield,
 'Arms must revenge, and Mars decide the field.'

With that the chief the tender victims slew,
 And in the dust their bleeding bodies threw : 365
 The vital spirit issued at the wound,
 And left the members quivering on the ground.
 From the same urn they drink the mingled wine,
 And add libations to the pow'rs divine.

While thus their prayers united mount the sky : 370
 'Hear, mighty Jove ! and hear, ye gods on high !
 'And may their blood, who first the league confound,
 'Shed like this wine, disdain the thirsty ground ;
 'May all their consorts serve promiscuous lust,
 'And all their race be scatter'd as the dust !' 375

Thus either host their imprecations join'd,
 Which Jove refus'd, and mingled with the wind.
 The rites now finish'd, reverend Priam rose,
 And thus express'd a heart o'ercharged with woes ;
 'Ye Greeks and Trojans, let the chiefs engage, 380
 'But spare the weakness of my feeble age :
 'In yonder walls that object let me shun,
 'Nor view the danger of so dear a son.
 'Whose arms shall conquer, and what prince shall fall,
 'Heaven only knows, for heaven disposes all.'

This said, the hoary king no longer stay'd,
 But on his car the slaughter'd victims laid ;<sup>13</sup>
 Then seiz'd the reins his gentle steeds to guide,
 And drove to Troy, Antenor at his side.

Bold Hector and Ulysses now dispose 390
 The lists of combat, and the ground enclose ;
 Next to decide by sacred lots prepare,
 Who first shall lance his pointed spear in air.
 The people pray with elevated hands,
 And words like these are heard thro' all the bands : 395
 'Immortal Jove ! high heaven's superior lord,
 'On lofty Ida's holy mount ador'd !

<sup>13</sup> Priam carries home the lambs with him, that he may send them round the city for the information of those not present at the ceremony ; for it was customary for the natives of a place to make that use of the victims slain in confirmation of a sworn treaty. Cowper,

' Whoe'er involv'd us in this dire debate,
 ' Oh give that author of the war to fate
 ' And shades eternal ! let division cease,
 ' And joyful nations join in leagues of peace.'

400

With eyes averted Hector hastes to turn
 The lots of fight, and shakes the brazen urn.
 Then, Paris, thine leap'd forth ; by fatal chance
 Ordain'd the first to whirl the mighty lance.

405

Both armies sat, the combat to survey.
 Beside each chief his azure armour lay,
 And round the list the generous coursers neigh.
 The beauteous warrior now arrays for fight,
 In gilded arms magnificently bright ;
 The purple cuishes clasp his thighs around,
 With flowers adorn'd, with silver buckles bound :

410

Lycaon's<sup>14</sup> corslet his fair body dress'd,
 Braced in, and fitted to his softer breast ;
 A radiant baldric, o'er his shoulder tied,
 Sustain'd the sword that glitter'd at his side :
 His youthful face a polish'd helm o'erspread ;
 The waving horse-hair nodded on his head :
 His figur'd shield, a shining orb, he takes,
 And in his hand a pointed javelin shakes,
 With equal speed, and fir'd by equal charms,
 The Spartan hero sheaths his limbs in arms :

415

Now round the lists th' admiring armies stand,
 With javelins fix'd, the Greek and Trojan band.
 Amidst the dreadful vale the chiefs advance,
 All pale with rage, and shake the threat'ning lance.
 The Trojan first his shining javelin threw :
 Full on Atrides' ringing shield it flew,

420

Nor pierced the brazen orb, but with a bound
 Leap'd from the buckler blunted on the ground.
 Atrides then his massy lance prepares,
 In act to throw, but first prefers his prayers :

425

' Give me, great Jove ! to punish lawless lust,<sup>15</sup>
 ' And lay the Trojan gasping in the dust ;
 ' Destroy th' aggressor, aid my righteous cause,
 ' Avenge the breach of hospitable laws !
 ' Let this example future times reclaim,
 ' And guard from wrong fair friendship's holy name.'

<sup>15</sup> Homer puts a prayer in the mouth of Menelaus, but none in Paris's, Menelaus is the person injured and innocent, and may therefore apply to Jove for justice; but Paris, who is the criminal, remains silent. Spondanous.

He said, and, pois'd in air, the javelin sent;
 Through Paris' shield the forceful weapon went, 440
 His corslet pierces, and his garment rends,
 And, glancing downward, near his flank descends.
 The wary Trojan, bending from the blow,
 Eludes the death, and disappoints his foe:
 But fierce Atrides wav'd his sword, and struck 445
 Full on his casque; the crested helmet shook;
 The brittle steel, unfaithful to his hand,
 Broke short: the fragments glitter'd on the sand
 The raging warrior to the spacious skies
 Rais'd his upbraiding voice, and angry eyes: 450
 'Then is it vain in Jove himself to trust?
 'And is it thus the gods assist the just?
 'When crimes provoke us, heaven success denies:
 'The dart falls harmless, and the falchion flies.'
 Furious he said, and toward the Grecian crews 455
 (Seiz'd by the crest) th' unhappy warrior drew;
 Struggling he follow'd, while th' embroider'd thong,
 That tied his helmet, dragg'd the chief along.
 Then had his ruin crown'd Atrides' joy,
 But Venus trembled for the prince of Troy: 460
 When seen she came, and burst the golden band;
 And left an empty helmet in his hand.
 The casque, enraged, amidst the Greeks he threw;
 The Greeks with smiles the polish'd trophy view.
 Then, as once more, he lifts the deadly dart, 465
 In thirst of vengeance, at his rival's heart,
 The queen of Love her favour'd champion shrouds
 (For gods can all things) in a veil of clouds.
 Rais'd from the field the panting youth she led,
 And gently laid him on the bridal bed, 470
 With pleasing sweets his fainting sense renews,
 And all the dome perfumes with heavenly dews.
 Meantime the brightest of the female kind,
 The matchless Helen, o'er the walls reclin'd.
 To her, beset with Trojan beauties, came,
 In borrow'd form, the laughter-loving dame.
 (She seem'd an ancient maid, well skill'd to cull
 The snowy fleece, and wind the twisted wool.)
 The goddess softly shook her silken vest
 That shed perfumes, and whispering thus address'd: 480
 'Haste, happy nymph! for thee thy Paris calls,
 Safe from the fight, in yonder lofty walls,
 Fair as a god! with odours round him spread
 He lies, and waits thee on the well-known bed

- Not like a warrior parted from the foe,
 'But some gay dancer in the public show.'
 She spoke, and Helen's secret soul was mov'd;
 She scorn'd the champion, but the man she lov'd.
 Fair Venus' neck, her eyes that sparkled fire,
 And breast, reveal'd the queen of soft desire. 485
 Struck with her presence, straight the lively red
 Forsook her cheek; and trembling thus she said:
 'Then is it still thy pleasure to deceive?
 'And woman's frailty always to believe?
 'Say, to new nations must I cross the main, 490
 'Or carry wars to some soft Asian plain?
 'For whom must Helen break her second vow?
 'What other Paris is thy darling now?
 'Left to Atrides (victor in the strife)
 'An odious conquest and a captive wife, 500
 'Hence let me sail: and, if thy Paris bear
 'My absence ill, let Venus ease his care.
 'A hand-maid goddess at his side to wait,
 'Renounce the glories of thy heavenly state,
 'Be fix'd for ever to the Trojan shore, 505
 'His spouse, or slave; and mount the skies no more.
 'For me, to lawless love no longer led,
 'I scorn the coward, and detest his bed;
 'His should I merit everlasting shame,
 'And keen reproach from every Phrygian dame: 510
 'Ill suits it now the joys of love to know,
 'Too deep my anguish, and too wild my woe.'
 Then thus, incens'd, the Paphian queen replies:
 'Obey the power from whom thy glories rise:
 'Should Venus leave thee, every charm must fly, 515
 'Fade from thy cheek, and languish in thy eye.
 'Cease to provoke me, lest I make thee more
 'The world's aversion, than their love before;
 'Now the bright prize for which mankind engage,
 'Then, the sad victim of the public rage.' 520
 At this, the fairest of her sex obey'd,
 And veil'd her blushes in a silken shade;
 Unseen, and silent, from the train she moves,
 Led by the goddess of the smiles and loves.
 Arriv'd, and enter'd at the palace gate, 525
 The maids officious round their mistress wait:
 Then all, dispersing, various tasks attend;
 The queen and goddess to the prince ascend.
 Full in her Paris' sight the queen of love
 Had placed the beauteous progeny of Jove; 530

Where, as he view'd her charms, she turn'd away
Her glowing eyes, and thus began to say :

' Is this the chief, who, lost to sense of shame,
' Late fled the field, and yet survives his fame ?
' Oh hadst thou died beneath the righteous sword
' Of that brave man whom once I call'd my lord !
' The boaster Paris oft desired the day
' With Sparta's king to meet in single fray :
' Go now, once more thy rival's rage excite,
' Provoke Atrides, and renew the fight :
' Yet Helen bids thee stay, lest thou unskill'd
' Shouldst fall an easy conquest on the field.'

535

The Prince replies : ' Ah cease, divinely fair,

' Nor add reproaches to the wounds I bear ;
' This day the foe prevail'd by Pallas' power ;
' We yet may vanquish in a happier hour :
' There want not gods to favour us above ;
' But let the business of our life be love :

540

' These softer moments let delights employ,
' And kind embraces snatch the hasty joy.

550

' Not thus I lov'd thee, when from Sparta's shore
' My forc'd, my willing, heavenly prize I bore,
' When first entranced in Cranaë's<sup>16</sup> isle I lay,
' Mix'd with thy soul, and all dissolv'd away !'

Thus having spoke, th' enamour'd Phrygian boy
Rush'd to the bed, impatient for the joy.

555

Him Helen follow'd slow with bashful charms,
And clasp'd the blooming hero in her arms.

While these to love's delicious rapture yield,
The stern Atrides rages round the field :

560

So some fell lion whom the woods obey,
Roars through the desert, and demands his prey.
Paris he seeks, impatient to destroy,
But seeks in vain along the troops of Troy ;
Even those had yielded to a foe so brave
The recreant warrior, hateful as the grave.

565

Then speaking thus, the king of kings arose :

' Ye Trojans, Dardans, all our generous foes !

' Hear and attest ! from heav'n with conquest crown'd,

570

' Our brother's arms the just success have found .

' Be therefore now the Spartan wealth restor'd,

' Let Argive Helen own her lawful lord ;

<sup>16</sup> An island of which the situation is uncertain. Some suppose that Athens is meant, having been so called from Cranaus, one of its kings.

'Th' appointed fine let Ilion justly pay,
'And age to age record this signal day.'

He ceas'd; his army's loud applauses rise,
And the long shout runs echoing through the skies.

575

BOOK IV.

THE BREACH OF THE TRUCE, AND THE FIRST BATTLE.

The Gods deliberate in council concerning the Trojan war: they agree upon the continuation of it, and Jupiter sends down Minerva to break the truce. She persuades Pandarus to aim an arrow at Menelaus, who is wounded, but cured by Machaon. In the mean time some of the Trojan troops attack the Greeks. Agamemnon is distinguished in all the parts of a good general; he reviews the troops, and exhorts the leaders, some by praises, and others by reproofs. Nestor is particularly celebrated for his military discipline. The battle joins, and great numbers are slain on both sides.

The same day continues through this, as through the last book; as it does also through the two following, and almost to the end of the seventh book. The scene is wholly in the field before Troy.

AND now Olympus' shining gates unfold;
The gods, with Jove, assume their thrones of gold:
Immortal Hebe, fresh with bloom divine,
The golden goblet crowns with purple wine:
While the full bowls flow round, the powers employ
Their careful eyes on long-contended Troy.

When Jove, dispos'd to tempt Saturnia's spleen,
Thus wak'd the fury of his partial queen:

'Two powers divine the son of Atræus aid,
'Imperial Juno, and the martial maid:

10

'But high in heaven they sit, and gaze from far,
'The tame spectators of his deeds of war.

'Not thus fair Venus helps her favour'd knight,
'The queen of pleasures shares the toils of fight,

'Each danger wards, and, constant in her care,
'Saves in the moment of the last despair.

15

'Her act has rescued Paris' forfeit life,

'Though great Atrides gain'd the glorious strife.

'Then say, ye powers! what signal issue waits

'To crown this deed, and finish all the Fates?

20

' Shall heaven by peace the bleeding kingdoms spare,
 ' Or rouse the Furies, and awake the war ?
 ' Yet, would the gods for human good provide,
 ' Atrides soon might gain his beauteous bride,
 ' Still Priam's walls in peaceful honours grow, 25
 ' And through his gates the crowding nations flow.'

Thus while he spoke, the queen of heaven, enraged,
 And queen of war, in close consult engaged :
 Apart they sit, their deep designs employ,
 And meditate the future woes of Troy. 30

Though secret anger swell'd Minerva's breast,
 The prudent goddess yet her wrath suppress'd ;
 But Juno, impotent of passion, broke
 Her sullen silence, and with fury spoke :
 ' Shall then, O tyrant of th' ethereal reign ! 35

My schemes, my labours, and my hopes, be vain ?
 Have I, for this, shock'd Ilion with alarms,
 Assembled nations, set two worlds in arms ?
 To spread the war, I flow from shore to shore ;
 Th' immortal coursers scarce the labour bore. 40
 At length ripe vengeance o'er their heads impends
 But Jove himself the faithless race defends ;
 Loth as thou art to punish faithless lust,
 Not all the gods are partial and unjust.'

The sire whose thunder shakes the cloudy skies,
 Sighs from his inmost soul, and thus replies : 45

Oh lasting rancour ! oh insatiate hate
 To Phrygia's monarch and the Phrygian state !
 What high offence has fir'd the wife of Jove ?
 Can wretched mortals harm the powers above ? 50

That Troy and Troy's whole race thou would'st confound,
 And yon fair structures level with the ground ?
 Haste, leave the skies, fulfil thy storn desire,
 Burst all her gates, and wrap her walls in fire !
 Let Priam bleed ! if yet thou thirst for more, 55

' Bleed all his sons, and Ilion float with gore,
 ' To boundless vengeance the wide realm be given
 ' Till vast destruction glut the queen of heaven !
 ' So let it be, and Jove his peace enjoy,
 ' When heaven no longer hears the name of Troy. 60

' But should this arm prepare to wreak our hate
 ' On thy loved realms, whose guilt demands their fate.
 ' Presume not thou the lifted bolt to stay,
 ' Remember Troy, and give the vengeance way.
 ' For know, of all the numerous towns that rise 65
 ' Beneath the rolling sun, and starry skies,

'Which gods have raised, or earth-born men enjoy ;
 'None stands so dear to Jove as sacred Troy.
 'No mortals merit more distinguish'd grace
 'Than godlike Priam, or than Priam's race : 70
 'Still to our name their hecatombs expire,
 'And altars blaze with unextinguish'd fire.'

At this the goddess roll'd her radiant eyes,
 Then on the Thunderer fix'd them, and replies :
 'Three towns are Juno's on the Grecian plains, 75
 'More dear than all th' extended earth contains,
 'Mycenæ, Argos, and the Spartan wall ;
 'These thou may'st raze, nor I forbid their fall : '
 'Tis not in me the vengeance to remove ;
 'The crime's sufficient that they share my love. 80
 'Of power superior, why should I complain ?
 'Resent I may, but must resent in vain.
 'Yet some distinction Juno might require,
 'Sprung with thyself from one celestial fire,
 'A goddess born to share the realms above. 85
 'And styl'd the consort of the thundering Jove
 'Nor thou a wife and sister's right deny ;
 'Let both consent, and both by turns comply ;
 'So shall the gods our joint decrees obey,
 'And heaven shall act as we direct the way 90
 'See ready Pallas waits thy high commands,
 'To raise in arms the Greek and Phrygian bands ;
 'Their sudden friendship by her arts may cease,
 'And the proud Trojans first infringe the peace.'

The sire of men, and monarch of the sky, 95
 Th' advice approv'd, and bade Minerva fly,
 Dissolve the league, and all her arts employ
 To make the breach the faithless act of Troy.

Fir'd with the charge, she headlong urged her flight
 And shot like lightning from Olympus' height. 100

As the red comet, from Saturnus sent
 To fright the nations with a dire portent,
 (A fatal sign to armies on the plain,
 Or trembling sailors on the wintry main,) 105
 With weeping glories glides along in air,
 And shakes the sparkles from its blazing hair ;
 Between both armies thus, in open sight,
 Shot the bright goddess in a trail of light.

With eyes erect, the gazing hosts admire
 The power descending, and the heavens on fire ! 110
 'The gods,' (they cried), 'the gods this signal sent,
 'And fate now labours with some vast event :

' Jove seals the league, or bloodier scenes prepares ;
 ' Jove, the great arbiter of peace and wars !'
 They said, while Pallas through the Trojan throng 115
 (In shape a mortal) pass'd disguis'd along.
 Like bold Laödocus, her course she bent,
 Who from Antenor traced his high descent.
 Amidst the ranks Lycaon's son she found,
 The warlike Pandarus, for strength renown'd ; 120
 Whose squadrons, led from black Æsepus<sup>1</sup> flood,
 With flaming shields in martial circle stood.
 To him the goddess : ' Phrygian ! canst thou hear
 ' A well-tim'd counsel with a willing ear ?
 ' What praise were thine, could'st thou direct thy dart, 125
 ' Amidst his triumph, to the Spartan's heart ?
 ' What gifts from Troy, from Paris, wouldst thou gain,
 ' Thy country's foe, the Grecian glory, slain ?
 ' Then seize th' occasion, dare the mighty deed,
 ' Aim at his breast, and may that aim succeed ! 130
 ' But first, speed the shaft, address thy vow
 ' To Lycian Phebus with the silver bow,
 ' And swear the firstlings of thy flock to pay
 ' On Zelia's altars, if the god of day.'
 He heard, and madd' at the motion pleas'd, 135
 His polish'd bow with hasty rashness seiz'd.
 'Twas form'd of horn, and smooth'd with artful toil ;
 A mountain goat resign'd the shining spoil,
 Who pierced long since beneath his arrows bled ;
 The stately quarry on the cliffs lay dead, 140
 And sixteen palms his brow's large honours spread :<sup>3</sup>
 The workman join'd, and shap'd the banded horns,
 And beaten gold each taper point adorns.
 This, by the Greeks unseen, the warrior bends,
 Screen'd by the shields of his surrounding friends. 145
 There meditates the mark, and crouching low,
 Fits the sharp arrow to the well-strung bow.
 One, from a hundred feather'd deaths he chose,
 Fated to wound, and cause of future woes.

Then offers vows with hecatombs to crown
 Apollo's altars in his native town.<sup>4</sup> 150

Now with full force the yielding horn he bends,
 Drawn to an arch, and joins the doubling ends;
 Close to his breast he strains the nerve below,
 Till the barb'd point approach the circling bow; 155
 Th' impatient weapon whizzes on the wing;
 Sounds the tough horn, and twangs the quivering string.

But thee, Atrides! in that dangerous hour
 The gods forget not, nor thy guardian power.
 Pallas assists, and (weaken'd in its force) 160

Diverts the weapon from its destin'd course:
 So from her babe, when slumber seals his eye,
 The watchful mother wafts th' envenom'd fly.
 Just where his belt with golden buckles join'd,
 Where linen folds the double corslet lin'd, 165

She turn'd the shaft, which, hissing from above,
 Pass'd the broad belt, and through the corslet drove;
 The folds it pierc'd, the plaited linen tore,
 And raz'd the skin, and drew the purple gore.

As when some stately trappings are decreed 170
 To grace a monarch on his bounding steed,
 A nymph, in Caria or Mæonia bred,
 Stains the pure ivory with a lively red,

With equal lustre various colours vie,
 The shining whiteness, and the Tyrian dye: 175

So, great Atrides! shew'd thy sacred blood,
 As down thy snowy thigh distill'd the streaming flood.
 With horror seiz'd, the king of men descried

The shaft infix'd, and saw the gushing tide:
 Nor less the Spartan fear'd, before he found 180

The shining barb appear above the wound.
 Then, with a sigh that heav'd his manly breast,

The royal brother thus his grief express'd.
 And grasp'd his hand; while all the Greeks around

With answering sighs return'd the plaintive sound: 185
 'Oh dear as life! did I for this agree

'The solemn truce, a fatal truce to thee!
 'Wert thou expos'd to all the hostile train,

'To fight for Greece, and conquer to be slain?
 'The race of Trojans in thy ruin join, 190

'And faith is scorn'd by all the perjur'd line.
 'Not thus our vows, confirm'd with wine and gore,

'Those hands we plighted, and those oaths we swore,
 'Shall all be vain: when heaven's revenge is slow,

'I live but prepares to strike the fiercer blow. 195

<sup>4</sup> Zelia, ver. 134.

- 'The day shall come, the great avenging day,
 'Which Troy's proud glories in the dust shall lay,
 'When Priam's powers and Priam's self shall fall,
 'And one prodigious ruin swallow all.
 'I see the god, already, from the pole, 200
 'Bare his red arm, and bid the thunder roll;
 'I see th' Eternal all his fury shed,
 'And shake his ægis o'er their guilty head.
 'Such mighty woes on perjur'd princes wait;
 'But thou, alas! deserv'st a happier fate. 205
 'Still must I mourn the period of thy days,
 'And only mourn, without my share of praise?
 'Depriv'd of thee, the heartless Greeks no more
 'Shall dream of conquests on the hostile shore;
 'Troy seiz'd of Helen, and our glory lost, 210
 'Thy bones shall moulder on a foreign coast:
 'While some proud Trojan thus insulting cries,
 '(And spurns the dust where Menelaus lies,)
 'Such are the trophies Greece from Ilion bring,
 'And such the conquest of her king of kings! 215
 'Lo his proud vessels scatter'd o'er the main,
 'And unreveng'd his mighty brother slain.'
 'Oh, ere that dire disgrace shall blast my fame,
 'O'erwhelm me, earth, with a monarch's shame.'
 He said: a leader's and a brother's fears 220
 Possess his soul, which thus the Spartan cheers:
 'Let not thy words the warmth of Greece abate;
 'The feeble dart is guiltless of my fate:
 'Stiff with the rich embroider'd work around,
 'My varied belt repell'd the flying wound. 225
 To whom the king: 'My brother and my friend,
 'Thus, always thus, may heaven thy life defend!
 'Now seek some skilful hand, whose powerful art
 'May stanch th' effusion, and extract the dart.
 'Herald, be swift, and bid Machaon bring 230
 'His speedy succour to the Spartan king;
 'Pierc'd with a winged shaft, (the deed of Troy.)
 'The Grecian's sorrow and the Dardan's joy.'
 With hasty zeal the swift Talthybius flies;
 Through the thick files he darts his searching eyes, 235
 And finds Machaon, where sublime he stands
 In arms encircled with his native bands.
 Then thus: 'Machaon, to the king repair,
 'His wounded brother claims thy timely care;
 'Pierced by some Lycian or Dardanian bow, 240
 'A grief to us, a triumph to the foe.'

The heavy tidings griev'd the godlike man ;
 Swift to his succour through the ranks he ran :
 The dauntless king yet standing firm he found,
 And all the chiefs in deep concern around. 245
 Where to the steely point the reed was join'd,
 The shaft he drew, but left the head behind.
 Straight the broad belt, with gay embroid'ry graced,
 He loos'd : the corslet from his breast unbraced ;
 Then suck'd the blood, and sovereign balm infus'd, 250.
 Which Chiron gave, and Æsculapius us'd.

While round the prince the Greeks employ their care,
 The Trojans rush tumultuous to the war ;
 Once more they glitter in refulgent arms,
 Once more the fields are fill'd with dire alarms. 255
 Nor had you seen the king of men appear
 Confus'd, inactive, or surprised with fear ;
 But fond of glory, with severe delight,
 His beating bosom claim'd the rising fight.
 No longer with his warlike steeds he stay'd, 260
 Or press'd the car with polish'd brass unlaid,
 But left Eurymedon the reins to guide ;
 The fiery coursers snorted at his side.
 On foot through all the martial ranks he moves,
 And these encourages, and those reproves. 265
 ' Brave men ! ' he cries, (to such who boldly dare Urge their swift steeds to face the coming war,)
 ' Your ancient valour on the foes approve ;
 ' Jove is with Greece, and let us trust in Jove.
 ' 'Tis not for us, but guilty Troy, to dread, 270
 ' Whose crimes sit heavy on her perjur'd head :
 ' Her sons and matrons Greece shall lead in chains,
 ' And her dread warriors strew the mournful plains.'
 Thus with new ardour he the brave inspires ;
 Or thus the fearful with reproaches fires : 275
 ' Shame to your country, scandal of your kind !
 ' Born to the fate ye well deserve to find ;
 ' Why stand ye gazing round the dreadful plain,
 ' Prepar'd for flight, but doom'd to fly in vain ?
 ' Confus'd and panting, thus the hunted deer 280
 ' Falls as he flies, a victim to his fear.
 ' Still must ye wait the foes, and still retire,
 ' Till yon tall vessels blaze with Trojan fire ?
 ' Or trust ye, Jove a valiant foe shall chase,
 ' To save a trembling, heartless, dastard race ?' 285
 This said, he stalk'd with ample strides along,
 To Crete's brave monarch and his martial throng ;

High at their head he saw the chief appear,
And bold Meriones excite the rear.

At this the king his generous joy express'd. 230
And clasp'd the warrior to his armed breast :

' Divine Idomeneus ! what thanks we owe
' To worth like thine ? what praise shall we bestow ?

' To thee the foremost honours are decreed,
' First in the fight, and every graceful deed. 295

' For this, in banquets, when the generous bowls
' Restore our blood, and raise the warriors' souls,
' Though all the rest with stated rules we bound,
' Unmix'd, unmeasur'd are thy goblets crown'd.
' Be still thyself ; in arms a mighty name ; 300
' Maintain thy honours, and enlarge thy fame.'

To whom the Cretan thus his speech address'd :

' Secure of me, O king ! exhort the rest :
' Fix'd to thy side, in every toil I share,
' Thy firm associate in the day of war.' 305

' But let the signal be this moment given ;
' To mix in fight is all I ask of heaven.
' The field shall prove how perjuries succeed,
' And chains or death avenge their impious deed.'

Charm'd with this heat, the king his course pursues, 310
And next the troops of either Ajax views :

In one firm orb the bands were rang'd around,
A cloud of heroes blacken'd all the ground.
Thus from the lofty promontory's brow
A swain surveys the gathering storm below ; 315

Slow from the main the heavy vapours rise,
Spread in dim streams, and sail along the skies,
Till black as night the swelling tempest shows,
The cloud condensing as the west-wind blows :
He dreads th' impending storm, and drives his flock 320
To the close covert of an arching rock.

Such, and so thick, th' embattled squadrons stood,
With spears erect, a moving iron wood ;
A shady light was shot from glimmering shields,
And their brown arms obscur'd the dusky fields.

* It was then looked upon as the highest mark of honour to be allotted the best portion of meat and wine, and to be allowed an exemption from the laws of the feast, in drinking wine unmingled and without stint. This custom was much more ancient than the time of the Trojan war, and we find it practised in the banquet given by Joseph to his brethren in Egypt, Gen. xliii. " And he sent messes to them from before him, but Benjamin's mess was five times so much as any of theirs." Pope.

‘O Heroes! worthy such a dauntless train,
 ‘Whose godlike virtue we but urge in vain,’
 (Exclaim’d the king,) ‘who raise your eager bands
 ‘With great examples, more than loud commands.
 ‘Ah would the gods but breathe in all the rest
 ‘Such souls as burn in your exalted breast!
 ‘Soon should our arms with just success be crown’d,
 ‘And Troy’s proud walls lie smoking on the ground.’

330

Then to the next the general bends his course;
 (His heart exults, and glories in his force;)

335

There reverend Nestor ranks his Pylian bands,
 And with inspiring eloquence commands;
 With strictest order sets his train in arms,
 The chiefs advises, and the soldiers warms.
 Alastor, Chromius, Hamon, round him wait,
 Bias the good, and Pelagon the great.

340

The horse and chariots to the front assign’d,
 The foot (the strength of war) he rang’d behind:

The middle space suspected troops supply,
 Enclos’d by both, nor left the power to fly:

345

He gives command to curb the fiery steed,
 Nor cause confusion, nor the ranks exceed;
 ‘Before the rest let none too rashly ride;
 ‘No strength nor skill, but just in time, be tried:
 ‘The charge once made, no warrior turn the rein,
 ‘But fight, or fall; a firm, embodied train.

350

‘He whom the fortune of the field shall cast
 ‘From forth his chariot, mount the next in haste;
 ‘Nor seek unpractis’d to direct the car,
 ‘Content with javelins to provoke the war.

355.

‘Our great forefathers held this prudent course,
 ‘Thus rul’d their ardour, thus preserv’d their force,
 ‘By laws like these immortal conquests made,
 ‘And earth’s proud tyrants low in ashes laid.’

So spoke the master of the martial art,
 And touch’d with transport great Atrides’ heart.

360

‘Oh! hadst thou strength to match thy brave desires
 ‘And nerves to second what thy soul inspires!

‘But wasting years that wither human race,
 ‘Exhaust thy spirits, and thy arms unbrace.

365

‘What once thou wert, oh ever mightst thou be!
 ‘And age the lot of any chief but thee.’

Thus to the experienc’d prince Atrides cried;
 He shook his hoary locks, and thus replied:

‘Well might I wish, could mortal wish renew

370.

‘That strength which once in boiling youth I knew

- ' Such as I was, when Ereuthalion<sup>6</sup> slain
 ' Beneath this arm fell prostrate on the plain.
 ' But heaven its gifts not all at once bestows,
 ' These years with wisdom crowns, with action those : 375
 ' The field of combat fits the young and bold,
 ' The solemn council best becomes the old :
 ' To you the glorious conflict I resign,
 ' Let sage advice, the palm of age, be mine '
 He said. With joy the monarch march'd before 380
 And found Menestheus on the dusty shore,
 With whom the firm Athenian phalanx stands ;
 And next Ulysses, with his subject bands.
 Remote their forces lay, nor knew so far
 The peace infringing'd, nor heard the sounds of war ; 385
 The tumult late begun, they stood intent
 To watch the motion, dubious of th' event.
 The king, who saw their squadrons yet unmov'd,
 With hasty ardour thus the chiefs reprov'd :
 ' Can Poteus'<sup>7</sup> son forget a warrior's part, 390
 ' And fears Ulysses, skill'd in every art ?
 ' Why stand you distant, and the rest expect
 ' To mix in combat which yourselves neglect ?
 ' From you 'twas hop'd among the first to dare
 ' The shock of armies, and commence the war. 395
 ' For this your names are call'd before the rest,
 ' To share the pleasures of the genial feast :
 ' And can you, chiefs ! without a blush survey
 ' Whole troops before you labouring in the fray ?
 ' Say, is it thus those honours you requite ? 400
 ' The first in banquets, but the last in fight.'
 Ulysses heard : the hero's warmth o'erspread
 His cheek with blushes ; and, severe, he said :
 ' Take back th' unjust reproach ! Behold we stand
 ' Sheath'd in bright arms, and but expect command. 405
 ' If glorious deeds afford thy soul delight,
 ' Behold me plunging in the thickest fight.
 ' Then give thy warrior-chief a warrior's due,
 ' Who dares to act whate'er thou dar'st to view.'
 Struck with his generous wrath, the king replies : 410
 ' Oh great in action, and in council wise !
 ' With ours, thy care and ardour are the same,
 ' Nor need I to command, nor ought to blame.
 ' Sage as thou art, and learn'd in human kind,
 ' Forgive the transport of a martial mind. 415

'Haste to the fight, secur<sup>d</sup> of just amends ;
 'The gods that make, shall keep the worthy, friends.'
 He said, and pass'd where great Tydides lay,
 His steed<sup>s</sup> and chariots wedg'd in firm array :
 (The warlike Sthenelus attends his side ;)
 To whom with stern reproach the monarch cried :
 'Oh son of Tydeus !' (he whose strength could tame
 'The bounding steed, in arms a mighty name,)
 'Canst thou, remote, the mingling hosts des<sup>er</sup>y,
 'With hands inactive, and a careless eye ?
 'Not thus thy sire the fierce encounter fear'd ;
 'Still first in front the matchless prince appear'd :
 'What glorious toils, what wonders they recite,
 'Who view'd him labouring thro' the ranks of fight !
 'I saw him once, when, gath'ring martial powers,
 'A peaceful guest he sought Mycenæ's towers ;
 'Armies he ask'd, and armies had been given,
 'Not we denied, but Jove forbade from heaven ;
 'While dreadful comets glaring from afar
 'Forewarn'd the horrors of the Theban war.
 'Next, sent by Greece from where Asopus<sup>8</sup> flows,
 'A fearless envoy, he approach'd the foes ;
 'Thebes' hostile walls, unguarded and alone,
 'Dauntless he enters and demands the throne.
 'The tyrant,<sup>9</sup> feasting with his chiefs he found,
 'And dar'd to combat all those chiefs around ;
 'Dar'd and subdu'd, before their haughty lord ;
 'For Pallas strung his arm, and edged his sword.
 'Stung with the sh<sup>ame</sup>, within the winding way,
 'To bar his passage fifty warriors lay ;<sup>10</sup>
 'Two heroes led the secret squadron on,
 'Mæon the fierce, and hardy Lycophon ;
 'Those fifty slaughter'd in the gloomy vale,
 'He spar'd but one to bear the dreadful tale.
 'Such Tydeus was, and such his martial fire ;
 'Gods ! how the son degenerates from the sire !'
 No words the godlike Diomed return'd,
 But bow'd respectful, and in secret burn'd :
 Not so fierce Capaneus' undaunted son ;
 Stern as his sire, the boaster thus begun :

<sup>8</sup> A river near Thebes, running into the Euripus. Tydeus was sent forward as an ambassador to the city by the Argives and their allies, who were preparing to besiege it. <sup>9</sup> Eteocles, who had deprived his brother Polynices of the throne. Tydeus was engaged with the Argives in endeavouring to reinstate Polynices. <sup>10</sup> In ambush, to kill him as he was returning.

'What needs, O monarch, this invidious praise,
 'Ourselves to lessen, while our sires you raise ?
 'Dare to be just, Atrides ! and confess
 'Our valour equal, though our fury less.
 'With fewer troops we storm'd the Theban wall,<sup>11</sup> 460
 'And, happier, saw the sevenfold city fall.
 'In impious acts the guilty fathers died ;
 'The sons subdued, for heaven was on their side.
 'Far more than heirs of all our parents' fame,
 'Our glories darken their diminish'd name.' 465
 To him Tydides thus : 'My friend, forbear,
 'Suppress thy passion, and the king revere :
 'His high concern may well excuse this rage,
 'Whose cause we follow, and whose war we wage ;
 'His the first praise, were Ilion's towers o'erthrown, 470
 'And, if we fail, the chief disgrace his own.
 'Let him the Greeks to hardy toils excite,
 'Tis ours to labour in the glorious fight'
 He spoke, and ardent on the trembling ground
 Sprung from his car ; his ringing arms resound, 475
 Dire was the clang, and dreadful from afar,
 Of arm'd Tydides rushing to the war.
 As when the winds, ascending by degrees,<sup>12</sup>
 First move the whitening surface of the seas,
 The billows float in order to the shore, 480
 The wave behind rolls on the wave before ;
 Till, with the growing storm, the deeps arise,
 Foam o'er the rocks, and thunder to the skies :
 So to the fight the thick battalions throng,
 Shields urg'd on shields, and men drove men along. 485
 Sedate and silent move the numerous bands ;
 No sound, no whisper, but their chief's commands.
 Those only heard ; with awe the rest obey,
 As if some god had snatch'd their voice away.
 Not so the Trojans ; from their host ascends 490
 A general shout that all the region rends.
 As when the fleecy flocks unnumber'd stand
 In wealthy folds, and wait the milker's hand,

The hollow vales incessant bleating fills,
 The lambs reply from all the neighb'ring hills: 495
 Such claps of arms rose from various nations round,
 Mix'd was the murmur, and confus'd the sound.
 Each host now joins, and each a god inspires,
 These Mars incites, and those Minerva fires.
 Pale Flight around, and dreadful Terror reign; 500
 And Discord raging bathes the purple plain:
 Discord! dire sister of the slaughtering power,
 Small at her birth, but rising every hour;
 While scarce the skies her horrid head can bound,
 She stalks on earth, and shakes the world around; 505
 The nations bleed, where'er her steps she turns;
 The groan still deepens, and the combat burns.
 Now shield with shield, with helmet helmet clos'd,
 To armour armour, lance to lance oppos'd,
 Host against host with shadowy squadrons drew, 510
 The sounding darts in iron tempests flew.
 Victors and vanquish'd join promiscuous cries,
 And shrilling shouts and dying groans arise;
 With streaming blood the slippery fields are dyed,
 And slaughter'd heroes swell the dreadful tide. 515
 As torrents roll, increas'd by numerous rills,
 With rage impetuous down their echoing hills;
 Rush to the vales, and, pour'd along the plain,
 Roar through a thousand channels to the main;
 The distant shepherd trembling hears the sound: 520
 So mix both hosts, and so their cries rebound.
 The bold Antilochus the slaughter led,
 The first who struck a valiant Trojan dead:
 At great Echepolus the lance arrives,
 Raz'd his high crest and through his helmet drives; 525
 Warm'd in the brain the brazen weapon lies,
 And shades eternal settle o'er his eyes.
 So sinks a tower that long assaults had stood
 Of force and fire, its walls besmear'd with blood.
 Him, the bold leader<sup>13</sup> of th' Abantian throng 530
 Seiz'd to despoil, and dragg'd the corpse along:
 But, while he strove to tug th' inserted dart,
 Agenor's javelin reach'd the hero's heart.
 His flank, unguarded by his ample shield,
 Admits the lance: he falls, and spurns the field; 535
 The nerves unbraced support his limbs no more;
 The soul comes floating in a tide of gore.

Trojans and Greeks now gather round the slain ;
 The war renews, the warriors bleed again ;
 As o'er their prey rapacious wolves engage,
 Man dies on man, and all is blood and rage.

540

In blooming youth fair Simoisius fell,
 Sent by great Ajax to the shades of hell :
 Fair Simoisius, whom his mother bore
 Amid the flocks, on silver Simois' shore :
 The nymph, descending from the hills of Ide,
 To seek her parents on his flowery side,
 Brought forth the babe, their common care and joy,
 And thence from Simois nam'd the lovely boy.
 Short was his date ! by dreadful Ajax slain
 He falls, and renders all their cares in vain !
 So falls a poplar, that in watery ground
 Rais'd high the head, with stately branches crown'd :
 (Fell'd by some artist with his shining steel,
 To shape the circle of the bending wheel ;)
 Cut down it lies, tall, smooth, and largely spread,
 With all its beauteous honours on its head ;
 There, left a subject to the wind and rain,
 And scorch'd by suns, it withers on the plain.
 Thus, pierc'd by Ajax, Simoisius lies
 Stretch'd on the shore, and thus neglected dies.

545

555

560

At Ajax, Antiphus his javolin threw :
 The pointed lance with erring fury flew,
 And Leucus, lov'd by wise Ulysses, slew.
 He<sup>14</sup> drops the corpse of Simoisius slain,
 And sinks a breathless carcass on the plain.
 This saw Ulysses, and, with grief enrag'd,
 Strode where the foremost of the foes engag'd ;
 Arm'd with his spear, he meditates the wound,
 In act to throw ; but, cautious, look'd around.
 Struck at his sight the Trojans backward drew,
 And trembling heard the javelin as it flew.
 A chief stood nigh, who from Abydos came,
 Old Priam's son, Democoon was his name ;
 The weapon enter'd close above his ear,
 Cold through his temples glides the whizzing spear ;
 With piercing shrieks the youth resigns his breath,
 His eye-balls darken with the shades of death ;
 Ponderous he falls ; his clanging arms resound ;
 And his broad buckler rings against the ground.

570

575

580

Seiz'd with affright the boldest foes appear ;
 E'en godlike Hector seems himself to fear ;

<sup>14</sup> Leucus, who was attempting to drag off the body of Simoisius

- Slow he gave way, the rest tumultuous fled ;
 The Greeks with shouts press on, and spoil the dead.
 But Phoebus now from Ilion's towering height
 Since forth reveal'd, and animates the fight. 585
 ' Trojans be bold, and force with force oppose ;
 ' Your foaming steeds urge headlong on the foes !
 ' Nor are their bodies rocks, nor ribb'd with steel ;
 ' Your weapons enter, and your strokes they feel 590
 ' Have you forgot what seem'd your dread before ?
 ' The great, the fierce Achilles fights no more.<sup>15</sup>
 Apollo thus from Ilion's lofty towers,
 Array'd in terrors, rous'd the Trojan powers :
 While war's fierce goddess fires the Grecian foe, • 595
 And shouts and thunders in the fields below.
 Then great Dioces fell, by doom divine ;
 In vain his valour and illustrious line.
 A broken rock the force of Pirus threw ;
 (Who from cold Ænus led the Thracian crew ;)
 Full on his ankle dropp'd the ponderous stone,
 First the strong nerves, and crash'd the solid bone :
 Then he tumbles on the crimson sands,
 Before his helpless friends, and native hands,
 And spreads for aid his unavailing hands. 605
 The foe rush'd furious as he pants for breath,
 And through his navel drove the pointed death :
 ' His gushing entrails smok'd upon the ground,
 And the warm life came issuing from the wound.
 His lance bold Thoas at the conqueror sent,
 Deep in his breast above the pap it went,
 Amid the lungs was fix'd the winged wood,
 And quivering in his heaving bosom stood :
 Till from the dying chief, approaching near,
 Th' Ætolian warrior tugg'd his weighty spear :
 ' Then sudden wav'd his flaming faulchion round,
 And gash'd his belly with a ghastly wound. 615
 The corpse now breathless on the bloody plain,
 To spoil his arms the victor strove in vain ;
 The Thracian bands against the victor press'd ;
 A grove of lances glitter'd at his breast.
 Stern Thoas, glaring with revengeful eyes,
 In sullen fury slowly quits the prize.
 Thus fell two heroes, one<sup>16</sup> the pride of Thrace, •
 And one<sup>17</sup> the leader of th' Epeian race ; 625

Death's sable shade at once o'ercast their eyes,
 In dust the vanquish'd and the victor lies.
 With copious slaughter all the fields are red,
 And heap'd with growing mountains of the dead.

Had some brave chief this martial scene beheld,
 By Pallas guarded through the dreadful field,
 Might darts be bid to turn their points away,
 And swords around him innocently play,
 The war's whole art with wonder had he seen,
 And counted heroes where he counted men.

630

635

So fought each host, with thirst of glory fir'd,
 And crowds on crowds triumphantly expir'd.

OBSERVATIONS ON HOMER'S BATTLES.

It may be necessary, at the opening of Homer's battles, to give some explanatory observations upon them. When we reflect that no less than the compass of twelve books is taken up in these, we shall have reason to wonder by what method the author could prevent descriptions of such a length from being tedious. It is not enough to say, that though the subject itself be the same, the actions are always different; that we have now distinct combats, now promiscuous fights, now single duels, now general engagements; or that the scenes are perpetually varied; we are now in the fields, now at the fortification of the Greeks, now at the ships, now at the gates of Troy, now at the river Scamander: but we must look further into the art of the poet to find the reasons of this astonishing variety.

We first observe that diversity in the deaths of his warriors, which he has supplied by the vastest fertility of invention. These he distinguishes several ways: sometimes by the characters of the men, their age, office, profession, nation, family, &c. One is a blooming youth, whose father dissuaded him from the war; one is a priest, whose piety could not save him; one is a sportsman, whom Diana taught in vain; one is the native of a far distant country, who is never to return; one is descended from a noble line, which ends in his death; one is made remarkable by his boasting; another by his beseeching; and another, who is distinguished no way else, is marked by his habit, and the singularity of his armour.

Sometimes he varies these by the several postures in which his heroes are represented either fighting or falling. Some of these are so exceedingly exact, that one may guess, from the very position of the combatant, whereabouts the wound will light: others so very peculiar and uncommon, that they could only be the effect of an imagination which had searched through all the ideas of nature. Such is that picture of Mydon in the fifth book, whose arm being numbed by a blow on the elbow, drops the reins, that trail on the ground; and then being suddenly struck on the temples, falls headlong from the chariot, in a soft and deep place, where he sinks up to the shoulders in the sands, and continues a while fixed by the weight of his armour, with his legs quivering in the air, till he is trampled down by his horses.

Another cause of this variety is the difference of the wounds that are given in the Iliad: they are by no means like the wounds described by most other poets, which are commonly made in the self-same obvious places, the heart and head serve for all those in general who understand no anatomy, and sometimes, for variety, they kill men by wounds that are nowhere mortal but in their poems. As the whole human body is the subject of these, so nothing is more necessary to him who would describe them well, than a thorough knowledge of its structure, even though the poet is not professedly to write of them as an anatomist; in the same manner as an exact skill in anatomy is necessary to those painters that would excel in drawing the naked body, though they are not to make every muscle as visible as in a book of chirurgery. It appears from so many passages in Homer, that he was perfectly master of this science, that it would be needless to cite any in particular.

It may be necessary to take notice of some customs of antiquity relating to the arms and art military of those times, which are proper to be known, in order to form a right notion of our author's descriptions of war.

That Homer copied the manners and customs of the age he wrote of, rather than of that he lived in, has been observed in some instances. As that he nowhere represents cavalry or trumpets to have been used in the Trojan wars, though they apparently were in his own time. It is not therefore impossible but there may be found in his works some deficiencies in the art of war, which are not to be imputed to his ignorance, but to his judgment.

Horses had not been brought into Greece long before the siege of Troy. They were originally eastern animals, and if we find at that very period so great a number of them reckoned up in the wars of the Israelites, it is the less a wonder, considering they came from Asia. The practice of riding them was so little known in Greece a few years before, that they looked upon the *Centaur*s who first used it, as monsters compounded of men and horses. Nestor in the first Iliad, says he had seen these Centaur's in his youth, and Polydorus in the second is said to have been born on the day that his father expelled them from Pelion to the deserts of Æthica. They had no other use of horses than to draw their chariots in battle, so that whenever Homer speaks of fighting from a horse, taming a horse, or the like, it is constantly to be understood of fighting from a chariot, or taming horses to that service. This was a piece of decorum in the poet; for in his own time they were arrived to such a perfection in horsemanship, that in the fifteenth Iliad, ver. 822, we have a simile taken from an extraordinary feat of activity, where one man manages four horses at once, and leaps from the back of one to another at full speed.

If we consider in what high esteem among warriors these noble animals must have been at their first coming into Greece, we shall the less wonder at the frequent occasions Homer has taken to describe and celebrate them. It is not so strange to find them set almost upon a level with men, at the time when a horse in the prizes was of equal value with a captive.

The chariots were in all probability very low. For we frequently find in the Iliad, that a person who stands erect on a chariot is killed, (and sometimes by a stroke on the head,) by a foot soldier with a sword. This may farther appear from the ease and readiness with which they elight or mount on every occasion, to facilitate which, the chariots were made open behind. That the wheels were but small, may be guessed from a custom they had of taking them off and setting them on, as they were laid by, or made use of. Hebe in the fifth book puts on the wheels of Juno's chariot when she calls for it in haste: and it seems to be with allusion to the same practice that it is said in Exodus, ch. xiv., The Lord took off their chariot-wheels, so that they drove them heavily. The sides were also low; for whoever is killed in his chariot throughout the poem, constantly falls to the ground, as having nothing to support him. That the whole machine was very small and light, is evident from a passage in the tenth Iliad, where Diomed debates whether he shall draw the chariot of Rhesus out of the way, or carry it on his shoulders to a place of safety. All the particulars agree with the representations of the chariots on the most ancient Greek coins; where the tops of them reached not so high as the backs of the horses; the wheels are yet lower, and the heroes who stand in them are seen from the knee upwards.

There were generally two persons in each chariot, one of whom was wholly employed in guiding the horses. They used indifferently, two, three, or four horses: from whence it happens, that sometimes when a horse is killed, the hero continues the fight with the two or more that remain; and at other times a warrior retreats upon the loss of one; not that he had less courage than the other, but that he has fewer horses.

Their swords were all broad cutting swords, for we find they never stab but with their spears. The spears were used two ways, either to push with, or to cast from them, like the missive javelins. It seems surprising, that a man should throw a dart or spear with such force, as to pierce through both sides of the armour and the body (as is often described in Homer): for if the strength of the men was gigantic, the armour must have been strong in proportion. Some solution might be given for this, if we imagined the armour was generally brass, and the weapons pointed with iron; and if we could fancy that Homer called the spears and ~~swords~~ brazen, in the same manner that he calls the reins of a bridle ivory, only naming the ornaments about them. But there are passages where the point of the spear is expressly said to be of brass, as in the description of that of Hector in Iliad vi. Pausanias (Laconicus) takes it for granted, that the arms, as well offensive as defensive, were brass. He says the spear of Achilles was kept in his time in the temple of Minerva, the top and point of which were of brass; and the sword of Meriones, in that of Æsculapius among the Nicomedians, was entirely of the same metal. But be it as it will, there are examples even at this day of such a prodigious force in casting darts, as almost exceeds credibility. The Turks and Arabs will pierce through thick planks with darts of hardened wood; which can only be attributed to their being bred (as the ancients were) to that exercise, and to the strength and agility acquired by a constant practice of it.

We may ascribe to the same cause their power of casting stones of a vast weight, which appears a common practice in these battles. It is an error, to imagine this to be only a fictitious embellishment of the poet, which was one of the exercises of war among the ancient Greeks and Orientals. St. Jerome tells us, it was an old custom in Palestine, and in use in his own time, to have round stones of a great weight kept in the castles and villages, for the youth to try their strength with

THE ARGUMENT.

THE ACTS OF DIOMED.

Diomed, assisted by Pallas, performs wonders in this day's battle. Pandarus wounds him with an arrow, but the goddess cures him, enables him to discern gods from mortals, and prohibits him from contending with any of the former, excepting Venus. Æneas joins Pandarus to oppose him, Pandarus is killed, and Æneas in great danger but for the assistance of Venus; who, as she is removing her son from the fight, is wounded on the hand by Diomed. Apollo seconds her in his rescue, and, at length, carries off Æneas to Troy, where he is healed in the temple of Pergamus. Mars rallies the Trājans, and assists Hector to make a stand. In the mean time Æneas is restored to the field, and they overthrow several of the Greeks; among the rest Tlepolemus is slain by Sarpedon. Juno and Minerva descend to resist Mars; the latter incites Diomed to go against that god; he wounds him, and sends him groaning to heaven.

The first battle continues through this book. The scene is the same as in the former.

But Pallas now Tydides' soul inspires,
 Fills with her force, and warms with all her fires,
 Above the Greeks his deathless fame to raise,
 And crown her hero with distinguish'd praise.
 High on his helm celestial lightnings play, 5
 His beamy shield emits a living ray;
 Th' unwearied blaze incessant streams supplies,
 Like the red star that fires th' autumnal skies,
 When fresh he rears his radiant orb to sight,
 Bath'd in Ocean shoots a keener light. 10
 In glories Pallas on the chief bestow'd,
 Such, from his arms, the fierce effulgence flow'd:
 Onward she drives him, furious to engage,
 Where the fight burns, and where the thickest rage.
 The sons of Idæus first the combat sought, 15
 A wealthy priest, but rich without a fault;
 In Vulcan's fane the father's days were led;
 The sons to toils of glorious battle bred;
 These, singled from their troops, the fight maintain;
 These from their steeds, Tydides on the plain. 20
 Fierce for renown the brother chiefs draw near,
 And first bold Phegeus casts his sounding spear,
 Which o'er the warrior's shoulder took its course,
 And spent in empty air its erring force.

Not so, Tydides, flew thy lance in vain,
 But pierc'd his breast, and stretch'd him on the plain.
 Seiz'd with unusual fear, Idæus fled,
 Left the rich chariot, and his brother dead ;
 And had not Vulcan lent celestial aid,
 He too had sunk to death's eternal shade ;
 But in a smoky cloud the god of fire
 Preserv'd the son, in pity to the sire.
 The steeds and chariot, to the navy led,
 Increas'd the spoils of gallant Diomed.
 Struck with amaze and shame, the Trojan crew
 Or slain, or fled, the sons of Dares view ;
 When by the blood-stain'd hand Minerva press'd
 The god of battles, and this speech address'd :
 ' Stern power of war ! by whom the mighty fall,
 ' Who bathe in blood, and shake the lofty wall !
 ' Let the brave chiefs their glorious toils divide ;
 ' And whose the conquest mighty Jove decide :
 ' While we from interdicted fields retire,
 ' Nor tempt the wrath of heaven's avenging sire.
 Her words allay th' impetuous warrior's heat,
 The god of arms and martial maid retreat ;
 Remov'd from fight, on Xanthus' flowery bounds
 They sat, and listen'd to the dying sounds.
 Meantime, the Greeks the Trojan race pursue,
 And some bold chieftain every leader slew :
 First Odius falls and bites the bloody sand,
 His death ennobled by Atrides' hand ;
 As he to flight his wheeling car address'd,
 The speedy javelin drove from back to breast
 In dust the mighty Halizonian lay,
 His arms resound, the spirit wings its way.
 Thy fate was next, O Phæstus ! doom'd to feel
 The great Idomeneus' protended steel ;
 Whom Borus sent (his son and only joy)
 From fruitful Tarné<sup>1</sup> to the fields of Troy.
 The Cretan javelin reach'd him from afar,
 And pierced his shoulder as he mounts his car ;
 Back from the car he tumbles to the ground,
 And everlasting shades his eyes surround.
 Then died Scamandrius, expert in the chase,
 In woods and wilds to wound the savage race ;
 Diana taught him all her sylvan arts,
 To bend the bow, and aim unerring darts ;

<sup>1</sup> A town of Lydia.

But vainly here Diana's arts he tries,
 The fatal lance arrests him as he flies ;
 From Menelaus' arm the weapon sent,
 Through his broad back and heaving bosom went :
 Down sinks the warrior with a thundering sound,
 His brazen armour rings against the ground.

70

Next artful Phereclus untimely fell ;
 Bold Merion sent him to the realms of hell.
 Thy father's skill, O Phereclus, was thine ;
 The graceful fabric and the fair design ;
 For, lov'd by Pallas, Pallas did impart
 To him the shipwright's and the builder's art,
 Beneath his hand the fleet of Paris rose,
 The fatal cause of all his country's woes ;
 But he, the mystic will of heaven unknown,
 Nor saw his country's peril, nor his own.
 The hapless artist, while confus'd he fled,
 The spear of Merion mingled with the dead.
 Through his right hip, with forceful fury cast,
 Between the bladder and the bone it past ;
 Prone on his knees he falls with fruitless cries,
 And death in lasting slumber seals his eyes.

80

85

90

From Meges' force the swift Pedæus fled,
 Antenor's offspring from a foreign bed ;
 Whose generous spouse, Theano, heavenly fair,
 Nurs'd the young stranger with a mother's care.
 How vain those cares ! when Meges in the rear
 Full in his name infix'd the fatal spear ;
 Swift through his crackling jaws the weapon glides,
 And the cold tongue and grinning teeth divides.

95

Then died Hypsenor, generous and divine,
 Sprung from the brave Dolopion's mighty line,
 Who near ador'd Scamander made abode,
 Priest of the stream, and honour'd as a god.
 On him, amidst the flying numbers found,

100

Eurypylus inflicts a deadly wound ;
 On his broad shoulder fell the forceful brand,
 Thence glancing downward lopp'd his holy hand,
 Which stain'd with sacred blood the blushing sand.
 Down sunk the priest : the purple hand of death
 Clos'd his dim eye, and fate suppress'd his breath.

105

Thus toil'd the chiefs, in different parts engag'd ;
 In every quarter fierce Tydides rag'd,
 Amid the Greek, amid the Trojan train,
 Rapt through the ranks he thunders o'er the plain ;
 Now here, now there, he darts from place to place,
 Hours on the rear, or lightens in their face.

110

115

Thus from high hills the torrents swift and strong
 Deluge whole fields, and sweep the trees along ;
 Through ruin'd moles the rushing wave resounds,
 O'erwhelms the bridge, and bursts the lofty bounds ;
 The yellow harvests of the ripen'd year,
 And flatted vineyards, one sad waste appear !
 While Jove descends in sluicy sheets of rain,
 And all the labours of mankind are vain.
 So rag'd Tydides, boundless in his ire,
 Drove armies back, and made all Troy retire. 125
 With grief the leader<sup>2</sup> of the Lycian band
 Saw the wide waste of his destructive hand :
 His bended bow against the chief he drew ;
 Swift to the mark the thirsty arrow flew,
 Whose forky point the hollow breastplate tore, 130
 Deep in his shoulder pierc'd, and drank the gore ;
 The rushing stream his brazen armour dy'd,
 While the proud archer thus exulting cried :
 ' Hither, ye Trojans, hither drive your steeds !
 ' Lo ! by our hand the bravest Grecian bleeds. 135
 ' Not long the deathful dart he can sustain ;
 ' Or Phœbus urg'd me to these fields in vain.'
 So spoke he, boastful ; but the winged dart
 Stopp'd short of life, and mock'd the shooter's art.
 The wounded chief, behind his car retir'd, 140
 The helping hand of Sthenelus requir'd ;
 Swift from his seat he leap'd upon the ground,
 And tugg'd the weapon from the gushing wound ;
 When thus the king his guardian power address'd,
 The purple current wandering o'er his vest : 145
 ' O progeny of Jove ! unconquer'd maid !
 ' If e'er my godlike sire deserv'd thy aid,
 ' If e'er I felt thee in the fighting field ;
 ' Now, goddess, now, thy sacred succour yield.
 ' Oh give my lance to reach the Trojan knight, 150
 ' Whose arrow wounds the chief thou guard'st in fight ;
 ' And lay the boaster groveling on the shore,
 ' That vaunts these eyes shall view the light no more.'
 Thus pray'd Tydides, and Minerva heard,
 His nerves confirm'd, his languid spirits cheer'd ; 155
 He feels each limb with wonted vigour light ;
 His beating bosom claims the promis'd fight.
 ' Be bold,' (she cried,) ' in every combat shine,
 ' War be thy province, thy protection mine ;

'Rush to the fight, and every foe control ; 160

'Wake each paternal virtue in thy soul :

'Strength swells thy boiling breast infus'd by me,

'And all thy godlike father breathes in thee !

'Yet more, from mortal mists I purge thy eyes,

'And set to view the warring deities. 165

'These see thou shun, through all th' embattled plain,

'Nor rashly strive where human force is vain.

'If Venus mingle in the martial band,

'Her shalt thou wound : so Pallas gives command.'

With that, the blue-ey'd virgin wing'd her flight ; 170

The hero rush'd impetuous to the fight ;

With tenfold ardour now invades the plain,

Wild with delay, and more enrag'd by pain.

As on the fleecy flocks, when hunger calls,

Amidst the field a brindled lion falls ; 175

If chance some shepherd with a distant dart

The savage wound, he rouses at the smart.

He foams, he roars ; the shepherd dares not stay,

But trembling leaves the scattering flocks a prey.

Heaps fall on heaps ; he bathes with blood the ground, 180

Then leaps victorious o'er the lofty mound.

Not with less fury stern Tydides flew,

And two brave leaders at an instant slew ;

Astynous breathless fell, and by his side

His people's pastor, good Hypenor, died ; 185

Astynous' breast the deadly lance receives.

Hypenor's shoulder his broad faulchion cleaves.

Those slain he left ; and sprung with noble rage

Abas and Polyidus to engage ;

Sons of Eurydamas, who, wise and old, 190

Could fates foresee, and mystic dreams unfold ;

The youths return'd not from the doubtful plain,

And the sad father tried his arts in vain ;

No mystic dream could make their fates appear,

Though now determin'd by Tydides' spear. 195

Young Xanthus next, and Thoön felt his rage,

The joy and hope of Phænops' feeble age ;

Vast was his wealth, and these the only heirs

Of all his labours, and a life of cares.

Cold death o'ertakes them in their blooming years, 200

And leaves the father unavailing tears :

To strangers now descends his heapy store,

The race forgotten, and the name no more.

Two sons of Priam in one chariot ride,

G glittering in arms, and combat side by side. 205

As when the lordly lion seeks his food
 Where grazing heifers range the lonely wood,
 He leaps amidst them with a furious bound,
 Bends their strong necks, and tears them to the ground :
 So from their seats the brother chiefs are torn,
 Their steeds and chariots to the navy borne. 210

With deep concern divine Æneas view'd
 The foe prevailing and his friends pursued ;
 Through the thick storm of singing spears he flies,
 Exploring Pandarus with careful eyes. 215

At length he found Lycaon's mighty son ;
 To whom the chief of 'Venus' race begun :

'Where, Pandarus, are all thy honours now,
 Thy winged arrows and unerring bow,
 Thy matchless skill, thy yet unrivall'd fame, 220
 And boasted glory of the Lycian name ?

'Oh pierce that mortal ! if we mortal call
 That wondrous force by which whole armies fall ;
 Or god incens'd, who quits the distant skies
 To punish Troy for slighted sacrifice ; 225

'(Which oh avert from our unhappy state !
 For what so dreadful as celestial hate ?)
 Whoe'er he be, propitiate Jove with prayer ;
 If man, destroy, if god, entreat to spare.' 230

To him the Lycian : 'Whom your eyes behold,
 If right I judge, is Diomed the bold.
 Such coursers whirl him o'er the dusty field,
 So towers his helmet, and so flames his shield.

'If 'tis a god, he wears that chief's disguise ;
 Or if that chief, some guardian of the skies, 235
 Involv'd in clouds, protects him in the fray,
 And turns unseen the frustrate dart away.

'I wing'd an arrow, which not idly fell ;
 The stroke had fix'd him to the gates of hell ;
 And, but some god, some angry god withstands, 240
 His fate was due to these unerring hands.

'Skill'd in the bow, on foot I sought the war,
 Nor join'd swift horses to the rapid car.
 Ten polish'd chariots I possess'd at home,
 And still they grace Lycaon's princely dome : 245

'There veil'd in spacious coverlets they stand ;
 And twice ten coursers wait their lord's command.
 The good old warrior bade me trust to these,
 When first for Troy I sail'd the sacred seas ;

'In fields, aloft, the whirling car to guide, 250
 And through the ranks of death triumphant ride.

' But, vain with youth, and yet to thrift inclin'd,
 ' I heard his counsels with unheedful mind,
 ' And thought the steeds (your large supplies unknown)
 ' Might fail of forage in the straiten'd town : 255
 ' So took my bow and pointed darts in hand,
 ' And left the chariots in my native land.
 ' Too late, O friend ! my rashness I deplore ;
 ' These shafts, once fatal, carry death no more.
 ' Tydeus' and Atreus' sons their points have found, 260
 ' And undissembled gore pursued the wound.
 ' In vain they bled : this unavailing bow
 ' Serves not to slaughter, but provoke the foe.
 ' In evil hour these bended horns I strung,
 ' And seiz'd the quiver where it idly hung. 265
 ' Curs'd be the fate that sent me to the field,
 ' Without a warrior's arms, the spear and shield !
 ' If e'er with life I quit the Trojan plain,
 ' If e'er I see my spouse and sire again,
 ' This bow, unfaithful to my glorious aims, 270
 ' Broke by my hand, shall feed the blazing flames.'
 ' To whom the leader of the Dardan race :
 ' Be calm, nor Phœbus' honour'd gift disgrace.<sup>3</sup>
 ' The distant dart be prais'd, though here we need
 ' The rushing chariot, and the bounding steed. 275
 ' Against yon hero let us bend our course,
 ' And, hand to hand, encounter force with force.
 ' Now mount my seat, and from the chariot's height
 ' Observe my father's steeds, renown'd in fight ;
 ' Practis'd alike to turn, to stop, to chase, 280
 ' To dare the shock, or urge the rapid race :
 ' Secure with these, through fighting fields we go,
 ' Or safe to Troy, if Jove assist the foe.
 ' Haste, seize the whip, and snatch the guiding rein ;<sup>4</sup>
 ' The warrior's fury let this arm sustain : 285
 ' Or if to combat thy bold heart incline,
 ' Take thou the spear, the chariot's care be mine.'
 ' O prince !' (Lycaon's valiant son replied,)
 ' As thine the steeds, be thine the task to guide.
 ' The horses, practis'd to their lord's command, 290
 ' Shall hear the rein and answer to thy hand.

<sup>3</sup> Homer tells us in the second book, ver. 334 of the catalogue, that the bow and shafts of Pandarus were given him by Apollo. Pope.

<sup>4</sup> It is not meant, says Pope, that one of the heroes should alight or descend from the chariot, but only that he should quit the reins to the management of the other, and stand on foot upon the chariot to fight from thence.

But if, unhappy, we desert the fight,
 'Thy voice alone can animate their flight :
 'Else shall our fates be number'd with the dead.
 'And these, the victor's prize, in triumph led. 295
 'Thine be the guidance then : with spear and shield
 'Myself will charge this terror of the field.'
 And now both heroes mount the glittering car ;
 The bounding coursers rush amidst the war.
 Their fierce approach bold Sthenelus espied, 300
 Who thus, alarm'd, to great Tydides cried :
 'O friend ! two chiefs of force immense I see,
 'Dreadful they come. and bend their rage on thee
 'Lo the brave heir of old Lycaon's line,
 'And great Æneas, sprung from race divine ! 305
 'Enough is given to fame. Ascend thy car ;
 'And save a life, the bulwark of our war.'
 At this the hero cast a gloomy look,
 Fix'd on the chief with scorn, and thus he spoke :
 'Me dost thou bid to shun the coming fight ? 310
 'Me would'st thou move to base, inglorious flight ?
 'Know, 'tis not honest in my soul to fear,
 'Nor was Tydides born to tremble here.
 'I hate the cumbrous chariot's slow advance,
 'And the long distance of the flying lance : 315
 'But while my nerves are strong, my force entire,
 'Thus front the foe, and emulate my sire.
 'Nor shall yon steeds, that fierce to fight convey
 'Those threat'ning heroes, bear them both away ;
 'One chief at least beneath this arm shall die ; 320
 'So Pallas tells me, and forbids to fly.
 'But if she dooms, and if no god withstand,
 'That both shall fall by one victorious hand ;
 'Then heed my words : my horses here detain,
 'Fix'd to the chariot by the straiten'd rein ; 325
 'Swift to Æneas' empty seat proceed,
 'And seize the coursers of ethereal breed,
 'The race of those, which once the thundering god
 'For ravish'd Ganymede on Tros bestow'd,
 'The best that e'er on earth's broad surface run 330
 'Beneath the rising or the setting sun.
 'Hence great Anchises stole a breed, unknown
 'By mortal mares, from fierce Laomedon :
 'Four of this race his ample stalls contain,
 'And two transport Æneas o'er the plain. 335
 'These, were the rich immortal prize our own,
 'Thro' the wide world should make our glory known.'

Thus while they spoke, the foe came furious on,
 And stern Lycæon's warlike race begun :
 ' Prince, thou art met. Tho' late in vain assail'd, 340
 ' The spear may enter where the arrow fail'd.'
 He said, then shook the ponderous lance, and flung ;
 On his broad shield the sounding weapon rung,
 Pierc'd the tough orb, and in his cuirass hung.
 ' He bleeds ! the pride of Greece !' (the boaster cries,) 345
 ' Our triumph now the mighty warrior lies !'
 ' Mistaken vaunter !' Diomed replied ;
 ' Thy dart has err'd, and now my spear be tried :
 ' Yet scape not both ; one, headlong from his car,
 ' With hostile blood shall glut the god of war.' 350
 He spoke, and, rising, hurl'd his forceful dart,
 Which, driven by Pallas, pierced a vital part ;
 Full in his face it enter'd, and betwixt
 The nose and eyeball the proud Lycian fix'd :
 Crash'd all his jaws, and cleft the tongue within, 355
 Till the bright point look'd out beneath the chin.
 Headlong he falls, his helmet knocks the ground ;
 Earth groans beneath him, and his arms resound ;
 The starting coursers tremble with affright ;
 The soul indignant seeks the realms of night. 360
 To guard his slaughter'd friend, Æneas flies,
 His spear extending where the carcass lies ;
 Watchful he wheels, protects it every way,
 As the grim lion stalks around his prey.
 O'er the fallen trunk his ample shield display'd, 365
 He hides the hero with his mighty shade,
 And threats aloud : the Greeks with longing eyes
 Behold at distance, but forbear the prize.
 Then fierce Tydides stoops ; and, from the fields
 Heaved with vast force, a rocky fragment wields. 370
 Not two strong men th' enormous weight could raise,
 Such men as live in these degenerate days.
 He swung it round ; and, gath'ring strength to throw,
 Discharged the ponderous ruin at the foe.
 Where to the hip th' inserted thigh unites, 375
 Full on the bone the pointed marble lights ;
 Though both the tendons broke the rugged stone,
 And stripp'd the skin, and crack'd the solid bone.
 Sunk on his knees, and staggering with his pains,
 His falling bulk his bended arms sustains ; 380
 Lost in a dizzy mist the warrior lies ;
 A sudden cloud comes swimming o'er his eyes.
 There the brave chief, who mighty numbers sway'd,
 Oppress'd had sunk to death's eternal shade ;

But heavenly Venus, mindful of the love 385
 She bore Anchises in th' Idæan grove,
 His danger views with anguish and despair,
 And guards her offspring with a mother's care.
 About her much-lov'd son her arms she throws,
 Her arms whose whiteness match the falling snows 390
 Screen'd from the foe behind her shining veil,
 The swords wave harmless, and the javelins fail :
 Safe through the rushing horse, and feather'd flight
 Of sounding shafts, she bears him from the fight.
 Nor Sthenelus, with unassisting hands, 395
 Remain'd unheedful of his lord's commands :
 His panting steeds, remov'd from out the war,
 He fix'd with straiten'd traces to the car.
 Next, rushing to the Dardan spoil, detains
 The heavenly coursers with the flowing manes : 400
 These, in proud triumph to the fleet convey'd,
 No longer now a Trojan lord obey'd.
 That charge to bold Deipylus he gave,
 (Whom most he lov'd, as brave men love the brave,)
 Then, mounting on his car, resum'd the rein, 405
 And follow'd where Tydides swept the plain.
 Meanwhile (his conquest ravish'd from his eyes)
 The raging chief in chase of Venus flies :
 No goddess she commission'd to the field,
 Like Pallas dreadful with her sable shield, 410
 Or fierce Bellona thundering at the wall,
 While flames ascend, and mighty ruins fall ;
 He knew soft combats suit the tender dame,
 New to the field, and still a foe to fame.
 Thro' breaking ranks his furious course he bends, 415
 And at the goddess his broad lance extends ;
 Through her bright veil the daring weapon drove,
 Th' ambrosial veil, which all the Graces wove :
 Her snowy hand the razing steel profan'd,
 And the transparent skin with crimson stain'd. 420
 From the clear vein a stream immortal flow'd,
 Such stream as issues from a wounded god ;
 Pure emanation ! uncorrupted flood ;
 Unlike our gross, diseas'd, terrestrial blood :
 (For not the bread of man their life sustains, 425
 Nor wine's inflaming juice supplies their veins.)
 With tender shrieks the goddess fill'd the place,
 And dropp'd her offspring from her weak embrace.
 Him Phœbus took : he casts a cloud around
 The fainting chief, and wards the mortal wound. 430

Then with a voice that shook the vaulted skies,
 The king insults the goddess as she flies :
 ' Ill with Jove's daughter bloody fights agree,
 ' The field of combat is no scene for thee :
 ' Go, let thy own soft sex employ thy care,
 ' Go, lull the coward, or delude the fair.
 ' Taught by this stroke, renounce the war's alarms,
 ' And learn to tremble at the name of arms.'

435

Tydides thus. The goddess, seiz'd with dread,
 Confus'd, distracted, from the conflict fled.

440

To aid her, swift the winged Iris flew,
 Wrapt in a mist above the warring crew.

The queen of love with faded charms she found,
 Pale was her cheek, and livid look'd the wound.

445

To Mars, who sat remote, they bent their way ;
 Far on the left, with clouds involv'd he lay ;

Beside him stood his lance, distain'd with gore,
 And, rein'd with gold, his foaming steeds before :
 Low at his knee, she begg'd, with streaming eyes,

450

Her brother's car, to mount the distant skies,
 And shew'd the wound by fierce Tydides given,
 A mortal man, who dares encounter heaven.

Stern Mars attentive hears the queen complain,
 And to her hand commits the golden rein :

455

She mounts the seat, oppress'd with silent woe,
 Driven by the goddess of the painted bow.

The lash resounds, the rapid chariot flies,
 And in a moment scales the lofty skies.

There stopp'd the car, and there the coursers stood,
 Fed by fair Iris with ambrosial food.

460

Before her mother, Love's bright queen appears,
 O'erwhelm'd with anguish and dissolv'd in tears ;

She raised her in her arms, beheld her bleed,
 And ask'd what god had wrought this guilty deed ?

465

Then she : ' This insult from no god I found,
 ' An impious mortal gave the daring wound !

' Behold the deed of haughty Diomed !

' 'Twas in the son's defence the mother bled.

' The war with Troy no more the Grecians wage ;
 ' But with the gods (th' immortal gods) engage.'

470

Dioné then : ' Thy wrongs with patience bear,

' And share those griefs inferior powers must share ;

' Unnumber'd woes mankind from us sustain,

' And men with woes afflict the gods again.

' The mighty Mars, in mortal fetters bound,

475

' And lodg'd in brazen dungeons under ground,

Full thirteen moons imprison'd<sup>4</sup> roar'd in vain ;
 ' Otus and Ephialtes<sup>5</sup> held the chain ;
 ' Perhaps had perish'd, had not Hermes' care
 ' Restor'd the groaning god to upper air. 480
 ' Great Juno's self has borne her weight of pain,
 ' Th' imperial partner of the heavenly reign ;
 ' Amphitryon's son infix'd the deadly dart,
 ' And fill'd with anguish her immortal heart.
 ' E'en hell's grim king Alcides' power confess'd, 485
 ' The shaft found entrance in his iron breast ;
 ' To Jove's high palace for a cure he fled,
 ' Pierc'd in his own dominions of the dead ;
 ' Where Pæon<sup>6</sup> sprinkling heavenly balm around,
 ' Assuag'd the glowing pangs and clos'd the wound. 490
 ' Rash, impious man ! to stain the bless'd abodes,
 ' And drench his arrows in the blood of gods !
 ' But thou, (though Pallas urg'd thy frantic deed,)
 ' Whose spear ill-fated makes a goddess bleed,
 ' Know thou, whoe'er with heavenly power contends, 495
 ' Short is his date, and soon his glory ends ;
 ' From fields of death when late he shall retire,
 ' No infant on his knees shall call him sire.
 ' Strong as thou art, some god may yet be found,
 ' To stretch thee pale and gasping on the ground ; 500
 ' Thy distant wife, Ægialé the fair,
 ' Starting from sleep with a distracted air,
 ' Shall rouse thy slaves, and her lost lord deplore,
 ' The brave, the great, the glorious, now no more !'<sup>7</sup>
 This said, she wip'd from Venus' wounded palm
 The sacred ichor, and infus'd the balm.
 Juno and Pallas with a smile survey'd,
 And thus to Jove began the blue-ey'd maid :
 ' Permit thy daughter, gracious Jove ! to tell
 ' How this mischance the Cyprian queen befel. 510
 ' As late she tried with passion to inflame
 ' The tender bosom of a Grecian dame,
 ' Allur'd the fair with moving thoughts of joy,
 ' To quit her country for some youth of Troy ;
 ' The clasping zone, with golden buckles bound. 515
 ' Raz'd her soft hand with this lamented wound.'

<sup>4</sup> Two giants, who were engaged in the war against the gods. They imprisoned Mars for carrying off Adonis, who was put under their charge by Venus.

<sup>7</sup> Diomedes died in Italy, in voluntary exile from Argos, where, on his return from Troy, he found his wife living in adultery.

The sire of gods and men superior simil'd,
And, calling Venus, thus address'd his child :
' Not these, O daughter, are thy proper cares,
' Thee milder arts befit, and softer wars ; 520
' Sweet smiles are thine, and kind endearing charms ;
' To Mars and Pallas leave the deeds of arms.'

Thus they in heaven. While on the plain below
The fierce Tydides charg'd his Dardan foe,
H'd with celestial blood pursued his way,
And fearless dar'd the threat'ning god of day ;
Already in his hopes he saw him kill'd,
Though screen'd behind Apollo's mighty shield.
Thrice, rushing furious, at the chief he struck ;
His blazing buckler thrice Apollo shook : 530

He tried the fourth : when, breaking from the cloud,
A more than mortal voice was heard aloud :
' O son of Tydens, cease ! be wise, and see'
' How vast the difference of the gods and thee ;
' Distance immense ! between the powers that shine 535
' Above, eternal, deathless, and divine,
' And mortal man ! a wretch of humble birth,
' A short liv'd reptile in the dust of earth.'

So spoke the god who darts celestial fires ;
He dreads his fury, and some steps retires. 540
Then Phœbus bore the chief of Venus' race
To Troy's high fane, and to his holy place ;
Latona there and Phœbe heal'd the wound ;
With vigour arm'd him, and with glory crown'd
This done, the patron of the silver bow 545
A phantom rais'd, the same in shape and show
With great Æneas ; such the form he bore,
And such in fight the radiant arms he wore.

Around the spectre bloody wars are wag'd,
And Greece and Troy with clashing shields engag'd. 550
Meantime on Ilion's tower Apollo stood,
And, calling Mars, thus urged the raging god :

' Stern power of arms, by whom the mighty fall,
' Who bathe in blood, and shake th' embattled wall !
' Rise in thy wrath ! to hell's abhorr'd abodes 555
' Despatch yon Greek, and vindicate the gods.
' First rosy Venus felt his brutal rage ;
' Me next he charg'd, and dares all heaven engage :'
' The wretch would brave high heaven's immortal sire,
' His triple thunder, and his bolts of fire.' 560

The god of battles issues on the plain,
Stirs all the ranks, and fires the Trojan train :

In form like Acamas, the Thracian guide,
 Enrag'd, to Troy's retiring chiefs he cried :
 ' How long, ye sons of Priam ! will ye fly, 565
 ' And unreveng'd see Priam's people die ?
 ' Still unresisted shall the foe destroy,
 ' And stretch the slaughter to the gates of Troy ?
 ' Lo, brave Æneas sinks beneath his wound,
 ' Not godlike Hector more in arms renown'd : 570
 ' Haste all, and take the generous warrior's part.'
 He said ; new courage swell'd each hero's heart.
 Sarpedon first his ardent soul express'd,
 And, turn'd to Hector, these bold words address'd ;
 ' Say, chief, is all thy ancient valour lost ? 575
 ' Where are thy threats, and where thy glorious boast,
 ' That, propp'd alone by Priam's race should stand,
 ' Troy's sacred walls, nor need a foreign hand ?
 ' Now, now thy country calls her wanted friends,
 ' And the proud vaunt in just derision ends. 580
 ' Remote they stand, while alien troops engage,
 ' Like trembling hounds before the lion's rage.
 ' Far distant hence I held my wide command,
 ' Where foaming Xanthus laves the Lycian land,
 ' With ample wealth (the wish of mortals) bless'd 585
 ' A beauteous wife, and infant at her breast ;
 ' With those I left whatever dear could be ;
 ' Greece, if she conquers, nothing wins from me.
 ' Yet first in fight my Lycian bands I cheer,
 ' And long to meet this mighty man ye fear ; 590
 ' While Hector idle stands, nor bids the brave
 ' Their wives, their infants, and their altars, save.
 ' Haste, warrior, haste ! preserve thy threaten'd state ;
 ' Or one vast burst of all-involving fate
 ' Full o'er your towers shall fall, and sweep away 595
 ' Sons, sires, and wives, an undistinguish'd prey.
 ' Rouse all thy Trojans, urge thy aids to fight ;
 ' These claim thy thoughts by day, thy watch by night :
 ' With force incessant the brave Greeks oppose ;
 ' Such care thy friends deserve, and such thy foes. 600
 Stung to the heart the generous Hector hears,
 But just reproof with decent silence bears.
 From his proud car the prince impetuous springs ;
 On earth he leaps ; his brazen armour rings. 605
 Two shining spears are brandish'd in his hands ;
 Thus arm'd, he animates his drooping bands,
 Revives their ardour, turns their steps from flight,
 And wakes anew the dying flames of fight.

They turn, they stand: the Greeks their fury dare,
Condense their powers, and wait the growing war. 610

As when, on Ceres' sacred floor, the swain
Spreads the wide fan to clear the golden grain,
And the light chaff, before the breezes borne,
Ascends in clouds from off the happy corn;
The grey dust, rising with collected winds, 615
Drives o'er the barn, and whitens all the hinds:

So white with dust, the Grecian host appears,
From trampling steeds, and thundering charioteers
The dusky clouds from labour'd earth arise,
And roll in smoking volumes to the skies. 620

Mars hovers o'er them with his sable shield,
And adds new horrors to the darken'd field;
Pleas'd with this charge, and ardent to fulfil
In Troy's defence, Apollo's heavenly will:
Soon as from fight the blue-ey'd maid retires, 625

Each Trojan bosom with new warmth he fires,
And now the god, from forth his sacred fane,
Produced Æneas to the shouting train;
Alive, unharm'd, with all his peers around,
Erect he stood, and vigorous from his wound: 630
Inquiries none they made; the dreadful day
No pause of words admits, no dull delay;
Fierce discord storms. Apollo loud exclaims,
Fame calls, Mars thunders, and the field's in flames.

Stern Diomed with either Ajax stood, 635
And great Ulysses, bath'd in hostile blood.
Embodied close, the labouring Grecian train
The fiercest shock of charging hosts sustain;
Unmov'd and silent, the whole war they wait,
Serenely dreadful, and as fix'd as fate. 640

So, when th' embattled clouds in dark array
Along the skies their gloomy lines display.
When now the North his boisterous rage has spent,
And peaceful sleeps the liquid element,
The low-hung vapours, motionless and still, 645
Rest on the summits of the shaded hill:

Till the mass scatters as the winds arise,
Dispers'd and broken, through the ruffled skies.
Not was the general wanting to his train;
From troop to troop he toils thro' all the plain: 650

Ye Greeks, be men! the charge of battle bear;
'Your brave associates, and yourselves revere!
'Let glorious acts more glorious acts inspire,
'And catch from breast to breast the noble fire!

' On valour's side the odds of combat lie, 655
 ' The brave live glorious, or lamented die ;
 ' The wretch who trembles in the field of fame,
 ' Meets death, and worse than death, eternal shame.'
 These words he seconds with his flying lance,
 To meet whose point was stopt Deicoön's chance : 660
 Æneas' friend, and in his native place
 Honour'd and lov'd like Priam's royal race :
 Long had he fought, the foremost in the field ;
 But now the monarch's lance transpierc'd his shield :
 His shield too weak the furious dart to stay, 665
 Through his broad belt the weapon forced its way ;
 The grisly wound dismiss'd his soul to hell,
 His arms around him rattled as he fell.
 Then fierce Æneas, brandishing his blade,
 In dust Orsilochus and Crethon laid, 670
 Whose sire Diöcleus, wealthy, brave, and great,
 In well-built Pheræ held his lofty seat :
 Sprung from Alpheus, plenteous stream ! that yields
 Increase of harvests to the Pylian fields :
 He got Orsilochus, Diöcles he, 675
 And these descended in the third degree.
 Too early expert in the martial toil,
 In sable ships they left their native soil,
 T' avenge Atrides ; now, untimely slain,
 They fell with glory on the Phrygian plain. 680
 So two young mountain lions, nurs'd with blood
 In deep recesses of the gloomy wood,
 Rush fearless to the plains, and uncontroll'd
 Depopulate the stalls and waste the fold ;
 Till, pierc'd at distance from their native den, 685
 O'erpower'd they fall beneath the force of men.
 Prostrate on earth their beauteous bodies lay,
 Like mountain firs, as tall and straight as they.
 Great Menelaus views with pitying eyes,
 Lifts his bright lance, and at the victor flies ; 690
 Mars urg'd him on ; yet, ruthless in his hate,
 The god but urg'd him to provoke his fate.
 He thus advancing, Nestor's valiant son
 Shakes for his danger, and neglects his own ;
 Struck with the thought, should Helen's lord be slain, 695
 And all his country's glorious labours vain.
 Already met, the threat'ning heroes stand ;
 The spears already tremble in their hand ;
 In rush'd Antilochus, his aid to bring,
 And fall or conquer by the Spartan king. 700

These seen, the Dardan backward turn'd his course,
 Brave as he was, and shunn'd unequal force.
 The breathless bodies to the Greeks they drew ;
 Then mix in combat, and their toils renew.

First Pylæmenes, great in battle, bled, 705
 Who, sheath'd in brass, the Paphlagonians led.
 Atrides mark'd him where sublime he stood ;
 Fix'd in his throat, the javelin drank his blood.
 The faithful Mydon, as he turn'd from fight
 His flying coursers, sunk to endless night : 710
 A broken rock by Nestor's son was thrown ;
 His bended arm receiv'd the falling stone ;
 From his numb'd hand the ivory-studded reins °
 Dropp'd in the dust, are trail'd along the plains :
 Meanwhile his temples feel a deadly wound ; 715
 He groans in death, and ponderous sinks to ground :
 Deep drove his helmet in the sands, and there
 The head stood fix'd, the quivering legs in air,
 Till trampled flat beneath the coursers' feet :
 The youthful victor mounts his empty seat, 720
 And bears the prize in triumph to the fleet.

Great Hector saw, and, raging at the view,
 Pours on the Greeks ; the Trojan troops pursue ;
 He fires his host with animating cries,
 And brings along the furies of the skies. 725
 Mars, stern destroyer ! and Bellona dread,
 Flame in the front, and thunder at their head :
 This swells the tumult and the rage of fight ;
 That shakes a spear that casts a dreadful light ;
 Where Hector march'd, the god of battles shin'd, 730
 Now storm'd before him, and now raged behind.

Tydidēs paus'd amidst his full career ;
 Then first the hero's manly breast knew fear.
 As when some simple swain his cot forsakes,
 And wide thro' fens an unknown journey takes ; 735
 If chance a swelling brook his passage stay,
 And foam impervious cross the wanderer's way,
 Confus'd he stops, a length of country past,
 Eyes the rough waves, and, tir'd, returns at last :
 Amaz'd no less the great Tydidēs stands ; 740
 He stay'd, and, turning, thus address'd his bands :

' No wonder, Greeks, that all to Hector yield
 ' Secure of favouring gods, he takes the field ;
 ' His strokes they second, and avert our spears :
 ' Behold where Mars in mortal arms appears ! 745
 ' Retire then, warriors, but sedate and slow ;
 ' Retire, but with your faces to the foe.

' Trust not too much your unavailing might ;
 ' 'Tis not with Troy, but with the gods, ye fight.'
 Now near the Greeks the black battalions drew ; 750
 And first, two leaders valiant Hector slew :
 His force Anchialus and Mnesthes found,
 In every art of glorious war renown'd :
 In the same car the chiefs to combat ride,
 And fought united, and united died. 755
 Struck at the sight, the mighty Ajax glows
 With thirst of vengeance, and assaults the foes.
 His massy spear, with matchless fury sent,
 Through Amphius' belt and heaving belly went :
 Amphius Apæsius' happy soil possess'd, 760
 With herds abounding, and with treasure bless'd ;
 But fate resistless from his country led
 The chief, to perish at his people's head.
 Shook with his fall, his brazen armour rung,
 And fierce, to seize it, conquering Ajax sprung ; 765
 Around his head an iron tempest rain'd ;
 A wood of spears his ample shield sustain'd ;
 Beneath one foot the yet warm corpse he press'd,
 And drew his javelin from the bleeding breast :
 He could no more ; the showering darts denied 770
 To spoil his glittering arms, and plummy pride.
 Now foes on foes came pouring on the fields,
 With bristling lances, and compacted shields ;
 Till, in the steely circle straiten'd round,
 Forc'd he gives way, and sternly quits the ground. 775
 While thus they strive, Tlepolemus the great,
 Urg'd by the force of unresisted fate,
 Burns with desire Sarpedon's strength to prove ;
 Alcides' offspring meets the son of Jove.
 Sheath'd in bright arms each adverse chief came on, 780
 Jove's great descendant, and his greater son.
 Prepar'd for combat, ere the lance he toss'd,
 The daring Rhodian vents his haughty boast :
 ' What brings this Lycian counsellor so far,
 ' To tremble at our arms, not mix in war ? 785
 ' Know thy vain self ; nor let their flattery move,
 ' Who style thee son of cloud-compelling Jove.
 ' How far unlike those chiefs of race divine !
 ' How vast the difference of their deeds and thine !
 ' Jove got such heroes as my sire, whose soul 790
 ' No fear could daunt, nor earth nor hell control.

'Troy felt his arm, and yon proud ramparts stand<sup>s</sup>

'Rais'd on the ruins of his vengeful hand :

'With six small ships, and but a slender train,

'He left the town a wide deserted plain.

795

'But what art thou, who deedless look'st around,

'While unreveng'd thy Lycians bite the ground ?

'Small aid to Troy thy feeble force can be ;

'But wert thou greater, thou must yield to me

'Pierced by my spear, to endless darkness go !

800

'I make this present to the shades below.'

The son of Hercules, the Rhodian guide,

Thus haughty spoke. The Lycian king replied :

'Thy sire, O prince ! o'erturn'd the Trojan state,

'Whose perjur'd monarch well deserv'd his fate ;

805

'Those heavenly steeds the hero sought so far,

'False he detain'd, the just reward of war :

'Nor so content, the generous chief defied,

'With base reproaches and unmanly pride.

'But you, unworthy the high race you boast,

810

'Shall raise my glory when thy own is lost :

'Now meet thy fate, and, by Sarpedon slain,

'Add one more ghost to Pluto's gloomy reign.'

He said : both javelins at an instant flew :

Both struck, both wounded, but Sarpedon's slew :

815

Full in the boaster's neck the weapon stood,

Transfix'd his throat, and drank the vital blood ;

The soul disdainful seeks the caves of night,

And his seal'd eyes for ever lose the light.

'Yet not in vain, Tlepolemus, was thrown 820

Thy angry lance ; which, piercing to the bone

Sarpedon's thigh, had robb'd the chief of breath,

But Jove was present, and forbade the death.

Borne from the conflict by his Lycian throng,

The wounded hero dragg'd the lance along :

825

(His friends, each busied in his several part,

Through haste, or danger, had not drawn the dart.)

The Greeks with slain Tlepolemus retir'd ;

Whose fall Ulysses view'd, with fury fir'd ;

Doubtful if Jove's great son he should pursue,

830

Or pour his vengeance on the Lycian crew.

But heaven and fate the first design withstand,

Nor this great death must grace Ulysses' hand.

<sup>s</sup> He alludes to the history of the first destruction of Troy by Hercules, occasioned by Laomedon's refusing that hero the horses, which were the reward promised him for the delivery of his daughter Hesione. Pope.

- Minerva drives him on the Lycian train ;
 Alastor, Cromius, Halius, strew'd the plain, 835
 Alcander, Prytanis, Noëmon fell ;
 And numbers more his sword had sent to hell,
 But Hector saw ; and, furious at the sight,
 Rush'd terrible amidst the ranks of fight.
 With joy Sarpedon view'd the wish'd relief, 840
 And faint, lamenting, thus implored the chief :
 ' Oh, suffer not the foe to bear away
 ' My helpless corpse, an unassisted prey !
 ' If I, unblest'd, must see my son no more,
 ' My much-lov'd consort, and my native shore,
 ' Yet let me die in Ilion's sacred wall ;
 ' Troy, in whose cause I fell, shall mourn my fall.'
 He said, nor Hector to the chief replies,
 But shakes his plume, and fierce to combat flies,
 Swift as a whirlwind drives the scattering foes, 850
 And dyes the ground with purple as he goes.
 Beneath a beech, Jove's consecrated shade,
 His mournful friends divine Sarpedon laid :
 Brave Pelagon, his favourite chief, was nigh,
 Who wrench'd the javelin from his sinewy thigh. 855
 The fainting soul stood ready wing'd for flight,
 And o'er his eyeballs swam the shades of night.
 But Boreas rising fresh, with gentle breath,
 Recall'd his spirit from the gates of death.
 The generous Greeks recede with tardy pace, 860
 Though Mars and Hector thunder in their face ;
 None turn their backs to mean ignoble flight,
 Slow they retreat, and, e'en retreating, fight.
 Who first, who last, by Mars' and Hector's hand,
 Stretch'd in their blood, lay gasping on the sand ? 865
 Teuthras the great, Orestes the renown'd
 For managed steeds, and Trochus, press'd the ground ;
 Next CEnomaus, and CEnops' offspring died ;
 Oresbius last fell groaning at their side :
 Oreshius, in his painted mitre gay, 870
 In fat Bootia held his wealthy sway,
 Where lakes surround low Hylé's watery plain ;
 A prince and people studious of their gain.
 The carnage Juno from the skies survey'd,
 And, touch'd with grief, bespoke the blue-ey'd maid : 875
 ' Oh sight accurs'd ! shall faithless Troy prevail,
 ' And shall our promise to our people fail ?
 ' How vain the word to Menelaus given
 ' By Jove's great daughter and the queen of heaven,

'Beneath his arms that Priam's towers should fall,
 'If warring gods for ever guard the wall!
 'Mars, red with slaughter, aids our hated foes:
 'Haste, let us arm, and force with force oppose!

She spoke; Minerva burns to meet the war:
 And now heaven's empress calls her blazing car. 885
 At her command rush forth the steeds divine;
 Rich with immortal gold their trappings shine.
 Bright Hebé waits; by Hebé ever young,
 The whirling wheels are to the chariot hung.
 On the bright axle turns the bidden wheel 890
 Of sounding brass; the polish'd axle steel.
 Eight brazen spokes in radiant order flame;
 The circles gold, of uncorrupted frame,
 Such as the heavens produce: and round the gold
 Two brazen rings of work divine were roll'd. 895
 The bossy naves of solid silver shone;
 Braces of gold suspend the moving throne:
 The car behind an arching figure bore;
 The bending concave form'd an arch before.
 Silver the beam, th' extended yoke was gold, 900
 And golden reins th' immortal coursers hold.
 Herself, impatient, to the ready car
 The coursers joins, and breathes revenge and war.
 Pallas disrobes; her radiant veil untied,
 With flowers adorn'd, with art diversified, 905
 (The labour'd veil her heavenly fingers wove,)
 Flows on the pavement of the court of Jove.
 Now heaven's dread arms her mighty limbs invest,
 Jove's cuirass blazes on her ample breast;
 Deck'd in sad triumph for the mournful field, 910
 O'er her broad shoulders hangs his horrid shield,
 Dire, black, tremendous! round the margin roll'd,
 A fringe of serpents hissing guards the gold:
 Here all the terrors of grim war appear,
 Here rages Force, here tremble Flight and Fear, 915
 Here storm'd Contention, and here Fury frown'd,
 And the dire orb portentous Gorgon crown'd.
 The massy golden helm she next assumes,
 That dreadful nod with four o'ershading plumes:
 So vast, the broad circumference contains 920
 A hundred armies on a hundred plains.*

* The words in the original, observes Pope, are susceptible of two meanings, either that the helmet was sufficiently large to have covered the armies of a hundred cities, or that the armies of a hundred cities were en-

The goddess thus th' imperial car ascends ;
 Shook by her arm the mighty javelin bends,
 Ponderous and huge ; that, when her fury burns.
 Proud tyrants humbles, and whole hosts o'erturns. 925
 Swift at the scourge th' ethereal coursers fly,
 While the smooth chariot cuts the liquid sky :
 Heaven's gates spontaneous open to the powers,
 Heaven's golden gates, kept by the winged Hours ;
 Commission'd in alternate watch they stand, 930
 The sun's bright portals and the skies command,
 Involve in clouds th' eternal gates of day,
 Or the dark barrier roll with ease away.
 The sounding hinges ring : on either side
 The gloomy volumes, pierc'd with light, divide. 935
 The chariot mounts, where, deep in ambient skies
 Confus'd, Olympus' hundred heads arise ;
 Where far apart the Thunderer fills his throne,
 O'er all the gods, superior and alone.
 There with her snowy hand the queen restrains 940
 The fiery steeds, and thus to Jove complains :
 ' O sire ! can no resentment touch thy soul ?
 ' Can Mars rebel, and does no thunder roll ?
 ' What lawless rage on you forbidden plain !
 ' What rash destruction ! and what heroes slain ! 945
 ' Venus, and Phœbus with the dreadful bow,
 ' Smile on the slaughter, and enjoy my woe.
 ' Mad, furious power ! whose unrelenting mind
 ' No god can govern, and no justice bind.
 ' Say, mighty father ! shall we scourge his pride, 950
 ' And drive from fight th' impetuous homicide ?'
 To whom assenting, thus the Thunderer said :
 ' Go ! and the great Minerva be thy aid.
 ' To tame the monster-god Minerva knows,
 ' And oft afflicts his brutal breast with woes,' 955
 He said : Saturnia, ardent to obey,
 Lash'd her white steeds along the aerial way.
 Swift down the steep of heaven the chariot rolls,
 Between th' expanded earth and starry poles.
 Far as a shepherd from some point on high, 960
 O'er the wide main extends his boundless eye ;
 Through such a space of air, with thundering sound,
 At every leap th' immortal coursers bound.

graved upon it ; and the passage is translated, he adds, in such a manner, that it may be taken either way, though the learned are most inclined to the former sense.

Troy now they reach'd, and touch'd those banks divine
 Where silver Simois and Scamander join. 965
 There Juno stopp'd, and (her fair steeds unloos'd)
 Of air condens'd a vapour circumfus'd :
 For these, impregnate with celestial dew,
 On Simois' brink ambrosial herbs grew.
 Thence to relieve the fainting Argive throng, 970
 Smooth as the sailing doves, they glide along.
 The best and bravest of the Grecian band
 (A warlike circle) round Tydides stand ;
 Such was their look as lions bath'd in blood,
 Or foaming boars, the terror of the wood. 975
 Heaven's empress mingles with the mortal crowd,
 And shouts, in Stentor's sounding voice, aloud :
 Stentor the strong, endued with brazen lungs,
 Whose throat surpass'd the force of fifty tongues :
 ' Inglorious Argives ! to your race a shame,
 ' And only men in figure and in name !
 ' Once from the walls your timorous foes engaged,
 ' While fierce in war divine Achilles raged ;
 ' Now, issuing fearless, they possess the plain,
 ' Now win the shores, and scarce the seas remain.' 985
 Her speech new fury to their hearts convey'd ;
 While near Tydides stood th' Athenian maid :
 The king beside his panting steeds she found,
 O'erspent with toil, reposing on the ground :
 To cool his glowing wound he sat apart ; 990
 (The wound inflicted by the Lycian dart ;)
 Large drops of sweat from all his limbs descend,
 Beneath his ponderous shield his sinews bend,
 Whose ample belt, that o'er his shoulder lay,
 He cas'd ; and wash'd the clotted gore away. 995
 The goddess, leaning o'er the bending yoke
 Beside his coursers, thus her silence broke :
 ' Degenerate prince ! and not of Tydeus' kind :
 ' Whose little body lodged a mighty mind ;
 ' Foremost he press'd in glorious toils to share, 1000
 ' And scarce refrain'd when I forbade the war.
 ' Alone, unguarded, once he dared to go,
 ' And feast encircled by the Theban foe ;<sup>10</sup>
 ' There braved and vanquish'd many a hardy knight ;
 ' Such nerves I gave him, and such force in fight. 1005
 ' Thou too, no less hast been my constant care ;
 ' Thy hands I arm'd, and sent thee forth to war :

<sup>10</sup> See B. iv. ver. 440.

'But thee or fear deters or sloth detains;
 'No drop of all thy father warms thy veins.' 1010
 The chief thus answer'd mild: 'Immortal maid!
 'I own thy presence, and confess thy aid.
 'Not fear, thou know'st, withholds me from the plains,
 'Nor sloth hath seiz'd me, but thy word restrains:
 'From warring gods thou bad'st me turn my spear, 1015
 'And Venus only found resistance here.
 'Hence, goddess! heedful of thy high commands,
 'Loth I gave way, and warr'd our Argive bands:
 'For Mars, the homicide, these eyes beheld,
 'With slaughter red, and raging round the field.' 1020
 Then thus Minerva: 'Brave Tydides, hear!
 'Not Mars himself, nor aught immortal, fear.
 'Full on the god impel thy foaming horse:
 'Pallas commands, and Pallas lends thee force.
 'Rash, furious, blind, from these to those he flies, 1025
 'And every side of wavering combat tries:
 'Large promise makes, and breaks the promise made;
 'Now gives the Grecians, now the Trojans aid.'
 She said, and to the steeds approaching near,
 Drew from his seat the martial charioteer.<sup>11</sup> 1030
 The vigorous power the trembling car ascends,
 Fierce for revenge; and Diomed attends.
 The groaning axle bent beneath the load;
 So great a hero, and so great a god.
 She snatch'd the reins, she lash'd with all her force, 1035
 And full on Mars impell'd the foaming horse:
 But first to hide her heavenly visage, spread
 Black Orcus' helmet<sup>12</sup> o'er her radiant head.
 Just then gigantic Periphas lay slain,
 The strongest warrior of th' Ætolian train; 1040
 The god who slew him leaves his prostrate prize
 Stretch'd where he fell, and at Tydides flies.
 Now rushing fierce, in equal arms, appear
 The daring Greek, the dreadful god of war!
 Full at the chief, above his courser's head, 1045
 From Mars's arm th' enormous weapon fled:
 Pallas oppos'd her hand, and caus'd to glance
 Far from the car the strong immortal lance.

<sup>12</sup> As everything that goes into the dark empire of Pluto, or Orcus, disappears, and is seen no more, the Greeks from thence borrowed this figurative expression, "to put on Pluto's helmet," that is to say, "to become invisible." Eustathius. Pope.

Then threw the force of Tydeus' warlike son ;
 The javelin hiss'd ; the goddess urged it on : 1050
 Where the broad cincture girt his armour round,
 It pierc'd the god : his groin receiv'd the wound.
 From the rent skin the warrior tugs again
 The smoking steel. Mars bellows with the pain :
 Loud, as the roar encountering armies yield, 1055
 When shouting millions shake the thundering field.
 Both armies start, and trembling gaze around ;
 And earth and heaven rebellow to the sound.
 As vapours blown by Auster's sultry breath,
 Pregnant with plagues and shedding seeds of death, 1060
 Beneath the rage of burning Sirius rise,
 Choke the parch'd earth, and blacken all the skies ;
 In such a cloud the god, from combat driven,
 High o'er the dusty whirlwind scales the heaven.
 Wild with his pain, he sought the bright abodes, 1065
 There sullen sat beneath the sire of gods,
 Shew'd the celestial blood, and with a groan
 Thus pour'd his plaints before th' immortal throne :
 ' Can Jove, supine, flagitious facts survey,
 ' And brook the furies of this daring day ? 1070
 ' For mortal men celestial powers engage,
 ' And gods on gods exert eternal rage.
 ' From thee, O father ! all these ills we bear,
 ' And thy fell daughter with the shield and spear :
 ' Thou gav'st that fury to the realms of light, 1075
 ' Pernicious, wild, regardless of the right.
 ' All heaven beside reveres thy sovereign sway,
 ' Thy voice we hear, and thy behests obey :
 ' 'Tis hers t' offend, and, e'en offending, share
 ' Thy breast, thy counsels, thy distinguish'd care : 1080
 ' So boundless she, and thou so partial grown,
 ' Well may we deem the wondrous birth thy own.
 ' Now frantic Diomed, at her command,
 ' Against th' immortals lifts his raging hand :
 ' The heavenly Venus first his fury found, 1085
 ' Me next encountering, me he dar'd to wound ;
 ' Vanquish'd I fled : e'en I, the god of fight,
 ' From mortal madness scarce was sav'd by flight.
 ' Else hadst thou seen me sink on yonder plain,
 ' Heap'd round, and heaving under loads of slain ; 1090
 ' Or, pierc'd with Grecian darts, for ages lie,
 ' Condemn'd to pain, though fated not to die.'
 Him thus upbraiding, with a wrathful look
 The lord of thunders view'd, and stern bespoke :

'To me, perfidious! this lamenting strain? 1095
 'Of lawless force shall lawless Mars complain?
 'Of all the gods who tread the spangled skies,
 'Thou most unjust, most odious in our eyes!
 'Inhuman discord is thy dire delight,
 'The waste of slaughter, and the rage of fight: 1100
 'No bound, no law, thy fiery temper quells,
 'And all thy mother<sup>13</sup> in thy soul rebels.
 'In vain our threats, in vain our power, we use:
 'She gives th' example, and her son pursues.
 'Yet long th' inflicted pangs thou shalt not mourn, 1105
 'Sprung since thou art from Jove, and heavenly born.
 'Else, sin, ~~etc.~~ with lightning, had'st thou hence been thrown,
 'Where chain'd on burning rocks the 'Titans groan.'
 Thus he who shakes Olympus with his nod;
 Then gave to Pæon's care the bleeding god. 1110
 With gentle hand the balm he pour'd around,
 And heal'd th' immortal flesh, and clos'd the wound.
 As when the fig's press'd juice, infus'd in cream,
 To curds coagulates the liquid stream,
 Sudden the fluids fix, the parts combin'd; 1115
 Such and so soon th' ethereal texture join'd.
 Cleans'd from the dust and gore, fair Hebe dress'd
 His mighty limbs in an immortal vest.
 Glorious he sat, in majesty restor'd,
 Fast by the throne of heaven's superior lord. 1120
 Juno and Pallas mount the blest abodes,
 Their task perform'd, and mix among the gods.<sup>14</sup>

<sup>13</sup> Juno.      <sup>14</sup> The allegory of this whole book lies so open, is carried on with such closeness, and wound up with so much fulness and strength, that it is a wonder how it could enter into the imagination of any that these actions of Diomed were only a daring and extravagant fiction in Homer, as if he affected the marvellous at any rate. The great moral of it is, that a brave man should not contend against Heaven, but resist only Venus and Mars, incontinence and ungoverned fury. Diomed is proposed as an example of a great and enterprising nature, which would perpetually be venturing too far, and committing extravagancies or impieties, did it not suffer itself to be checked and guided by Minerva, or Prudence: for it is this Wisdom (as we are told in the very first lines of the book) that raises a hero above all others. Pope.

BOOK VI.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE EPISODES OF GLAUCUS AND DIOMED, AND OF HECTOR AND ANDROMACHE.

The gods having left the field, the Greeks prevail. Helenus, the chief augur of Troy, commands Hector to return to the city, in order to appoint a solemn procession of the queen and the Trojan matrons to the temple of Minerva, to entreat her to remove Diomed from the fight. The battle relaxing during the absence of Hector, Glaucus and Diomed have an interview between the two armies; where, coming to the knowledge of the friendship and hospitality past between their ancestors, they make exchange of their arms. Hector, having performed the orders of Helenus, prevailed upon Paris to return to the battle, and taken a tender leave of his wife Andromache, hastens again to the field.

The scene is first in the field of battle, between the river Simois and Scamander, and then changes to Troy.

Now heaven forsakes the fight ; th' immortals yield
To human force and human skill the field :
Dark showers of javelins fly from foes to foes ;
Now here, now there, the tide of combat flows ;
While Troy's fam'd streams,<sup>1</sup> that bound the deathful plain,     5
On either side run purple to the main.

Great Ajax first to conquest led the way,
Broke the thick ranks, and turn'd the doubtful day.
The Thracian Acamas his faulchion found,
And hew'd th' enormous giant to the ground ;     10
His thundering arm a deadly stroke impress'd
Where the black horse-hair nodded o'er his crest :
Fix'd in his front the brazen weapon lies,
And seals in endless shades his swimming eyes.

Next Teuthras' son distain'd the sands with blood,     15
Axylus, hospitable, rich, and good :
In fair Arisba's walls (his native place)
He held his seat ; a friend to human race.
Fast by the road, his ever-open door
Obliged the wealthy, and reliev'd the poor.     20
To stern Tydides now he falls a prey,
No friend to guard him in the dreadful day !
Breathless the good man fell, and by his side
His faithful servant, old Calesius, died.

By great Euryalus was Dresus slain, 25
 And next he laid Opheltius on the plain.
 Two twins were near, bold, beautiful, and young,
 From a fair Naiad and Bucolion sprung :
 (Laomedon's white flocks Bucolion fed,
 That monarch's first-born by a foreign bed ; 30
 In secret woods he won the Naiad's grace,
 And two fair infants crown'd his strong embrace :)
 Here dead they lay in all their youthful charms ;
 The ruthless victor stripp'd their shining arms.
 Astyalus by Polypætes fell ; 35
 Ulysses' spear Pidytes sent to hell ;
 By Teucer's shaft brave Aretaön bled,
 And Nestor's son laid stern Ablerus dead ;
 Great Agamemnon, leader of the brave,
 The mortal wound of rich Elatus gave, 40
 Who held in Pedasus his proud abode,
 And till'd the banks where silver Satnio<sup>2</sup> flow'd.
 Melanthius by Eurypylus was slain ;
 And Phylacus from Leitus flies in vain.
 Unbless'd Adrastus next at mercy lies 45
 Beneath the Spartan spear, a living prize.
 Scar'd with the din and tumult of the fight,
 His headlong steeds, precipitate in flight,
 Rush'd on a tamarisk's strong trunk, and broke
 The shatter'd chariot from the crooked yoke : 50
 Wide o'er the field, resistless as the wind,
 For Troy they fly, and leave their lord behind.
 Prone on his face he sinks beside the wheel :
 Atrides<sup>3</sup> o'er him shakes his vengeful steel ;
 The fallen chief in suppliant posture press'd 55
 The victor's knees, and thus his prayer address'd :
 ' Oh spare my youth, and for the life I owe<sup>4</sup>
 ' Large gifts of price my father shall bestow :
 ' When fame shall tell, that not in battle slain
 ' Thy hollow ships his captive son detain, 60
 ' Rich heaps of brass shall in thy tent be told,
 ' And steel well-temper'd, and persuasive gold.'
 He said : compassion touch'd the hero's heart ;
 He stood suspended with the lifted dart :

<sup>4</sup> This passage, where Agamemnon takes away that Trojan's life whom Menelaus had pardoned, and is not blamed by Homer for so doing, must be ascribed to the uncivilised manners of those times. The historical books of the Old Testament abound in instances of the like cruelty to conquered enemies. Pope.

As pity pleaded for his vanquish'd prize, 65
 Stern Agamemnon swift to vengeance flies,
 And furious thus : ' Oh impotent of mind !
 ' Shall these, shall these, Atrides' mercy find ?
 ' Well hast thou known proud Troy's perfidious land,
 ' And well her natives merit at thy hand ! 70
 ' Not one of all the race, nor sex, nor age,
 ' Shall save a Trojan from our boundless rage :
 ' Ilion shall perish whole, and bury all ;
 ' Her babes, her infants at the breast, shall fall.
 ' A dreadful lesson of example'd fate, 75
 ' To warn the nations, and to curb the great.'
 The monarch spoke ; the words, with warmth address'd,
 To rigid justice steel'd his brother's breast.
 Fierce from his knees the hapless chief he thrust ;
 The monarch's javelin stretch'd him in the dust. 80
 Then, pressing with his foot his panting heart,
 Forth from the slain he tugg'd the reeking dart.
 Old Nestor saw, and rous'd the warriors' rage ;
 ' Thus, heroes ! thus the vigorous combat wage !
 ' No son of Mars descend, for servile gains, 85
 ' To touch the booty, while a foe remains.
 ' Behold yon glittering host, your future spoil !
 ' First gain the conquest, then reward the toil.'
 And now had Greece eternal fame acquir'd,
 And frighted Troy within her walls retir'd ; 90
 Had not sage Helenus her state redress'd,
 Taught by the gods that mov'd his sacred breast :
 Where Hector stood, with great Æneas join'd,
 The seer reveal'd the counsels of his mind :
 ' Ye generous chiefs ! on whom th' immortals lay 95
 ' The cares and glories of this doubtful day,
 ' On whom your aids, your country's hopes depend
 ' Wise to consult, and active to defend !
 ' Here, at our gates, your brave efforts unite,
 ' Turn back the routed, and forbid the flight ; 100
 ' Ere yet their wives' soft arms the cowards gain,
 ' The sport and insult of the hostile train.
 ' When your commands have hearten'd every band,
 ' Ourselves, here fix'd, will make the dang'rous stand ;
 ' Press'd as we are, and sore of former fight, 105
 ' These straits demand our last remains of might.
 ' Meanwhile, thou, Hector, to the town retire,
 ' And teach our mother what the gods require :
 ' Direct the queen to lead th' assembled train *
 ' Of Troy's chief matrons to Minerva's fane ; 110

- 'Unbar the sacred gates, and seek the power
 'With offer'd vows, in Ilion's topmost tower.
 'The largest mantle her rich wardrobes hold,
 'Most priz'd for art, and labour'd o'er with gold,
 'Before the goddess' honour'd knees be spread ; 115
 'And twelve young heifers to her altars led.
 'If so the power, aton'd by fervent prayer,
 'Our wives, our infants, and our city spare,
 'And far avert Tydides' wasteful ire,
 'That mows whole troops, and makes all Troy retire. 120
 'Not thus Achilles taught our hosts to dread,
 'Sprung, though he was from more than mortal bed ;
 'Not thus resistless rul'd the stream of fight,
 'In rage unbounded, and unmatched in might.' 125
 Hector obedient heard ; and, with a bound,
 Leap'd from his trembling chariot to the ground ;
 Through all his host, inspiring force, he flies,
 And bids the thunder of the battle rise.
 With rage recruited the bold Trojans glow,
 And turn the tide of conflict on the foe : 130
 Fierce in the front he shakes two dazzling spears ;
 All Greece recedes, and midst her triumph fears :
 Some god, they thought, who rul'd the fate of wars,
 Shot down avenging, from the vault of stars.
 Then thus, aloud : 'Ye dauntless Dardans, hear ! 135
 'And you whom distant nations send to war ;
 'Be mindful of the strength your fathers bore ;
 'Be still yourselves, and Hector asks no more.
 'One hour demands me in the Trojan wall,
 'To bid our altars flame, and victims fall : 140
 'Nor shall, I trust, the matrons' holy train,
 'And reverend elders, seek the gods in vain.'
 This said, with ample strides the hero pass'd ;
 The shield's large orb behind his shoulder cast,
 His neck o'ershading, to his ankle hung ; 145
 And as he march'd the brazen buckler rung.
 Now paus'd the battle, (godlike Hector gone,)
 When daring Glaucus and great Tydeus' son
 Between both armies met ; the chiefs from far
 Observ'd each other, and had mark'd for war. 150
 Near as they drew, Tydides thus began :
 'What art thou, boldest of the race of man ?
 'Our eyes, till now, that aspect ne'er beheld,
 'Where fame is reap'd amid th' embattled field ;
 'Yet far before the troops thou dar'st appear, 155
 'And meet a lance the fiercest heroes fear.

' Unhappy they, and born of luckless sires,
 ' Who tempt our fury when Minerva fires !
 ' But if from heaven, celestial, thou descend,
 ' Know, with immortals we no more contend. 160
 ' Not long Lycurgus view'd the golden light,
 ' That daring man who mix'd with gods in fight ;
 ' Bacchus, and Bacchus' votaries, he drove
 ' With brandish'd steel from Nyssa's<sup>6</sup> sacred grove ;
 ' Their consecrated spears lay scatter'd round, 165
 ' With curling vines and twisted ivy bound ;
 ' While Bacchus headlong sought the briny flood,
 ' And Thetis' arms received the trembling god.
 ' Nor fail'd the crime th' immortals' wrath to move,
 ' (Th' immortals bless'd with endless ease above ;)
 ' Depriv'd of sight, by their avenging doom, 170
 ' Cheerless he breath'd, and wander'd in the gloom :
 ' Then sunk unpitied to the dire abodes,
 ' A wretch accurs'd, and hated by the gods !
 ' I brave not heaven ; but if the fruits of earth 175
 ' Sustain thy life, and human be thy birth,
 ' Bold as thou art, too prodigal of breath,
 ' Approach, and enter the dark gates of death.
 ' What, or from whence I am, or who my sire,
 (Replied the chief,) ' can Tydeus' son inquire ? 180
 ' Like leaves on trees the race of man is found,<sup>6</sup>
 ' Now green in youth, now withering on the ground :
 ' Another race the following spring supplies,
 ' They fall successive, and successive rise ;
 ' So generations in their course decay, 185
 ' So flourish these, when those are past away.
 ' But if thou still persist to search my birth,
 ' Then hear a tale that fills the spacious earth :
 ' A city stands on Argos' utmost bound ;
 ' (Argos the fair, for warlike steeds renown'd ;)
 ' Æolian Sisyphus, with wisdom bless'd, 190
 ' In ancient time the happy walls possess'd,
 ' Then call'd Ephyré :<sup>7</sup> Glaucus was his son ;
 ' Great Glaucus, father of Bellerophon,
 ' Who o'er the sons of men in beauty shin'd, 195
 ' Lov'd for that valour which preserves mankind.
 ' Then mighty Prætus Argos' sceptre sway'd,
 ' Whose hard commands Bellerophon obey'd.

<sup>6</sup> A mountain in Thrace, of which Lycurgus was king.      <sup>6</sup> " As of the green leaves on a thick tree, some fall and some grow, so is the generation of flesh and blood ; one cometh to an end, and another is born." Ecce-siasticus, xiv. 18.      <sup>7</sup> The same city that was afterwards called Corinth.

- ' With direful jealousy the monarch rag'd,
 ' And the brave prince in numerous toils engag'd. 200
 ' For him, Antea burn'd with lawless flame,
 ' And strove to tempt him from the paths of fame :
 ' In vain she tempted the relentless youth,
 ' Endued with wisdom, sacred fear, and truth.
 ' Fir'd at his scorn, the queen to Prætus fled, 205
 ' And begg'd revenge for her insulted bed :
 ' Incens'd he heard, resolving on his fate ;
 ' But hospitable laws restrain'd his hate :
 ' To Lycia the devoted youth he sent,
 ' With tablets seal'd, that told his dire intent. 210
 ' Now, bless'd by every power who guards the good,
 ' The chief arriv'd at Xanthus' silver flood :
 ' There Lycia's monarch paid him honours due ;
 ' Nine days he feasted, and nine bulls he slew.
 ' But when the tenth bright morning orient glow'd, 215
 ' The faithful youth his monarch's mandate shew'd :
 ' The fatal tablets, till that instant seal'd,
 ' The deathful secret to the king reveal'd.
 ' First, dire Chimæra's conquest was enjoin'd ;
 ' A mingled monster, of no mortal kind ; 220
 ' Behind, a dragon's fiery tail was spread ;
 ' A goat's rough body bore a lion's head ;
 ' Her pitchy nostrils flaky flames expire ;
 ' Her gaping throat emits infernal fire.
 ' This pest he slaughter'd ; (for he read the skies,
 And trusted heaven's informing prodigies ;)
 ' Then met in arms the Solymæan crew,<sup>a</sup>
 (Fiercest of men,) and those the warrior slew.
 ' Next the bold Amazons' whole force defied ;
 ' And conquer'd still, for heaven was on his side. 230
 ' Nor ended here his toils & his Lycian foes,
 ' At his return, a treacherous ambush rose,
 With levell'd spears along the winding shore :
 ' There fell they breathless, and return'd no more.
 ' At length the monarch with repentant grief 235
 ' Confess'd the gods, and god-descended chief ;
 His daughter gave, the stranger to detain,
 ' With half the honours of his ample reign.
 The Lycians grant a chosen space of ground,
 ' With woods, with vineyards, and with harvests crown'd. 240
 ' There long the chief his happy lot possess'd,
 ' With two brave sons and one fair daughter bless'd :

<sup>a</sup> The Solymi were an ancient nation inhabiting the mountainous parts of Asia Minor.

' (Fair e'en in heavenly eyes ; her fruitful love
 ' Crown'd with Sarpedon's birth th' embrace of Jove.)
 ' But when at last, distracted in his mind, 245
 ' Forsook by heaven, forsaking human kind,
 ' Wide o'er th' Aleian field<sup>9</sup> he chose to stray,
 ' A long, forlorn, uncomfortable way !
 ' Woes heap'd on woes consum'd his wasted heart ;
 ' His beauteous daughter fell by Phœbe's dart ; 250
 ' His eldest-born by raging Mars was slain,
 ' In combat on the Solymæan plain.
 ' Hippolochus surviv'd ; from him I came,
 ' The honour'd author of my birth and name ;
 ' By his decree I sought the Trojan town, 255
 ' By his instructions learn to win renown ;
 ' To stand the first in worth as in command,
 ' To add new honours to my native land ;
 ' Before my eyes my mighty sires to place,
 ' And emulate the glories of our race. 260
 He spoke, and transport fill'd Tydides' heart ;
 In earth the generous warrior fix'd his dart,
 Then friendly, thus, the Lycian prince address'd
 ' Welcome, my brave hereditary guest !
 ' Thus ever let us meet with kind embrace, 265
 ' Nor stain the sacred friendship of our race.
 ' Know, chief, our grandsires have been guests of old,
 ' Œneus the strong, Bellerophon the bold ;
 ' Our ancient seat his honour'd presence grac'd,
 ' Where twenty days in genial rites he pass'd. 270
 ' The parting heroes mutual presents left ;
 ' A golden goblet was thy grandsire's gift ;
 ' Œneus a belt of matchless work bestow'd,
 ' That rich with Tyrian dye refulgent glow'd.
 ' (This from his pledge I learn'd, which, safely stor'd
 ' Among my treasures, still adorns my board :
 ' For Tydeus left me young, when Thebé's wall
 ' Beheld the sons of Greece untimely fall.)
 ' Mindful of this, in friendship let us join ;
 ' If heaven our steps to foreign lands incline, 280
 ' My guest in Argos thou, and I in Lycia thine.
 ' Enough of Trojans to this lance shall yield,
 ' In the full harvest of yon ample field ;

<sup>9</sup> The Aleian field, or "field of wandering," lay between the rivers
 Pyramus and Pinarus, in Cilicia. Bellerophon is said to have been condemned to wander there till he died, for presumption in having attempted to soar to heaven on his horse Pegasus.

' Enough of Greeks shall dye thy pear<sup>l</sup> with gore ;
' But thou and Diomed be foes no more. 285

' Now change we arms, and prove to either host
' We guard the friendship of the line we boast.'

Thus having said, the gallant chiefs alight,
Their hands they join, their mutual faith they plight ;
Brave Glaucus then each narrow thought resign'd ; 290
(Jove warm'd his bosom and enlarg'd his mind ;)

For Diomed's brass arms, of mean device,
For which nine oxen paid, (a vulgar price,)
He gave his own, of gold divinely wrought ;
A hundred heaves the shining purchase bought.<sup>10</sup> 295

Meantime the guardian of the Trojan state,
Great Hector, enter'd at the Scæan gate.
Beneath the beech-trees' consecrated shades,
The Trojan matrons and the Trojan maids
Around him flock'd, all press'd with pious care 300
For husbands, brothers, sons, engag'd in war.

He bids the train in long procession go,
And seek the gods, t' avert th' impending woe.
And now to Priam's stately courts he came,
Rais'd on arch'd columns of stupendous frame ; 305

O'er these a range of marble structure runs ;
The rich pavilions of his fifty sons,
In fifty chambers lodged : and rooms of state
Oppos'd to those, where Priam's daughters sat :

Twelve domes for them and their lov'd spouses shone. 310
Of equal beauty, and of polish'd stone.

Hither great Hector pass'd, nor pass'd unseen
Of royal Hecuba, his mother queen.
(With her Laodicè, whose beauteous face
Surpass'd the nymphs of Troy's illustrious race.) 315

Long in a strict embrace she held her son,
And press'd his hand, and tender thus begun :

' O Hector ! say, what great occasion calls
' My son from fight, when Greece surrounds our walls ?
' Com'st thou to supplicate th' almighty power, 320
' With lifted hands from Ilion's lofty tower ?

' Stay, till I bring the cup with Bacchus crown'd,
' In Jove's high name, to sprinkle on the ground,
' And pay due vows to all the gods around.
' Then with a plenteous draught refresh thy soul, 325
' And draw new spirits from the generous bowl ;

' Spent as thou art with long laborious fight,
 ' The brave defender of thy country's right.'
 ' Far hence be Bacchus' gifts ;' (the chief rejoin'd ;)

' Inflaming wine, pernicious to mankind,

' Unnerves the limbs, and dulls the noble mind.

' Let chiefs abstain, and spare the sacred juice,
 ' To sprinkle to the gods, its better use.
 ' By me that holy office were profan'd ;
 ' Ill fits it me, with human gore distain'd,

' To the pure skies these horrid hands to raise,
 ' Or offer heaven's great sire polluted praise.
 ' You, with your matrons, go, a spotless train !
 ' And burn rich odours in Minerva's fane.

' The largest mantle your full wardrobes hold,

' Most priz'd for art, and labour'd o'er with gold,

' Before the goddess' honour'd knees be spread,
 ' And twelve young heifers to her altar led.
 ' So may the power, aton'd by fervent prayer,
 ' Our wives, our infants, and our city spare,

' And far avert Tydides' wasteful ire,
 ' Who mows whole troops, and makes all Troy retire.
 ' Be this, O mother, your religious care ;
 ' I go to rouse soft Paris to the war ;
 ' If yet, not lost to all the sense of shame,

' The recreant warrior hear the voice of fame.
 ' Oh would kind earth the hateful wretch embrace,
 ' That pest of Troy, that ruin of our race !
 ' Deep to the dark abyss might he descend,
 ' Troy yet should flourish, and my sorrows end.'

This heard, she gave command ; and summon'd came
 Each noble matron, and illustrious dame.
 The Phrygian queen to her rich wardrobe went,
 Where treasur'd odours breath'd a costly scent.
 There lay the vestures of no vulgar art,
 Sidonian maids embroider'd every part,
 Whom from soft Sidon youthful Paris bore,
 With Helen touching on the Tyrian shore.
 Here as the queen revolv'd with careful eyes
 The various textures and the various dyes,
 She chose a veil that shone superior far,
 And glow'd refulgent as the morning star.
 Herself with this the long procession leads ;
 The train majestically slow proceeds.
 Soon as to Ilion's topmost tower they come,
 And awful reach the high Palladian dome,
 Antenor's consort, fair Theano, waits
 As Pallas' priestess, and unbars the gates.

With hands uplifted, and imploring eyes,
 They fill the dome with supplicating cries. 375
 The priestess then the shining veil displays,
 Placed on Minerva's knees, and thus she prays :
 ' Oh awful goddess ! ever-dreadful maid,
 ' Troy's strong defence, unconquer'd Pallas, aid !
 ' Break thou Tydides' spear, and let him fall 380
 ' Prone on the dust before the Trojan wall.
 ' So twelve young heifers, guiltless of the yoke,
 ' Shall fill thy temple with a grateful smoke.
 ' But thou, aton'd by penitence and prayer,
 ' Ourselves, our infants, and our city spare !' 385
 So pray'd the priestess in her holy faue ;
 So vow'd the matrons, but they vow'd in vain.
 While these appear before the power with prayers,
 Hector to Paris' lofty dome repairs.
 Himself the mansion rais'd, from every part 390
 Assembling architects of matchless art.
 Near Priam's court and Hector's palace stands
 The pompous structure, and the town commands.
 A spear the hero bore of wondrous strength,
 Of full ten cubits was the lance's length ; 395
 The steely point with golden ringlets join'd,
 Before him brandish'd, at each motion shin'd.
 Thus entering, in the glittering rooms he found
 His brother-chief, whose useless arms lay round,
 His eyes delighting with their splendid show, 400
 Bright'ning the shield, and polishing the bow.
 Beside him Helen with her virgins stands,
 Guides their rich labours, and instructs their hands.
 Him thus inactive, with an ardent look
 The prince beheld, and high resenting spoke : 405
 ' Thy hate to Troy is this the time to shew ?
 ' (Oh wretch ill-fated, and thy country's foe !)
 ' Paris and Greece against us both conspire,
 ' Thy close resentment, and their vengeful ire
 ' For thee great Ilion's guardian heroes fall, 410
 ' Till heaps of dead alone defend her wall ;
 ' For thee the soldier bleeds, the matron mourns,
 ' And wasteful war in all its fury burns.
 ' Ungrateful man ! deserves not this thy care,
 ' Our troops to hearten, and our toils to share ? 415
 ' Rise, or behold the conquering flames ascend,
 ' And all the Phrygian glories at an end.'
 ' Brother, 'tis just,' (replied the beauteous youth,)
 ' Thy free remonstrance proves thy worth and truth :

' Yet charge my absence less, oh generous chief! 420
 ' On hate to Troy, than conscious shame and grief.
 ' Here, hid from human eyes, thy brother sat,
 ' And mourn'd in secret his and Ilion's fate.
 ' 'Tis now enough: now glory spreads her charms,
 ' And beauteous Helen calls her chief to arms. 425
 ' Conquest to-day my happier sword may bless,
 ' 'Tis man's to fight, but heaven's to give success.
 ' But while I arm, contain thy ardent mind;
 ' Or go, and Paris shall not lag behind.'

He said, nor answer'd Priam's warlike son; 430
 When Helen thus with lowly grace begun:

' Oh generous brother! if the guilty dame
 ' That caus'd these woes deserves a sister's name!
 ' Would heaven, ere all these dreadful deeds were done,
 ' The day that shew'd me to the golden sun 435
 ' Had seen my death! Why did not whirlwinds bear
 ' The fatal infant to the fowls of air?
 ' Why sunk I not beneath the whelming tide,
 ' And midst the roarings of the waters died?
 ' Heaven fill'd up all my ills, and I accurs'd 440
 ' Bore all, and Paris of those ills the worst.
 ' Helen at least a braver spouse might claim,
 ' Warm'd with some virtue, some regard of fame!
 ' Now, tired with toils, thy fainting limbs recline,
 ' With toils sustain'd for Paris' sake and mine: 445
 ' The gods have link'd our miserable doom,
 ' Our present woe and infamy to come:
 ' Wide shall it spread, and last through ages long,
 ' Example sad! and theme of future song.'

The chief replied: ' This time forbids to rest: 450
 ' The Trojan bands, by hostile fury press'd,
 ' Demand their Hector, and his arm require;
 ' The combat urges, and my soul's on fire.
 ' Urge thou thy knight to march where glory calls,
 ' And timely join me, ere I leave the walls. 455
 ' Ere yet I mingle in the direful fray,
 ' My wife, my infant, claim a moment's stay:
 ' This day (perhaps the last that sees me here)
 ' Demands a parting word, a tender tear:
 ' This day some god, who hates our Trojan land, 460
 ' May vanquish Hector by a Grecian hand.'

He said, and pass'd with sad presaging heart
 To seek his spouse, his soul's far dearer part;
 At home he sought her, but he sought in vain:
 She, with one maid of all her menial train, 465

Had thence retir'd ; and, with her second joy,
 The young Astyanax,<sup>11</sup> the hope of Troy,
 Pensive she stood on Ilion's towery height,
 Beheld the war, and sicken'd at the sight ;
 There her sad eyes in vain her lord explore, 470
 Or weep the wounds her bleeding country bore.

But he who found not whom his soul desir'd,
 Whose virtue charm'd him as her beauty fir'd,
 Stood in the gates, and ask'd what way she bent
 Her parting steps ? If to the fane she went, 475
 Where late the mourning matrons made resort ;
 Or sought her sisters in the Trojan court ?
 ' Not to the court,' (replied th' attendant train,)
 ' Nor, mix'd with matrons, to Minerva's fane :
 ' To Ilion's steepy tower she bent her way, 480
 ' To mark the fortunes of the doubtful day.
 ' Troy fled, she heard, before the Grecian sword :
 ' She heard, and trembled for her distant lord ;
 ' Distracted with surprise, she seem'd to fly,
 ' Fear on her cheek, and sorrow in her eye. 485
 ' The nurse attended with her infant boy,
 ' The young Astyanax, the hope of Troy.'

Hector, this heard, return'd without delay ;
 Swift through the town he trod his former way,
 Through streets of palaces and walks of state ; 490
 And met the mourner at the Scæan gate.
 With haste to meet him sprung the joyful fair,
 His blameless wife, Eëtion's wealthy heir :
 (Cicilian Thebë great Eëtion sway'd,
 And Hippoplacus' wide-extended shade :) 495
 The nurse stood near, in whose embraces press'd,
 His only hope hung smiling at her breast,
 Whom each soft charm and early grace adorn,
 Fair as the new-born star that gilds the morn.
 To this lov'd infant Hector gave the name 500
 Scamandrius, from Scamander's honour'd stream :
 Astyanax the Trojans call'd the boy,
 From his great father, the defence of Troy
 Silent the warrior smil'd, and, pleas'd, resign'd
 To tender passions all his mighty mind : 505
 His beauteous princess cast a mournful look,
 Hung on his hand, and then dejected spoke ;
 Her bosom labour'd with a boding sigh,
 And the big tear stood trembling in her eye.

' Too daring prince ! ah whither dost thou run ?            510
 ' Ah too forgetful of thy wife and son !
 ' And think'st thou not how wretched we shall be,
 ' A widow I, a helpless orphan he !
 ' For sure such courage length of life denies,
 ' And thou must fall, thy virtue's sacrifice.            515
 ' Greece in her single heroes strove in vain ;
 ' Now hosts oppose thee, and thou must be slain !
 ' Oh grant me, gods ! ere Hector meets his doom,
 ' All I can ask of heaven, an early tomb !
 ' So shall my days in one sad tenor run,            520
 ' And end with sorrows as they first begun.
 ' No parent now remains, my griefs to share,
 ' No father's aid, no mother's tender care.
 ' The fierce Achilles wrapt our walls in fire,
 ' Laid Thebæ waste, and slew my warlike sire !            525
 ' His fate compassion in the victor bred ;
 ' Stern as he was, he yet rever'd the dead,
 ' His radiant arms preserv'd from hostile spoil,
 ' And laid him decent on the funeral pile ;
 ' Then rais'd a mountain where his bones were burn'd ;            530
 ' The mountain nymphs the rural tomb adorn'd ;
 ' Jove's sylvan daughters bade their elms bestow
 ' A barren shade, and in his honour grow.
 ' By the same arm my seven brave brothers fell ;
 ' In one sad day beheld the gates of hell ;            535
 ' While the fat herds and snowy flocks they fed,
 ' Amid their fields the hapless heroes bled !
 ' My mother liv'd to hear the victor's bands,
 ' The queen of Hippoplacia's sylvan lands :
 ' Redeem'd too late, she scarce beheld again            540
 ' Her pleasing empire and her native plain,
 ' When, ah ! oppress'd by life-consuming woe,
 ' She fell a victim to Diana's bow.<sup>12</sup>
 ' Yet while my Hector still survives, I see
 ' My father, mother, brethren, all, in thee.            545
 ' Alas ! my parents, brothers, kindred, all,
 ' Once more will perish if my Hector fall.
 ' Thy wife, thy infant, in thy danger share ;
 ' Oh prove a husband's and a father's care !
 ' That quarter most the skilful Greeks annoy,            550
 ' Where yon wild fig-trees join the wall of Troy :

<sup>12</sup> Sudden deaths of women were often imputed to Diana, see ver. 240 Anticlea, the mother of Ulysses, tells him, among the shades, that she was not a victim to Diana's bow. Odyss. xi. 248.

'Thou, from this tower defend th' important post ;
 'There Agamemnon points his dreadful host,
 'That pass Tydides, Ajax, strive to gain,
 'And there the vengeful Spartan fires his train. 555
 'Thrice our bold foes the fierce attack have given,
 'Or led by hopes, or dictated from heaven.
 'Let others in the field their arms employ,
 'But stay my Hector here, and guard his Troy.'
 The chief replied : 'That post shall be my care, 560
 'Nor that alone, but all the works of war.
 'How would the sons of Troy, in arms renown'd,
 'And Troy's proud dames, whose garments sweep the ground,
 'Attaint the lustre of my former name,
 'Should Hector basely quit the field of fame ? 565
 'My early youth was bred to martial pains,
 'My soul impels me to th' embattled plains :
 'Let me be foremost to defend the throne,
 'And guard my father's glories, and my own.
 'Yet come it will, the day decreed by fates ; 570
 '(How my heart trembles while my tongue relates !)
 'The day when thou, imperial Troy ! must bend,
 'And see thy warriors fall, thy glories end.
 'And yet no dire presage so wounds my mind,
 'My mother's death, the ruin of my kind, 575
 'Not Priam's hoary hairs defil'd with gore,
 'Not all my brothers gasping on the shore ;
 'As thine, Andromache ! thy griefs I dread ;
 'I see thee trembling, weeping, captive led !
 'In Argiv' looms our battles to design, 580
 'And woes of which so large a part was thine !
 'To bear the victor's hard commands, or bring
 'The weight of waters from Hyperia's<sup>13</sup> spring.
 'There, while you groan beneath the load of life,
 'They cry, Behold the mighty Hector's wife ! 585
 'Some haughty Greek, who lives thy tears to see,
 'Embitters all thy woes by naming me.
 'The thoughts of glory past, and present shame,
 'A thousand griefs, shall waken at the name !
 'May I lie cold before that dreadful day, 590
 'Press'd with a load of monumental clay !
 'Thy Hector, wrapp'd in everlasting sleep,
 'Shall neither hear thee sigh, nor see thee weep.'
 Thus having spoke, th' illustrious chief of Troy
 Stretch'd his fond arms to clasp the lovely boy. 595

The babe clung crying to his nurse's breast,
 Scar'd at the dazzling helm, and nodding crest.
 With secret pleasure each fond parent smil'd,
 And Hector hasted to relieve his child ;
 The glittering terrors from his brows unbound, 600
 And placed the beaming helmet on the ground.
 Then kiss'd the child, and, lifting high in air,
 Thus to the gods preferr'd a father's prayer :
 ' O thou ! whose glory fills th' ethereal throne,
 ' And all ye deathless powers ! protect my son ! 605
 ' Grant him, like me, to purchase just renown,
 ' To guard the Trojans, to defend the crown,
 ' Against his country's foes the war to wage,
 ' And rise the Hector of the future age !
 ' So when, triumphant from successful toils, 610
 ' Of heroes slain he bears the reeking spoils,
 ' Whole hosts may hail him with deserv'd acclaim,
 ' And say, This chief transcends his father's fame :
 ' While pleas'd, amidst the general shouts of Troy,
 ' His mother's conscious heart o'erflows with joy.' 615

He spoke, and fondly gazing on her charms
 Restor'd the pleasing burden to her arms ;
 Soft on her fragrant breast the babe she laid,
 Hush'd to repose, and with a smile survey'd.
 The troubled pleasure soon chas'd by fear, 620
 She mingled with the smile a tender tear.
 The soften'd chief with kind compassion view'd,
 And dried the falling drops, and thus pursued :
 ' Andromache ! my soul's far better part,
 ' Why with untimely sorrows heaves thy heart ? 625
 ' No hostile hand can antedate my doom,
 ' Till fate condemns me to the silent tomb.
 ' Fix'd is the term to all the race of earth,
 ' And such the hard condition of our birth.
 ' No force can then resist, no flight can save ; 630
 ' All sink alike, the fearful and the brave.
 ' No more—but hasten to thy tasks at home,
 ' There guide the spindle, and direct the loom :
 ' Me glory summons to the martial scene,
 ' The field of combat is the sphere for men. 635
 ' Where heroes war, the foremost place I claim,
 ' The first in danger as the first in fame.'
 Thus having said, the glorious chief resumes
 His towery helmet, black with shading plumes.
 His princely parts with a prophetic sigh
 Unwilling parts, and oft reverts her eye, 640

That stream'd at every look : then, moving slow,
 Sought her own palace, and indulg'd her woe.
 There, while her tears deplored the godlike man,
 Through all her train the soft infection ran ; 645
 The pious maids their mingled sorrows shed,
 And mourn the living Hector as the dead.

But now, no longer deaf to honour's call,
 Forth issues Paris from the palace wall.
 In brazen arms that cast a gleamy ray, 650
 Swift through the town the warrior bends his way.
 The wanton courser thus, with reins unbound,
 Breaks from his stall, and beats the trembling ground ;
 Pamper'd and proud he seeks the wonted tides,
 And laves, in height of blood, his shining sides : 655
 His head now freed he tosses to the skies ;
 His mane dishevell'd o'er his shoulders flies ;
 He snuffs the females in the distant plain,
 And springs, exulting, to his fields again.
 With equal triumph, sprightly, bold, and gay, 660
 In arms refulgent as the god of day,
 The son of Priam, glorying in his might,
 Rush'd forth with Hector to the fields of fight.

And now the warriors passing on the way,
 The graceful Paris first excus'd his stay. 665
 To whom the noble Hector thus replied :
 ' O chief ! in blood, and now in arms, allied !
 ' Thy power in war with justice none contest ;
 ' Known is thy courage, and thy strength confess'd.
 ' What pity, sloth should seize a soul so brave, 670
 ' Or godlike Paris live a woman's slave !
 ' My heart weeps blood at what the Trojans say,
 ' And hopes thy deeds shall wipe the stain away.
 ' Haste then, in all their glorious labours share ;
 ' For much they suffer, for thy sake, in war. 675
 ' These ills shall cease, whene'er by Jove's decree
 ' We crown the bowl to Heaven and Liberty :
 ' While the proud foe his frustrate triumphs mourns,
 ' And Greece indignant through her seas returns.

BOOK VII.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE SINGLE COMBAT OF HECTOR AND AJAX.

The battle renewing with double ardour upon the return of Hector, Minerva is under apprehensions for the Greeks. Apollo, seeing her descend from Olympus, joins her near the Scæan gate. They agree to put off the general engagement for that day, and incite Hector to challenge the Greeks to a single combat. Nine of the princes accepting the challenge, the lot is cast, and falls upon Ajax. These heroes, after several attacks, are parted by the night. The Trojans calling a council, Antenor proposes the delivery of Helen to the Greeks, to which Paris will not consent, but offers to restore them her riches. Priam sends a herald to make this offer, and to demand a truce for burning the dead, the last of which only is agreed to by Agamemnon. When the funerals are performed, the Greeks, pursuant to the advice of Nestor, erect a fortification to protect their fleet and camp, flanked with towers, and defended by a ditch and palisades. Neptune testifies his jealousy at this work, but is pacified by a promise from Jupiter. Both armies pass the night in feasting, but Jupiter disheartens the Trojans with thunder and other signs of his wrath.

The three-and-twentieth day ends with the duel of Hector and Ajax; the next day the truce is agreed: another is taken up in the funeral rites of the slain; and one more in building the fortification before the ships; so that somewhat above three days is employed in this book. The scene lies wholly in the field.

So spoke the guardian of the Trojan state,
Then rush'd impetuous through the Scæan gate.
Him Paris follow'd to the dire alarms;
Both breathing slaughter, both resolv'd in arms.
As when to sailors labouring through the main,
That long had heav'd the weary oar in vain,
Jove bids at length th' expected gales arise;
The gales blow grateful, and the vessel flies:
So welcome these to Troy's desiring train:
The bands are cheer'd, the war awakes again.

Bold Paris first the work of death begun
On great Menestheus, Areïthous' son;
Sprung from the fair Philomeda's embrace,
The pleasing Arnè was his native place.
Then sunk Eioneus to the shades below;
Beneath his steely casque he felt the blow
Full on his neck, from Hector's weighty hand;
And roll'd, with limbs relax'd, along the land.

15

By Glaucus' spear the bold Iphinous bleeds,
 Fix'd in the shoulder as he mounts his steeds ; 20
 Headlong he tumbles : his slack nerves unbound
 Drop the cold useless members on the ground.

When now Minerva saw her Argives slain,
 From vast Olympus to the gleaming plain
 Fierce she descends : Apollo mark'd her flight, 25
 Nor shot less swift from Ilion's towery height :
 Radiant they met, beneath the beechen shade ;
 When thus Apollo to the blue-ey'd maid :

' What cause, O daughter of almighty Jove !
 ' Thus wings thy progress from the realms above ? 30
 ' Once more impetuous dost thou bend thy way,
 ' To give to Greece the long-divided day ?
 ' Too much has Troy already felt thy hate,
 ' Now breathe thy rage, and hush the stern debate :
 ' This day the business of the field suspend ; 35
 ' War soon shall kindle, and great Ilion bend ;
 ' Since vengeful goddesses confederate join
 ' To raze her walls, though built by hands divine.'

To whom the progeny of Jove replies :
 ' I left for this the council of the skies : 40
 ' But who shall bid conflicting hosts forbear,
 ' What art shall calm the furious sons of war ?'
 To her the god : ' Great Hector's soul incite
 ' To dare the boldest Greek to single fight,
 ' Till Greece, provok'd, from all her numbers shew 45
 ' A warrior worthy to be Hector's foe.'

At this agreed, the heavenly powers withdrew ;
 Sage Helenus their secret counsels knew :
 Hector inspir'd he sought : to him address'd,
 Thus told the dictates of his sacred breast : 50
 ' O son of Priam ! let thy faithful ear
 ' Receive my words ; thy friend and brother hear !
 ' Go forth persuasive, and awhile engage
 ' The warring nations to suspend their rage ;
 ' Then dare the boldest of the hostile train 55
 ' To mortal combat on the listed plain,
 ' For not this day shall end thy glorious date ;
 ' The gods have spoke it, and their voice is fate.'

He said : the warrior heard the word with joy ;
 Then with his spear restrain'd the youth of Troy, 60
 Held by the midst athwart. On either hand
 The squadrons part ; th' expecting Trojans stand.
 Great Agamemnon bids the Greeks forbear ;
 They breathe, and hush the tumult of the war.

Th' Athenian maid, and glorious god of day,
With silent joy the settling host survey : 65

In form of vultures, on the beech's height

They sit conceal'd, and wait the future fight.

The thronging troops obscure the dusky fields,
Horrid with bristling spears, and gleaming shields. 70

As when a general darkness veils the main,

(Soft Zephyr curling the wide watery plain,)

The waves scarce heave, the face of ocean sleeps,

And a still horror saddens all the deeps :

Thus, in thick orders settling wide around, 75

At length compos'd they sit, and shade the ground.

Great Hector first amidst both armies broke

• The solemn silence, and their powers bespoke :

• Hear all ye Trojan, all ye Grecian hands,

• What my soul prompts, and what some god commands. 80

• Great Jove, averse our warfare to compose,

• O'erwhelms the nations with new toils and woes ;

• War with a fiercer tide once more returns,

• Till Ilion falls, or till yon navy burns.

• You then, O princes of the Greeks ! appear ; 85

• 'Tis Hector speaks, and calls the gods to hear :

• From all your troops select the boldest knight,

• And him, the boldest, Hector dares to fight.

• Here if I fall, by chance of battle slain,

• Be his my spoil, and his these arms remain ; 90

• But let my body, to my friends return'd,

• By Trojan hands, and Trojan flames be burn'd.

• And if Apollo, in whose aid I trust,

• Shall stretch your daring champion in the dust ;

• If mine the glory to despoil the foe ; 95

• On Phœbus' temple I'll his arms bestow ;

• The breathless carcass to your navy sent,

• Greece on the shore shall raise a monument ;

• Which when some future mariner surveys,

• Wash'd by broad Hellespont's resounding seas, 100

• Thus shall he say, A valiant Greek lies there,

• By Hector slain, the mighty man of war.

• The stone shall tell your vanquish'd hero's name,

• And distant ages learn the victor's fame.'

This fierce defiance Greece astonish'd heard, 105

Blush'd to refuse, and to accept it fear'd.

Stern Menelaus first the silence broke,

And, inly groaning, thus opprobrious spoke :

• Women of Greece ! Oh scandal of your race,

• Whose coward souls your manly forms disgrace, 110

'How great the shame, when every age shall know
 'That not a Grecian met this noble foe!
 'Go then, resolve to earth from whence ye grew,
 'A heartless, spiritless, inglorious crew!
 'Be what ye seem, unanimated clay!
 'Myself will dare the danger of the day.
 'Tis man's bold task the generous strife to try,
 'But in the hands of God is victory.'

117

These words scarce spoke, with generous ardour press'd,
 His manly limbs in azure arms he dress'd:

120

That day, Atreides! a superior hand
 Had stretch'd thee breathless on the hostile strand;
 But all at once, thy fury to compose,
 The kings of Greece, an awful band, arose:
 E'en he their chief, great Agamemnon, press'd
 Thy daring hand, and this advice address'd:

125

'Whither, O Menelaus! wouldst thou run,
 'And tempt a fate which prudence bids thee shun?
 'Griev'd though thou art, forbear the rash design;
 'Great Hector's arm is mightier far than thine.
 'E'en fierce Achilles learn'd its force to fear,
 'And trembling met this dreadful son of war.
 'Sit thou secure amidst thy social band;

130

'Greece in our cause shall arm some powerful hand.
 'The mightiest warrior of th' Achaian name,
 'Though bold, and burning with desire of fame,
 'Content, the doubtful honour might forego,
 'So great the danger, and so brave the foe.'

135

He said, and turn'd his brother's vengeful mind;
 He stoop'd to reason, and his rage resign'd,
 No longer bent to rush on certain harms:
 His joyful friends unbrace his azure arms.

140

He, from whose lips divine persuasion flows,
 Grave Nestor, then, in graceful act arose.

Thus to the kings he spoke: 'What grief, what shame,
 'Attend on Greece, and all the Grecian name?'

145

'How shall, alas! her hoary heroes mourn
 'Their sons degenerate, and their race a scorn;
 'What tears shall down thy silver beard be roll'd,
 'Oh Peleus, old in arms, in wisdom old!

150

'Once with what joy the generous prince would hear
 'Of every chief who fought this glorious war,
 'Participate their fame, and pleas'd inquire
 'Each name, each action, and each hero's sire?
 'Gods! should he see our warriors trembling stand,
 'And trembling all before one hostile hand;

155

' How would he lift his aged arms on high,
 Lament inglorious Greece, and beg to die !
 ' Oh ! would to all th' immortal powers above,
 ' Minerva, Phœbus, and almighty Jove ! 160
 ' Years might again roll back, my youth renew,
 ' And give this arm the spring which once it knew :
 ' When, fierce in war, where Jordan's waters fall
 I led my troops to Phea's trembling wall,
 ' And with th' Arcadian spears my prowess tried, 165
 ' Where Celadon rolls down his rapid tide.
 ' There Ereuthalion brav'd us in the field,
 ' Proud, Areïthous' dreadful arms to wield ;
 ' Great Areïthous, known from shore to shore
 ' By the huge, knotted, iron mace he bore ; 170
 ' No lance he shook, nor bent the twanging bow,
 ' But broke, with this, the battle of the foe.
 ' Him not by manly force Lycurgus slew,
 ' Whose guileful javelin from the thicket flew,
 ' Deep in a winding way his breast assail'd, 175
 ' Nor aught the warrior's thundering mace avail'd :
 ' Supine he fell : those arms which Mars before
 ' Had given the vanquish'd, now the victor bore :
 ' But when old age had dimm'd Lycurgus' eyes,
 ' To Ereuthalion he consign'd the prize. 180
 Furious with this, he crush'd our levell'd bands,
 And dar'd the trial of the strongest hands ;
 ' Nor could the strongest hands his fury stay ;
 ' All saw, and fear'd, his huge tempestuous sway ;
 ' Till I, the youngest of the host, appear'd, 185
 ' And, youngest, met whom all our army fear'd.
 ' I fought the chief ; my arms Minerva crown'd :
 ' Prone fell the giant o'er a length of ground.
 ' What then he was, oh were your Nestor now !
 ' Not Hector's self should want an equal foe. 190
 ' But, warriors, you, that youthful vigour boast,
 ' The flower of Greece, th' examples of our host,
 ' Sprung from such fathers, who such numbers sway,
 ' Can you stand trembling, and desert the day ?
 His warm reproofs the listening kings inflame ; 195
 And nine, the noblest of the Grecian name,
 Upstart'd fierce : but far before the rest
 The king of men advanc'd his dauntless breast ;
 Then bold Tydides, great in arms, appear'd ;
 And next his bulk gigantic Ajax rear'd. 200
 Oïleus follow'd : Idomen was there,
 And Merion, dreadful as the god of war :

With these Eurypylus and Thoon stand,
 And wise Ulysses clos'd the daring band.
 All these, alike inspir'd with noble rage, 205
 Demand the fight. To whom the Pylian sage :
 ' Lest thirst of glory your brave souls divide,
 ' What chief shall combat, let the lots decide.
 ' Whom heaven shall choose, be his the chance to raise
 ' His country's fame, his own immortal praise.' 210
 The lots produc'd, each hero signs his own ;
 Then in the general's helm the fates are thrown.
 The people pray with lifted eyes and hands,
 And vows like these ascend from all the bands :
 ' Grant thou, Almighty ! in whose hand is fate, 215
 ' A worthy champion for the Grecian state.
 ' This task let Ajax or Tydides prove,
 ' Or he, the king of kings, belov'd by Jove.'
 Old Nestor shook the casque. By heaven inspir'd,
 Leap'd forth the lot, of every Greek desir'd. 220
 This from the right to left the herald bears,
 Held out in order to the Grecian peers ;
 Each to his rival yields the mark unknown,
 Till godlike Ajax finds the lot his own ;
 Surveys th' inscription with rejoicing eyes, 225
 Then casts before him, and with transport cries :
 ' Warriors ! I claim the lot, and arm with joy ;
 ' Be mine the conquest of this chief of Troy.
 ' Now, while my brightest arms my limbs invest,
 ' To Saturn's son be all your vows address'd : 230
 ' But pray in secret, lest the foes should hear,
 ' And deem your prayers the mean effect of fear.
 ' Said I in secret ? No, your vows declare,
 ' In such a voice as fills the earth and air.
 ' Lives there a chief, whom Ajax ought to dread, 235
 ' Ajax, in all the toils of battle bred ?
 ' From warlike Salamis I drew my birth,
 ' And, born to combats, fear no force of earth.'
 He said. The troops with elevated eyes,
 Implore the god whose thunder rends the skies : 240
 ' O father of mankind, superior lord !
 ' On lofty Ida's holy hill ador'd ;
 ' Who in the highest heaven hast fix'd thy throne,
 ' Supreme of gods ! unbounded, and alone :
 ' Grant thou, that Telamon may bear away 24
 ' The praise and conquest of this doubtful day ;
 ' Or if illustrious Hector be thy care,
 ' That both may claim it, and that both may share.'

Now Ajax braced his dazzling armour on ;
 Sheath'd in bright steel the giant warrior shone : 250
 He moves to combat with majestic pace ;
 So stalks in arms the grizly god of Thrace,
 When Jove to punish faithless men prepares,
 And gives whole nations to the waste of wars.
 Thus march'd the chief, tremendous as a god ; 255
 Grimly he smil'd : earth trembled as he strode :
 His massy javelin quivering in his hand,
 He stood, the bulwark of the Grecian band.
 Through every Argive heart new transport ran ;
 All Troy stood trembling at the mighty man. 260
 E'en Hector paus'd ; and, with new doubt oppress'd,
 Felt his great heart suspended in his breast :
 'Twas vain to seek retreat, and vain to fear ;
 Himself had challeng'd, and the foe drew near.
 Stern Telamon behind his ample shield, 265
 As from a brazen tower, o'erlook'd the field.
 Huge was its orb, with seven thick folds o'ercast
 Of tough bull-hides ; of solid brass the last.
 (The work of Tychius, who in Hylé dwell'd,
 And all in arts of armoury excell'd.) 270
 This Ajax bore before his manly breast,
 And, threatening, thus his adverse chief address'd :
 ' Hector ! approach my arm, and singly know
 ' What strength thou hast, and what the Grecian foe.
 ' Achilles shuns the fight ; yet some there are
 ' Not void of soul, and not unkill'd in war :
 ' Let him, inactive on the sea-beat shore,
 ' Indulge his wrath, and aid our arms no more ;
 ' Whole troops of heroes Greece has yet to boast,
 ' And sends thee one, a sample of her host. 280
 ' Such as I am, I come to prove thy might ;
 ' No more——be sudden, and begin the fight.'
 ' O son of Telamon, thy country's pride !'
 (To Ajax thus the Trojan prince replied,)
 ' Me, as a boy or woman, would'st thou fright, 285
 ' New to the field, and trembling at the fight ?
 ' Thou meet'st a chief deserving of thy arms,
 ' To combat born, and bred amidst alarms :
 ' I know to shift my ground, remount the car,
 ' Turn, charge, and answer every call of war : 290
 ' To right, to left, the dexterous lance I wield,
 ' And bear thick battle on my sounding shield.
 ' But open be our fight, and bold each blow ;
 ' I steal no conquest from a noble foe.'

He said, and, rising high above the field, 295
 Whirl'd the long lance against the sevenfold shield.
 Full on the brass descending from above
 Through six bull hides the furious weapon drove,
 Till in the seventh it fix'd. Then Ajax threw ;
 Through Hector's shield the forceful javelin flew ; 300
 His corslet enters, and his garment rends,
 And, glancing downwards, near his flank descends.
 The wary Trojan shrinks, and, bending low
 Beneath his buckler, disappoints the blow.
 From their bor'd shields the chiefs their javelins drew, 305
 Then close impetuous, and the charge renew :
 Fierce as the mountain lions bathed in blood,
 Or foaming bears, the terror of the wood.
 At Ajax, Hector his long lance extends ;
 The blunted point against the buckler bends. 310
 But Ajax, watchful as his foe drew near,
 Drove through the Trojan targe the knotty spear ;
 It reach'd his neck, with matchless strength impell'd ;
 Spouts the black gore, and dims the shining shield.
 Yet ceas'd not Hector thus ; but, stooping down, 315
 In his strong hand upheav'd a flinty stone,
 Black, craggy, vast : to this his force he bends ;
 Full on the brazen boss the stone descends ;
 The hollow brass resounded with the shock.
 Then Ajax seized the fragment of a rock, 320
 Applied each nerve, and, swinging round on high,
 With force tempestuous let the rain fly :
 The huge stone thundering through his buckler broke ;
 His slacken'd knees received the numbing stroke ;
 Great Hector falls extended on the field, 325
 His bulk supporting on the shatter'd shield :
 Nor wanted heavenly aid : Apollo's might
 Confirm'd his sinews, and restor'd to fight.
 And now both heroes their broad faulchions drew ;
 In flaming circles round their heads they flew ; 330
 But then by heralds' voice the word was given,
 The sacred ministers of earth and heaven :
 Diving Talthybius whom the Greeks employ,
 And sage Idæus on the part of Troy,
 Between the swords their peaceful sceptres rear'd ; 335
 And first Idæus' awful voice was heard :
 ' Forbear, my sons ! your farther force to prove,
 ' Both dear to men, and both belov'd of Jove.
 ' To either host your matchless worth is known,
 ' Each sounds your praise, and war is all your own. 340

- ' But now the night extends her awful shade :
 ' The goddess parts you : be the night obey'd.'
 To whom great Ajax his high soul express'd :
 ' O sage ! to Hector be these words address'd.
 ' Let him, who first provok'd our chiefs to fight, 345
 ' Let him demand the sanction of the night ;
 ' If first he ask it, I content obey,
 ' And cease the strife when Hector shews the way.'
 ' O first of Greeks !' (his noble foe rejoin'd.)
 ' Whom heaven adorns, superior to thy kind, 350
 ' With strength of body, and with worth of mind !
 ' Now martial law commands us to forbear ;
 ' Hereafter we shall meet in glorious war ;
 ' Some future day shall lengthen out the strife,
 ' And let the gods decide of death or life ! 355
 ' Since then the night extends her gloomy shade,
 ' And heaven enjoins it, be the night obey'd.
 ' Return, brave Ajax, to thy Grecian friends,
 ' And joy the nations whom thy arm defends ;
 ' As I shall glad each chief, and Trojan wife, 360
 ' Who wearies heaven with vows for Hector's life.
 ' But let us, on this memorable day,
 ' Exchange some gift ; that Greece and Troy may say,
 ' " Not hate, but glory, made these chiefs contend ;
 ' " And each brave foe was in his soul a friend." ' 365
 With that, a sword with stars of silver grac'd,
 The baldrick studded, and the sheath enchas'd;
 He gave the Greek. The generous Greek bestow'd
 A radiant belt that rich with purple glow'd.
 Then with majestic grace they quit the plain ; 370
 This seeks the Grecian, that the Phrygian train.
 The Trojan bands returning Hector wait,
 And hail with joy the champion of their state :
 Escap'd great Ajax, they survey'd him round,
 Alive, unharm'd, and vigorous from his wound. 375
 To Troy's high gates the godlike man they bear,
 Their present triumph, as their late despair.
 But Ajax, glorying in his hardy deed,
 The well-arm'd Greeks to Agamemnon lead.
 A steer for sacrifice the king design'd, 380
 Of full five years, and of the nobler kind.
 The victim falls ; they strip the smoking hide,
 The beast they quarter, and the joints divide ;
 Then spread the tables, the repast prepare,
 Each takes his seat, and each receives his share. 385
 The king himself (an honorary sign)
 Before great Ajax placed the mighty chine.

When now the rage of hunger was remov'd,
 Nestor, in each persuasive art approv'd,
 The sage whose counsels long had sway'd the rest, 390
 In words like these his prudent thought express'd :
 ' How dear, O king ! this fatal day has cost !
 ' What Greeks are perish'd ! what a people lost !
 ' What tides of blood have drench'd Scamander's shore !
 ' What crowds of heroes sunk, to rise no more ! 395
 ' Then hear me, chief ! nor let the morrow's light
 ' Awake thy squadrons to new toils of fight :
 ' Some space at least permit the war to breathe,
 ' While we to flames our slaughter'd friends bequeath, "
 ' From the red field their scatter'd bodies bear, 400
 ' And nigh the fleet a funeral structure rear :
 ' So decent urns their snowy bones may keep,
 ' And pious children o'er their ashes weep.
 ' Here, where on one promiscuous pile they blaz'd,
 ' High o'er them all a general tomb be rais'd ; 405
 ' Next, to secure our camp, and naval powers,
 ' Raise an embattled wall, with lofty towers ;
 ' From space to space be ample gates around,
 ' For passing chariots, and a trench profound.
 ' So Greece to combat shall in safety go, 410
 ' Nor fear the fierce incursions of the foe.'
 'Twas thus the sage his wholesome counsel mov'd ;
 The sceptred kings of Greece his words approv'd.
 Meanwhile, conven'd at Priam's palace gate,
 The Trojan peers in nightly council sat : 415
 A senate void of order, as of choice,
 Their hearts were fearful, and confus'd their voice.
 Antenor rising, thus demands their ear :
 ' Ye Trojans, Dardans, and auxiliars, hear !
 ' 'Tis heaven the counsel of my breast inspires, 420
 ' And I but move what every god requires :
 ' Let Sparta's treasures be this hour restor'd,
 ' And Argive Helen own her ancient lord.
 ' The ties of faith, the sworn alliance broke,
 ' Our impious battles the just gods provoke. 425
 ' As this advice ye practise, or reject,
 ' So hope success, or dread the dire effect.'
 The senior spoke, and sat. To whom replied
 The graceful husband of the Spartan bride :
 ' Cold counsels, Trojan, may become thy years, 430
 ' But sound ungrateful in a warrior's ears :
 ' Old man, if void of fallacy or art
 ' Thy words express the purpose of thy heart,

'Thou, in thy time, more sound advice hast given ;
 'But wisdom has its date, assign'd by heaven. 435
 'Then hear me, princes of the Trojan name !
 'Their treasures I'll restore, but not the dame ;
 'My treasures, too, for peace I will resign ;
 'But be this bright possession ever mine.'
 'Twas then, the growing discord to compose, 440
 Slow from his seat the reverend Priam rose :
 His godlike aspect deep attention drew :
 He paus'd, and these pacific words ensue :
 'Ye Trojans, Dardans, and auxiliar bands !
 'Now take refreshment as the hour demands ; 445
 'Guard well the walls, relieve the watch of night,
 'Till the new sun restores the cheerful light :
 'Then shall our herald, to th' Atrides sent,
 'Before their ships proclaim my son's intent.
 'Next let a truce be ask'd, that Troy may burn 450
 'Her slaughter'd heroes, and their bones inurn ;
 'That done, once more the fate of war be tried,
 'And whose the conquest, mighty Jove decide !'
 The monarch spoke : the warriors snatch'd with haste
 (Each at his post in arms) a short repast. 455
 Soon as the rosy morn had wak'd the day,
 To the black ships Idæus bent his way ;
 There, to the sons of Mars, in council found,
 He rais'd his voice : the hosts stood listening round :
 'Ye sons of Atreus, and ye Greeks, give ear ! 460
 'The words of Troy, and Troy's great monarch, hear.
 'Pleas'd may ye hear (so heav'n succeed my prayers !)
 'What Paris, author of the war, declares.
 'The spoils and treasures he to Ilion bore
 '(O had he perish'd ere they touch'd our shore !) 465
 'He proffers injur'd Greece ; with large increase
 'Of added Trojan wealth, to buy the peace.
 'But, to restore the beauteous bride again,
 'This Greece demands, and Troy requests in vain.
 'Next, O ye chiefs ! we ask a truce to burn 470
 'Our slaughter'd heroes, and their bones inurn.
 'That done, once more the fate of war be tried,
 'And whose the conquest, mighty Jove decide !'
 The Greeks give ear, but none the silence broke
 At length Tydides rose, and rising spoke : 475
 'O take not, friends ! defrauded of your fame,
 'Their proffer'd wealth, nor e'en the Spartan dame.
 Let conquest make them ours : fate shakes their wall,
 'And Troy already totters to her fall.'

Th' admiring chiefs, and all the Grecian name, 480
 With general shouts return'd him loud acclaim.
 Then thus the king of kings rejects the peace :
 ' Herald ! in him thou hear'st the voice of Greece.
 ' For what remains, let funeral flames be fed
 ' With heroes' corps : I war not with the dead : 485
 ' Go, search your slaughter'd chiefs on yonder plain,
 ' And gratify the manes of the slain.
 ' Be witness, Jove, whose thunder rolls on high !'
 He said, and rear'd his sceptre to the sky.
 To sacred Troy, where all her princes lay 490
 To wait th' event, the herald bent his way.
 He came, and, standing in the midst, explain'd
 The peace rejected, but the truce obtain'd.
 Straight to their several cares the Trojans move ;
 Some search the plain, some fell the sounding grove : 495
 Nor less the Greeks, descending on the shore,
 Hew'd the green forests, and the bodies bore.
 And now from forth the chambers of the main,
 To shed his sacred light on earth again,
 Arose the golden chariot of the day, 500
 And tipp'd the mountains with a purple ray.
 In mingled throngs the Greek and Trojan train
 Through heaps of carnage search'd the mournful plain.
 Scarce could the friend his slaughter'd friend explore,
 With dust dishonour'd, and deform'd with gore. 505
 The wounds they wash'd, their pious tears they shed,
 And, laid along their cars, deplor'd the dead.
 Sage Priam check'd their grief : with silent haste
 The bodies decent on the piles were placed :
 With melting hearts the cold remains they burn'd ; 510
 And sadly slow to sacred Troy return'd.
 Nor less the Greeks their pious sorrows shed,
 And decent on the pile dispose the dead ;
 The cold remains consume with equal care ;
 And slowly, sadly, to their fleet repair. 515
 Now, ere the morn had streak'd with redd'ning light
 The doubtful confines of the day and night ;
 About the dying flames the Greeks appear'd,
 And ro'nd the pile a general tomb they rear'd.
 Then, to secure the camp and naval powers, 520
 They rais'd embattl'd walls with lofty towers :
 From space to space were ample gates around,
 For passing chariots ; and a trench profound,
 Of large extent : and deep in earth below
 Strong piles infix'd stood adverse to the foe. 525

So toil'd the Greeks : meanwhile the gods above,
In shining circle round their father Jove.

Amaz'd beheld the wondrous works of man :

Then he whose trident shakes the earth began :

' What mortals henceforth shall our power adore, 530

' Our fanes frequent, our oracles implore,

' If the proud Grecians thus successful boast

' Their rising bulwarks on the sea-bent coast ?

' See the long walls extending to the main,

' No god consulted, and no victim slain ! 535

' Their fame shall fill the world's remotest ends ;

' Wide as the morn her golden beam extends.

' While old Laomedon's divine abodes,

' Those radiant structures rais'd by labouring gods,

' Shall, raz'd and lost, in long oblivion sleep.' 540

Thus spoke the hoary monarch of the deep.

Th' almighty Thunderer with a frown replies,

That clouds the world, and blackens half the skies :

' Strong god of ocean ! thou, whose rage can make

' The solid earth's eternal basis shake ! 545

' What cause of fear from mortal works could move

' The meanest subject of our realms above ?

' Where'er the sun's refulgent rays are cast,

' Thy power is honour'd, and thy fame shall last.

' But yon proud work no future age shall view, 550

' No trace remain where once the glory grew.

' The sapp'd foundations by thy force shall fall ;

' And, whelm'd beneath thy waves, drop the huge wall :

' Vast drifts of sand shall change the former shore ;'

' The ruin vanish'd, and the name no more.' 555

Thus they in heaven : while o'er the Grecian train

The rolling sun descending to the main

Beheld the finish'd work. Their bulls they slew ;

Black from the tents the savoury vapours flew.

And now the fleet, arriv'd from Lemnos' strands, 560

With Bacchus' blessings cheer'd the generous bands.

Of fragrant wines the rich Eunæus<sup>1</sup> sent

A thousand measures to the royal tent :

(Eunæus, whom Hypsipyle of yore

To Jason, shepherd of his people, bore). 565

The rest they purchas'd at their proper cost,

And well the plenteous freight supplied the host :

Each, in exchange, proportion'd treasures gave

Some brass, or iron, some an ox or slave.

All night they feast, the Greek and Trojan powers ; 570
 Those on the fields, and these within their towers.
 But Jove averse the signs of wrath display'd,
 And shot red lightnings through the gloomy shade :
 Humbled they stood ; pale horror seiz'd on all,
 While the deep thunder shook th' ærial hall. 575
 Each pour'd to Jove, before the bowl was crown'd,
 And large libations drench'd the thirsty ground ;
 Then late, refresh'd with sleep from toils of fight,
 Enjoy'd the balmy blessings of the night.

BOOK VIII.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE SECOND BATTLE, AND THE DISTRESS OF THE GREEKS.

Jupiter assembles a council of the deities, and threatens them with the pains of Tartarus, if they assist either side : Minerva only obtains of him that she may direct the Greeks by her counsels. The armies join battle ; Jupiter on mount Ida weighs in his balances the fates of both, and affrights the Greeks with his thunders and lightnings. Nestor alone continues in the field in great danger ; Diomed relieves him ; whose exploits, and those of Hector, are excellently described. Juno endeavours to animate Neptune to the assistance of the Greeks, but in vain. The acts of Teucer, who is at length wounded by Hector, and carried off. Juno and Minerva prepare to aid the Grecians, but are restrained by Iris, sent from Jupiter. The night puts an end to the battle. Hector continues in the field, (the Greeks being driven to their fortifications before the ships,) and gives orders to keep the watch all night in the camp, to prevent the enemy from reembarking and escaping by flight. They kindle fires through all the field, and pass the night under arms.

The time of seven-and-twenty days is employed from the opening of the poem to the end of this book. The scene here (except of the celestial machines) lies in the field toward the sea-shore.

AURORA now, fair daughter of the dawn,
 Sprinkled with rosy light the dewy lawn :
 When Jove conven'd the senate of the skies,
 Where h'gh Olympus' cloudy tops arise.
 The sire of gods his awful silence broke ;
 The heavens attentive trembled as he spoke :
 ' Celestial states, immortal gods ! give ear,
 Hear our decree, and reverence what ye hear ;

'The fix'd decree which not all heaven can move ;
 'Thou, Fate ! fulfil it ! and ye, powers ! approve ! 10
 'What god but enters yon forbidden field,
 'Who yields assistance, or but wills to yield ;
 'Back to the skies with shame he shall be driven,
 'Gash'd with dishonest wounds, the scorn of heaven :
 'Or far, oh far from steep Olympus thrown, 15
 'Low in the dark Tartarean gulf shall groan,
 'With burning chains fix'd to the brazen floors,
 'And lock'd by hell's inexorable doors ;
 'As deep beneath th' infernal centre hurl'd,
 'As from that centre to th' ethereal world. 20
 'Let him who tempts me, dread those dire abodes ;
 'And know, th' Almighty is the god of gods.
 'League all your forces then, ye powers above,
 'Join all, and try th' omnipotence of Jove :
 'Let down our golden everlasting chain, 25
 'Whose strong embrace holds heaven and earth and main :
 'Strive all, of mortal and immortal birth,
 'To drag, by this, the Thunderer down to earth,
 'Ye strive in vain ! if I but stretch this hand,
 'I heave the gods, the ocean, and the land ; 30
 'I fix the chain to great Olympus' height,
 'And the vast world hangs trembling in my sight !
 'For such I reign, unbounded and above ;
 'And such are men and gods, compar'd to Jove.'
 Th' Almighty spoke, nor durst the powers reply ; 35
 A reverent horror silenced all the sky ;
 Trembling they stood before their sovereign's look ;
 At length his best belov'd, the power of wisdom, spoke :
 'Oh first and greatest ! God, by gods ador'd !
 'We own thy might, our father and our lord ! 40
 'But ah ! permit to pity human state :
 'If not to help, at least lament their fate.
 'From fields forbidden we submit refrain,
 'With arms unaiding mourn our Argives slain ;
 'Yet grant my counsels still their breasts may move, 45
 'Or all must perish in the wrath of Jove.'
 The cloud-compelling god her suit approv'd,
 And smiled superior on his best-belov'd.
 Then call'd his coursers, and his chariot took ;
 The stedfast firmament beneath them shook : 50
 Rapt by th' ethereal steeds the chariot roll'd ;
 Brass were their hoofs, their curling manes of gold.
 Of heaven's undrossy gold the god's array,
 Relucent, flash'd intolerable day.

High on the throne he shines : his coursers fly 55
 Between th' extended earth and starry sky.
 But when to Ida's topmost height he came,
 (Fair nurse of fountains, and of savage game,)

Where, o'er her pointed summits proudly rais'd, 60
 His fane breath'd odours, and his altar blaz'd :
 There, from his radiant car, the sacred sire
 Of gods and men releas'd the steeds of fire :
 Blue ambient mists th' immortal steeds embrac'd ;
 High on the cloudy point his seat he plac'd ;
 Thence his broad eye the subject world surveys, 65
 The town, and tents, and navigable seas.

Now had the Grecians snatch'd a short repast,
 And buckled on their shining arms with haste.
 Troy rous'd as soon : for on this dreadful day
 The fate of fathers, wives, and infants lay. 70
 The gates unfolding pour forth all their train ;
 Squadrons on squadrons cloud the dusky plain :
 Men, steeds, and chariots, shake the trembling ground
 The tumult thickens, and the skies resound.

And now with shouts the shocking armies clos'd, 75
 To lances lances, shields to shields oppos'd ;
 Host against host with shadowy legions drew,
 The sounding darts in iron tempests flew ;
 Victors and vanquish'd join promiscuous cries,
 Triumphant shouts and dying groans arise ; 80
 With streaming blood the slippery fields are dyed,
 And slaughter'd heroes swell the dreadful tide.

Long as the morning beams, increasing bright,
 O'er heaven's clear azure spread the sacred light,
 Commutual death the fate of war confounds, 85
 Each adverse battle gored with equal wounds.

But when the sun the height of heaven ascends,
 The sire of gods his golden scales suspends,
 With equal hand ; in these explor'd the fate
 Of Greece and Troy, and pois'd the mighty weight. 90
 Press'd with its load, the Grecian balance lies
 Low sunk on earth, the Trojan strikes the skies.

Then Jove from Ida's top his horrors spreads ;
 The clouds burst dreadful o'er the Grecian heads ;
 Thick lightnings flash ; the muttering thunder rolls ; 95
 Their strength he withers, and unmans their souls.

Before his wrath the trembling hosts retire,
 The gods in terrors, and the skies on fire.
 Nor great Idomenus that sight could bear,
 Nor each stern Ajax, thunderbolts of war ; 100

Nor he, the king of men, th' alarm sustain'd ;
Nestor alone amidst the storm remain'd.

Unwilling he remain'd, for Paris' dart

Had pierc'd his courser in a mortal part ;

} Fix'd in the forehead where the springing mane
Curl'd o'er the brow, it stung him to the brain ; 105

Mad with his anguish, he begins to rear,

Paw with his hoofs aloft, and lash the air.

Scarce had his faulchion cut the reins, and freed

Th' incumbent chariot from the dying steed, 110

When dreadful Hector, thundering through the war,

Pour'd to the tumult on his whirling car.

That day had stretch'd beneath his matchless hand

, The hoary monarch of the Pylian band,

But Diomed behold ; from forth the crowd 115

He rush'd, and on Ulysses call'd aloud :

' Whither, oh whither does Ulysses run ?

' O flight unworthy great Laërtes' son !

' Mix'd with the vulgar shall thy fate be found,

' Pierc'd in the back, a vile, dishonest wound ? 120

' Oh turn and save from Hector's direful rage

' The glory of the Greeks, the Pylian sage.

His fruitless words are lost unheard in air ;

Ulysses seeks the ships, and shelters there.

But bold Tydides to the rescue goes, 125

A single warrior 'midst a host of foes ;

Before the coursers with a sudden spring

He leap'd, and anxious thus bespoke the king :

' Great perils, father ! wait th' unequal fight ;

' These younger champions will oppress thy might. 130

' Thy veins no more with ancient vigour glow,

' Weak is thy servant,<sup>1</sup> and thy coursers slow.

' Then haste, ascend my seat, and from the car

' Observe the steeds of Tros, renown'd in war,

' Practis'd alike to turn, to stop, to chase, 135

' To dare the fight, or urge the rapid race :

                  obey'd Æneas' guiding rein ;

' Leave thou thy chariot to our faithful train :

' With these against yon Trojans will we go,

' Nor shall great Hector want an equal foe ; 140

' Fierce as he is, e'en he may learn to fear

' The thirsty fury of my flying spear.'

Thus said the chief ; and Nestor, skill'd in war,

Approves his counsel, and ascends the car :

The steeds he left, their trusty servants hold ; 145
 Eurymedon, and Sthenelus the bold.
 The reverend charioteer directs the course,
 And strains his aged arm to lash the horse.
 Hector they face ; unknowing how to fear,
 Fierce he drove on : Tydides whirl'd his spear. 150
 The spear with erring haste mistook its way,
 But plung'd in Eniopeus' bosom lay.
 His opening hand in death forsakes the rein ;
 The steeds fly back : he falls, and spurns the plain.
 Great Hector sorrows for his servant kill'd, 155
 Yet unreveng'd permits to press the field ;
 Till to supply his place and rule the car,
 Rose Archeptolemus, the fierce in war.
 And now had death and horror cover'd all ;
 Like timorous flocks the Trojans in their wall 160
 Enclos'd had bled : but Jove with awful sound
 Roll'd the big thunder o'er the vast profound :
 Full in Tydides' face the lightning flew ;
 The ground before him flam'd with sulphur blue :
 The quivering steeds fell prostrate at the sight ; 165
 And Nestor's trembling hand confess'd his fright :
 He dropp'd the reins ; and, shook with sacred dread,
 Thus, turning, warn'd th' intrepid Diomed :
 ' O chief ! too daring in thy friend's defence,
 ' Retire advis'd, and urge the chariot hence. 170
 ' This day, averse, the sovereign of the skies
 ' Assists great Hector, and our palm denies.
 ' Some other sun may see the happier hour,
 ' When Greece shall conquer by his heavenly power.
 ' 'Tis not in man his fix'd decree to move : 175
 ' The great will glory to submit to Jove.'
 ' O reverend prince ! ' (Tydides thus replies)
 ' Thy years are awful, and thy words are wise.
 ' But, ah what grief ! should haughty Hector boast,
 ' I fled inglorious to the guarded coast. 180
 ' Before that dire disgrace shall blast my fame,
 ' O'erwhelm me, earth ! and hide a warrior's shame '
 To whom Gerenian<sup>2</sup> Nestor thus replied :
 ' G'ods ! can thy courage fear the Phrygian's pride ?
 ' Hector may vaunt, but who shall heed the boast ? 185
 ' Not those who felt thy arm, the Dardan host,
 ' Nor Troy, yet bleeding in her heroes lost ;

<sup>2</sup> So called from Gerēna, or Gerenon, a town of Messene, where he was concealed when Hercules took Pylos, his native place.

'Not e'en a Phrygian dame, who dreads the sword
'That laid in dust her lov'd, lamented lord.'

He said : and hasty o'er the gasping throng
Drives the swift steeds ; the chariot smokes along. 190

The shouts of Trojans thicken in the wind ;
The storm of hissing javelins pours behind.
Then with a voice that shakes the solid skies,
Pleas'd Hector braves the warrior as he flies : 195

'Go, mighty hero ! grac'd above the rest
'In seats of council and the sumptuous feast :
'Now hope no more those honours from thy train ;
'Go, less than woman, in the form of man !
'To scale our walls, to wrap our towers in flames, 200
'To lead in exile the fair Phrygian dames,
'Thy once proud hopes, presumptuous prince ! are fled ;
'This arm shall reach thy heart, and stretch thee dead.'

Now fears dissuade him, and now hopes invite,
To stop his coursers, and to stand the fight ; 205

Thrice turn'd the chief, and thrice imperial Jove
On Ida's summit thunder'd from above.

Great Hector heard ; he saw the flashing light,
(The sign of conquest,) and thus urg'd the fight :
'Hear every Trojan, Lycian, Dardan band, 210

'All fam'd in war, and dreadful hand to hand,
'Be mindful of the wreaths your arms have won,
'Your great forefathers' glories, and your own.
'Heard ye the voice of Jove ? Success and fame
'Await on Troy, on Greece eternal shame. 215

'In vain they skulk behind their boasted wall,
'Weak bulwarks ! destin'd by this arm to fall.
'High o'er their slighted trench our steeds shall bound,
'And pass victorious o'er the levell'd mound.
'Soon as before yon hollow ships we stand, 220

'Fight each with flames, and toss the blazing brand ;
'Till, their proud navy wrapt in smoke and fires,
'All Greece, encompass'd, in one blaze expires.'

Farious he said : then, bending o'er the yoke,
Encouraged his proud steeds, while thus he spoke : 225

'Now Xanthus, Æthon, Lampus ! urge the chase,
'And thou, Podargus ! prove thy generous race :
'Be fleet, be fearless, this important day,
'And all your master's well-spent care repay.
'For this, high fed in plenteous stalls ye stand, 230

'Serv'd with pure wheat, and by a princess' hand ;
'For this, my spouse, of great Ætion's line,
'So oft has steep'd the strengthening grain in wine.

' Now swift pursue, now thunder uncontroll'd ;
 ' Give me to seize rich Nestor's shield of gold ; 235
 ' From Tydeus' shoulders strip the costly load,
 ' Vulcanian arms, the labour of a god :
 ' These if we gain, then victory, ye powers !
 ' This night, this glorious night, the fleet is ours.'
 That heard, deep anguish stung Saturnia's soul ; 240
 She shook her throne that shook the starry pole :
 And thus to Neptune : ' Thou, whose force can make
 ' The steadfast earth from her foundations shake,
 ' Seest thou the Greeks by fates unjust oppress'd,
 ' Nor swells thy heart in that immortal breast ? 245
 ' Yet Ægæ, Helicé,<sup>3</sup> thy power obey,
 ' And gifts unceasing on thine altars lay.
 ' Would all the deities of Greece combine,
 ' In vain the gloomy Thunderer might repine :
 ' Sole should he sit, with scarce a god to friend, 250
 ' And see his Trojans to the shades descend :
 ' Such be the scene from his Idæan bower ;
 ' Ungrateful prospect to the sullen power !'
 Neptune with wrath rejects the rash design :
 What rage, what madness, furious queen ! is thine ? 255
 I war not with the highest. All above
 Submit and tremble at the hand of Jove.
 Now godlike Hector, to whose matchless might
 Jove gave the glory of the destin'd fight,
 Squadrons on squadrons drives, and fills the fields 260
 With close-ranged chariots, and with thicken'd shields.
 Where the deep trench in length extended lay,
 Compacted troops stand wedged in firm array,
 A dreadful front ! they shake the bands, and threat
 With long-destroying flames the hostile fleet. 265
 The king of men, by Juno's self inspir'd,
 Toil'd through the tents, and all his army fir'd.
 Swift as he mov'd, he lifted in his hand
 His purple robe,<sup>4</sup> bright ensign of command.
 High on the midmost bark the king appear'd ;
 There, from Ulysses' deck, his voice was heard :
 To Ajax and Achilles reach'd the sound,
 Whose distant ships the guarded navy bound.

<sup>3</sup> These were two towns of Greece in which Neptune was particularly honoured, and in each of which there was a temple and a statue of him. Helicæ sank and was lost in an earthquake. Ægæ was on an island near Eubœa.
<sup>4</sup> As a signal, which would be seen farther than his voice could have been heard

'Oh Argives! shame of human race!' he cried,
 (The hollow vessels to his voice replied,) 275
 'Where now are all your glorious boasts of yore,
 'Your hasty triumphs on the Lemnian shore?
 'Each fearless hero dares a hundred foes,
 'While the feast lasts, and while the goblet flows;
 'But who to meet one martial man is found, 280
 'When the fight rages, and the flames surround?
 'O mighty Jove! oh sire of the distress'd!
 'Was ever king like me, like me oppress'd?
 'With power immense, with justice arm'd in vain;
 'My glory ravish'd, and my people slain! 285
 'To thee my vows were breath'd from every shore;
 'What altar smok'd not with our victims' gore?
 'With fat of bulls I fed the constant flame,
 'And ask'd destruction to the Trojan name.
 'Now, gracious god! far humbler our demand;
 'Give these at least to 'scape from Hector's hand, 290
 'And save the relics of the Grecian land!'

Thus pray'd the king, and heaven's great father heard
 His vows, in bitterness of soul preferr'd;
 The wrath appeas'd by happy signs declares, 295
 And gives the people to their monarch's prayers.
 His eagle, sacred bird of heaven! he sent,
 A fawn his talons truss'd, (divine portent!)
 High o'er the wondering hosts he soar'd above,
 Who paid their vows to Panomphaean<sup>a</sup> Jove; • 300
 Then let the prey before his altar fall:
 The Greeks beheld, and transport seiz'd on all:
 Encouraged by the sign, the troops revive,
 And fierce on Troy with double fury drive.
 Tydides first, of all the Grecian force, 305
 O'er the broad ditch impell'd his foaming horse,
 Pierced the deep ranks, their strongest battle tore,
 And dyed his javelin red with Trojan gore.
 Young Agelaüs (Phradmon was his sire)
 With flying coursers shunn'd his dreadful ire: 310
 Struck through the back the Phrygian fell oppress'd;
 The dart drove on, and issued at his breast:
 Headlong he quits the car; his arms resound;
 His ponderous buckler thunders on the ground.

<sup>a</sup> Jove, the source of all oracular information. Couper. The fawn denoted the fear and flight of the Greeks, and, being dropped at the altar of Jupiter, showed that they would be saved by the protection of that god. Pope.

Forth rush a tide of Greeks, the passage freed ; 315
 Th' Atridæ first, th' Ajaces next succeed :
 Meriones, like Mars in arms renown'd,
 And godlike Idomen, now pass'd the mound ;
 Evæmon's son<sup>6</sup> next issues to the foe,
 And last, young Teucer<sup>7</sup> with his bended bow. 320
 Secure behind the Telamonian shield
 The skilful archer wide survey'd the field,
 With every shaft some hostile victim slew,
 Then close beneath the seven-fold orb withdrew :
 The conscious infant so, when fear alarms, 325
 Retires for safety to the mother's arms.
 Thus Ajax guards his brother in the field,
 Moves as he moves, and turns the shining shield.
 Who first by Teucer's mortal arrows bled ?
 Orsiloehus ; then fell Ormenus dead : 330
 The godlike Lycophon next press'd the plain,
 With Chromius, Dætor, Ophelestes slain :
 Bold Hamopaön breathless sunk to ground ;
 The bloody pile great Melanippus crown'd.
 Heaps fell on heaps, sad trophies of his art, 335
 A Trojan ghost attending every dart.
 Great Agamemnon views with joyful eye
 The ranks grow thinner as his arrows fly :
 ' Oh youth for ever dear ! ' (the monarch cried)
 ' Thus, always thus, thy early worth be tried ; 340
 ' Thy brave example shall retrieve our host,
 ' Thy country's saviour, and thy father's boast !
 ' Sprung from an alien's bed thy sire<sup>7</sup> to grace,
 ' The vigorous offspring of a stol'n embrace.
 ' Proud of his boy, he own'd the generous flame, 345
 ' And the brave son repays his cares with fame.
 ' Now hear a monarch's vow : If heaven's high powers
 ' Give me to raze Troy's long-defended towers ;
 ' Whatever treasures Greece for me design,
 ' The next rich honorary gift be thine : 350
 ' Some golden tripod, or distinguish'd car,
 ' With coursers dreadful in the ranks of war ;
 ' Or some fair captive whom thy eyes approve,
 ' Shall recompense the warrior's toils with love.
 To this the chief : ' With praise the rest inquire, 355
 ' Nor urge a soul already fill'd with fire.
 ' What strength I have, be now in battle tried,
 ' Till every shaft in Phrygian blood be dyed.

<sup>6</sup> Eurypylus.      <sup>7</sup> Telamon. His mother was Hesione, a Trojan princess, who was made captive when Hercules and Telamon took Troy.

' Since, rallying, from our wall we forced the foe,
 ' Still aim'd at Hector have I bent my bow ; 360
 ' Eight forky arrows from this hand have fled,
 ' And eight bold heroes by their points lie dead :
 ' But sure some god denies me to destroy
 ' This fury of the field, this dog of Troy.'

He said, and twang'd the string. The weapon flies 365
 At Hector's breast, and sings along the skies :
 He miss'd the mark ; but pierced Gorgythio's heart
 And drench'd in royal blood the thirsty dart.

(Fair Castianira, nymph of form divine,
 This offspring added to king Priam's line.) 370

As full-blown poppies overcharged with rain
 Decline the head, and drooping kiss the plain ;
 So sinks the youth : his beauteous head, depress'd
 Beneath his helmet, drops upon his breast.
 Another shaft the raging archer drew : 375

That other shaft with erring fury flew,
 (From Hector Phœbus turn'd the flying wound,)

Yet fell not dry or guiltless to the ground :
 Thy breast, brave Archeptolemus ! it tore, 380
 And dipp'd its feathers in no vulgar gore.

Headlong he falls : his sudden fall alarms
 The steeds, that startle at his sounding arms.
 Hector with grief his charioteer behold
 All pale and breathless on the sanguine field. .
 Then bids Cebriones direct the rein, 385

Quits his bright car, and issues on the plain.
 Dreadful he shouts : from earth a stone he took,
 And rush'd on Teucer with the lifted rock.

The youth already strain'd the forceful yew ;
 The shaft already to his shoulder drew ; 390

The feather in his hand, just wing'd for flight,
 Touch'd where the neck and hollow chest unite ;
 There, where the juncture knits the channel bone,
 The furious chief discharg'd the craggy stone ;
 The bow-string burst beneath the ponderous blow, 395

And his numb'd hand dismiss'd his useless bow.
 He fell ; but Ajax his broad shield display'd,
 And screen'd his brother with a mighty shade ;
 Till great Alastor and Mecistheus bore
 The batter'd archer groaning to the shore. 400

Troy yet found grace before th' Olympian sire ;
 He arm'd their hands, and fill'd their breasts with fire.
 The Greeks, repuls'd, retreat behind their wall,
 Or in the trench on heaps confus'dly fall.

First of the foe, great Hector march'd along, 405
 With terror cloth'd, and more than mortal strong.
 As the bold hound that gives the lion chase,
 With beating bosom, and with eager pace,
 Hangs on his haunch, or fastens on his heels,
 Guards as he turns, and circles as he wheels ; 410
 Thus oft the Grecians turn'd, but still they flow ;
 Thus following, Hector still the hindmost slow.
 When, flying, they had pass'd the trench profound,
 And many a chief lay gasping on the ground ;
 Before the ships a desperate stand they made, 415
 And fir'd the troops, and call'd the gods to aid.
 Fierce on his rattling chariot Hector came ;
 His eyes like Gorgon shot a sanguine flame
 That wither'd all their host : like Mars he stood,
 Dire as the monster, dreadful as the god ! 420
 Their strong distress the wife of Jove survey'd ;
 Then pensive thus to war's triumphant maid :
 ' Oh daughter of that god, whose arm can wield
 ' Th' avenging bolt, and shake the sable shield !
 ' Now, in this moment of her last despair, 425
 ' Shall wretched Greece no more confess our care,
 ' Condemn'd to suffer the full force of fate,
 ' And drain the dregs of heaven's relentless hate ?
 ' Gods ! shall one raging hand thus level all ?
 ' What numbers fell ! what numbers yet shall fall ! 430
 ' What power divine shall Hector's wrath assuage ?
 ' Still swells the slaughter, and still grows the rage !'
 So spoke th' imperial regent of the skies ;
 To whom the goddess with the azure eyes :
 ' Long since had Hector stain'd these fields with gore, 435
 ' Stretch'd by some Argive on his native shore :
 ' But he above, the sire of heaven, withstands,
 ' Mocks our attempts, and slights our just demands.
 ' The stubborn god, inflexible and hard,
 ' Forgets my service and deserv'd reward ; 440
 ' Saved I, for this, his favourite son<sup>a</sup> distress'd.
 ' By stern Eurystheus with long labours press'd ?
 ' He begg'd, with tears he begg'd, in deep dismay ;
 ' I shot from heaven, and gave his arm the day.
 ' Oh had my wisdom known this dire event. 445
 ' When to grim Pluto's gloomy gates he went ;
 ' The triple dog had never felt his chain,
 ' Nor Styx been cross'd, nor hell explor'd in vain.

<sup>a</sup> Hercules.

' Averse to me of all his heaven of gods,
 ' At Thetis' suit the partial Thunderer nods. 450
 ' To grace her gloomy, fierce, resenting son,
 ' My hopes are frustrate, and my Greeks undone.
 ' Some future day, perhaps, he may be mov'd
 ' To call his blue-ey'd maid his best-belov'd.
 ' Haste, launch thy chariot, through yon ranks to ride ; 455
 ' Myself will arm, and thunder at thy side.
 ' Then, goddess ! say, shall Hector glory then,
 ' (That terror of the Greeks, that Man of men,)
 ' When Juno's self, and Pallas shall appear,
 ' All dreadful in the crimson walks of war ? 460
 ' What mighty Trojan<sup>9</sup> then, on yonder shore,
 ' Expiring, pale, and terrible no more, .
 ' Shall feast the fowls, and glut the dogs with gore ? '
 She ceas'd, and Juno rein'd the steeds with care,
 (Heaven's awful empress, Saturn's other heir :) 465
 Pallas, meanwhile, her various veil unbound,
 With flowers adorn'd, with art immortal crown'd ;
 The radiant robe her sacred fingers wove
 Floats in rich waves, and spreads the court of Jove.
 Her father's arms her mighty limbs invest, 470
 His cuirass blazes on her ample breast.
 The vigorous power the trembling car ascends ;
 Shook by her arm, the massy javelin bends ;
 Huge, ponderous, strong ! that, when her fury burns,
 Proud tyrants humbles, and whole hosts o'erturns. 475
 Saturnia lends the lash ; the coursers fly ;
 Smooth glides the chariot through the liquid sky. '
 Heaven's gates spontaneous open to the powers,
 Heaven's golden gates, kept by the winged Hours :
 Commission'd in alternate watch they stand, 480
 The sun's bright portals and the skies command ;
 Close or unfold th' eternal gates of day,
 Bar heaven with clouds, or roll those clouds away :
 The sounding hinges ring, the clouds divide ;
 Prone down the steep of heaven their course they guide. 485
 But Jove, incens'd, from Ida's top survey'd,
 And thus enjoin'd the many-colour'd maid :
 ' Thaumantia ! mount the winds, and stop their car ;
 ' Against the highest who shall wage the war ?
 ' If furious yet they dare the vain debate, 490
 ' Thus have I spoke, and what I speak is fate.

. <sup>9</sup> She means Hector, whose death the Poet makes her foresee in such a lively manner, as if the image of the hero lay bleeding before her. Pope.

' Their coursers crush'd beneath the wheels shall lie,
 ' Their car in fragments scatter'd o'er the sky ;
 ' My lightning these rebellious shall confound,
 ' And hurl them flaming, headlong to the ground, ' 405
 ' Condemn'd for ten revolving years to weep
 ' The wounds impress'd by burning thunder deep
 ' So shall Minerva learn to fear our ire,
 ' Nor dare to combat her's and nature's sire.
 ' For Juno, headstrong and imperious still, 500
 ' She claims some title to transgress our will.'
 Swift as the wind, the various-colour'd maid
 From Ida's top her golden wings display'd ;
 To great Olympus' shining gates she flies,
 There meets the chariot rushing down the skies, 505
 Restrains their progress from the bright abodes,
 And speaks the mandate of the sire of gods :
 ' What frenzy, goddesses ! what rage can move
 ' Celestial minds to tempt the wrath of Jove ?
 ' Desist, obedient to his high command ; 510
 ' This is his word : and know his word shall stand.
 ' His lightning your rebellion shall confound,
 ' And hurl ye headlong, flaming to the ground :
 ' Your horses crush'd beneath the wheels shall lie,
 ' Your car in fragments scatter'd o'er the sky ; 515
 ' Yourselves condemn'd ten rolling years to weep
 ' The wounds impress'd by burning thunder deep.
 ' So shall Minerva learn to fear his ire,
 ' Nor dare to combat her's and nature's sire.
 ' For Juno, headstrong and imperious still, 520
 ' She claims some title to transgress his will :
 ' But thee what desperate insolence has driven,
 ' To lift thy lance against the king of heaven ?'
 Then, mounting on the pinions of the wind,
 She flew ; and Juno thus her rage resign'd : 525
 ' O daughter of that god, whose arm can wield
 ' Th' avenging bolt, and shake the dreadful shield !
 ' No more let beings of superior birth
 ' Contend with Jove for this low race of earth :
 ' Triumphant now, now miserably slain, 530
 ' They breathe or perish as the fates ordain.
 ' But Jove's high counsels full effect shall find,
 ' And, ever constant, ever rule mankind.'
 She spoke, and backward turn'd her steeds of light,
 Adorn'd with manes of gold, and heavenly bright. 535
 The Hours unloos'd them, panting as they stood,
 And heap'd their mangers with ambrosial food.

There tied, they rest in high celestial stalls ;
 The chariot propp'd against the crystal walls.
 The pensive goddesses, abash'd, controll'd, 540
 Mix with the gods, and fill their seats of gold.
 And now the Thunderer meditates his flight
 From Ida's summits to th' Olympian height.
~~Swifter~~ than thought the wheels instinctive fly,
 Flame through the vast of air, and reach the sky. 545
 'Twas Neptune's charge his coursers to unbrace,
 And fix the car on its immortal base ;
 There stood the chariot, beaming forth its rays,
 Till with a snowy veil he screen'd the blaze.
 He, whose all-conscious eyes the world behold, 550
 Th' eternal Thunderer, sat thron'd in gold.
 High heaven the footstool of his feet he makes,
 And wide beneath him all Olympus shakes.
 Trembling afar th' offending powers appear'd,
 Confus'd and silent, for his frown they fear'd. 555
 He saw their soul, and thus his word imparts :
 ' Pallas and Juno ! say, why heave your hearts ?
 ' Soon was your battle o'er : proud Troy retir'd
 ' Before your face, and in your wrath expir'd.
 ' But know, whoe'er almighty power withstand ! 560
 ' Unmatch'd our force, unconquer'd is our hand :
 ' Who shall the sovereign of the skies control ?
 ' Not all the gods that crown the starry pole.
 ' Your hearts shall tremble, if our arms we take,
 ' And each immortal nerve with horror shake. 565
 ' For thus I speak, and what I speak shall stand ,
 ' What power soe'er provokes our lifted hand,
 ' On this our hill no more shall hold his place,
 ' Cut off, and exil'd from th' ethereal race.'
 Juno and Pallas grieving hear the doom, 570
 But feast their souls on Ilion's woes to come.
 Though secret anger swell'd Minerva's breast,
 The prudent goddess yet her wrath repress'd :
 But Juno, impotent of rage, replies :
 ' What hast thou said, oh tyrant of the skies !
 ' Strength and omnipotence invest thy throne ;
 ' 'Tis thine to punish ; ours to grieve alone.
 ' For Greece we grieve, abandon'd by her fate
 ' To drink the dregs of thy unmeasur'd hate :
 ' From fields forbidden we submit refrain, 580
 ' With arms unaiding see our Argives slain ;
 ' Yet grant our counsels still their breasts may move,
 ' Lest all should perish in the rage of Jove.'

- The goddess thus : and thus the god replies,
 Who swells the clouds, and blackens all the skies : 585
 ' The morning sun, awak'd by loud alarms,
 ' Shall see th' almighty Thunderer in arms.
 ' What heaps of Argives then shall load the plain,
 ' Those radiant eyes shall view, and view in vain.
 ' Nor shall great Hector cease the rage of fight, 590
 ' The navy flaming, and thy Greeks in flight,
 ' E'en till the day, when certain fates ordain
 ' That stern Achilles (his Patroclus slain)
 ' Shall rise in vengeance, and lay waste the plain.
 ' For such is fate, nor canst thou turn its course 595
 ' With all thy rage, with all thy rebel force.
 ' Fly, if thou wilt, to earth's remotest bound,
 ' Where on her utmost verge the seas resound ;
 ' Where curs'd Iäpetus and Saturn dwell,
 ' Fast by the brink, within the steams of hell ; 600
 ' No sun e'er gilds the gloomy horrors there,
 ' No cheerful gales refresh the lazy air :
 ' There arm once more the bold Titanian band,
 ' And arm in vain : for what I will shall stand.'
 Now deep in ocean sunk the lamp of light, 605
 And drew behind the cloudy veil of night :
 The conquering Trojans mourn his beams decay'd ;
 The Greeks rejoicing bless the friendly shade.
 The victors keep the field ; and Hector calls
 A martial council near the navy walls : 610
 These to Scamander's bank apart he led,
 Where thinly scatter'd lay the heaps of dead.
 Th' assembled chiefs, descending on the ground,
 Attend his order, and their prince surround.
 A massy spear he bore of mighty strength, 615
 Of full ten cubits was the lance's length ;
 The point was brass, refulgent to behold,
 Fix'd to the wood with circling rings of gold :
 The noble Hector on this lance reclin'd,
 And, bending forward, thus reveal'd his mind 620
 ' Ye valiant Trojans, with attention hear !
 ' Ye Dardan bands, and generous aids, give ear !
 ' This day, we hoped, would wrap in conquering flame
 ' Greece with her ships, and crown our toils with fame :
 ' But darkness now, to save the cowards, falls, 625
 ' And guards them trembling in their wooden walls.
 ' Obey the night, and use her peaceful hours
 ' Our steeds to forage, and refresh our powers.
 ' Straight from the town be sheep and oxen sought,
 ' And strengthening bread and generous wine be brought. 630

Wide o'er the field, high blazing to the sky,
 Let numerous fires the absent sun supply,
 ' The flaming piles with plenteous fuel raise,
 ' Till the bright morn her purple beam displays :
 ' Lest in the silence and the shades of night, 635
 ' Greece on her sable ships attempt her flight.
 ' Not unmolested let the wretches gain
 ' Their lofty decks, or safely cleave the main :
 ' Some hostile wound let every dart bestow,
 ' Some lasting token of the Phrygian foe, 640
 Wounds, that long hence may ask their spouses' care,
 ' And warn their children from a Trojan war.
 ' Now through the circuit of our Ilion wall,
 ' Let sacred heralds sound the solemn call ;
 ' To bid the sires with hoary honours crown'd, 645
 And beardless youths, our battlements surround.
 Firm be the guard, while distant lie our powers,
 And let the matrons hang with lights the towers :
 Lest, under covert of the midnight shade,
 Th' insidious foe the naked town invade. 650
 Suffice, to-night, these orders to obey ;
 A nobler charge shall rouse the dawning day.
 The gods, I trust, shall give to Hector's hand,
 From these detested foes to free the land,
 Who plough'd, with fates averse, the watery way ; 655
 For Trojan vultures a predestin'd prey.
 Our common safety must be now the care ;
 But soon as morning paints the fields of air
 Sheath'd in bright arms let every troop engage,
 And the fir'd fleet behold the battle rage. 660
 Then, then shall Hector and Tydides prove,
 Whose fates are heaviest in the scale of Jove.
 To-morrow's light (oh haste the glorious morn !)
 Shall see his bloody spoils in triumph borne ;
 With this keen javelin shall his breast be gor'd, 665
 And prostrate heroes bleed around their lord.
 Certain as this, oh ! might my days endure,
 From age inglorious, and black death, secure ;
 So might my life and glory know no bound,
 Like Pallas worshipp'd, like the sun renown'd, 670
 As the next dawn, the last they shall enjoy,
 Shall crush the Greeks, and end the woes of Troy.
 The leader spoke. From all his hosts around
 Shouts of applause along the shores resound.
 Each from the yoke the smoking steeds untied, 675
 And fix'd their headstalls to his chariot-side.

Fat sheep and oxen from the town are led,
 With generous wine, and all-sustaining bread.
 Full hecatombs lay burning on the shore ;
 The winds to heaven the curling vapours bore. 680
 Ungrateful offering to th' immortal powers !
 Whose wrath hung heavy o'er the Trojan towers ;
 Nor Priam nor his sons obtain'd their grace ;
 Proud Troy they hated, and her guilty race.
 The troops exulting sat in order round, 685
 And beaming fires illumin'd all the ground.
 As when the moon, refulgent lamp of night,
 O'er heaven's clear azure spreads her sacred light,
 When not a breath disturbs the deep serene,
 And not a cloud o'ercasts the solemn scene ; 690
 Around her throne the vivid planets roll,
 And stars unnumber'd gild the glowing pole,
 O'er the dark trees a yellower verdure shed,
 And tip with silver every mountain's head ;
 Then shine the vales, the rocks in prospect rise, 695
 A flood of glory bursts from all the skies :
 The conscious swains, rejoicing in the sight,
 Eye the blue vault, and bless the useful light.
 So many flames before proud Ilion blaze,
 And lighten glimmering Xanthus with their rays : 700
 The long reflections of the distant fires
 Gleam on the walls, and tremble on the spires.
 A thousand piles the dusky horrors gild,
 And shoot a shady lustre o'er the field.
 Full fifty guards each flaming pile attend, 705
 Whose umber'd arms, by fits, thick flashes send.
 Loud neigh the coursers o'er their heaps of corn,
 And ardent warriors wait the rising morn.

BOOK IX.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE EMBASSY TO ACHILLES.

Agamemnon, after the last day's defeat, proposes to the Greeks to quit the siege, and return to their country. Diomedes opposes this, and Nestor seconds him, praising his wisdom and resolution. He orders the guard to be strengthened, and a council summoned to deliberate what measures ere to be followed in this emergency. Agamemnon pursues this advice, and Nestor farther prevails upon him to send ambassadors to Achilles, in order to move him to a reconciliation. Ulysses and Ajax are made choice of, who are accompanied by old Phoenix. They make, each of them, very moving and pressing speeches, but are rejected with roughness by Achilles, who notwithstanding retains Phoenix in his tent. The ambassadors return unsuccessfully to the camp, and the troops betake themselves to sleep.

This book, and the next following, take up the space of one night, which is the twenty-seventh from the beginning of the poem. The scene lies on the sea-shore, the station of the Grecian ships.

Thus joyful Troy maintain'd the watch of night ;
 While Fear, pale comrade of inglorious flight,
 And heaven-bred horror, on the Grecian part,
 Sat on each face, and sadden'd every heart.
 As from its cloudy dungeon issuing forth, 5
 A double tempest of the west and north
 Swells o'er the sea, from Thracia's frozen shore,
 Heaps waves on waves, and bids th' Ægean roar ;
 This way and that the boiling deeps are toss'd ;
 Such various passions urged the troubled host. 10
 Great Agamemnon griev'd above the rest ;
 Superior sorrows swell'd his royal breast ;
 Himself his orders to the heralds bears,
 To bid to council all the Grecian peers,
 But bid in whispers :<sup>1</sup> these surround their chief, 15
 In solemn sadness and majestic grief.
 The king amidst the mournful circle rose ;
 Down his wan cheek a briny torrent flows :
 So silent fountains, from a rock's tall head,
 In sable streams soft-trickling waters shed. 20
 With more than vulgar grief he stood oppress'd ;
 Words, mix'd with sighs, thus bursting from his breast :
 ' Ye sons of Greece ! partake your leader's care,<sup>2</sup>
 ' Fellows in arms, and princes of the war !
 ' Of partial Jove too justly we complain, 25
 ' And heavenly oracles believed in vain.
 ' A safe return was promised to our toils,<sup>3</sup>
 ' With conquest honour'd, and enrich'd with spoils :
 ' Now shameful flight alone can save the host,
 ' Our wealth, our people, and our glory, lost. 30

<sup>1</sup> Either that the enemy might not hear the summons, or lest his own people hearing it, and being already in a state of consternation, should be alarmed still more. Cowper. <sup>2</sup> See Book ii. ver. 139. <sup>3</sup> Agamemnon alludes to the extraordinary sign exhibited to them by Jupiter, while they sacrificed to him at Aulis, and which Calchas interpreted as a divine assurance of success in the tenth year. Cowper. See B. ii. ver. 394.

So Jove decrees, almighty lord of all !
 ' Jove, at whose nod whole empires rise or fall,
 ' Who shakes the feeble props of human trust,
 ' And towers and armies humbles to the dust.
 ' Haste then, for ever quit these fatal fields, 35
 ' Haste to the joys our native country yields ;
 ' Spread all your canvas, all your oars employ,
 ' Nor hope the fall of heaven-defended Troy.
 He said ; deep silence held the Grecian band ;
 Silent, unmov'd, in dire dismay they stand, 40
 A pensive scene ! till Tydeus' warlike son
 Roll'd on the king his eyes, and thus begun :
 ' When kings advise us to renounce our fame,
 ' First let him speak, who first has suffer'd shame.
 ' If I oppose thee, prince ! thy wrath withhold ; 45
 ' The laws of council bid my tongue be bold.
 ' Thou first, and thou alone, in fields of fight,
 ' Durst brand my courage, and defame my might ;
 ' Nor from a friend th' unkind reproach appear'd,
 ' The Greeks stood witness, all our army heard. 50
 ' The gods, O chief ! from whom our honours spring,
 ' The gods have made thee but by halves a king :
 ' They gave thee sceptres and a wide command,
 ' They gave dominion o'er the seas and land ;
 ' The noblest power that might the world control 55
 ' They gave thee not—a brave and virtuous soul.
 ' Is this a general's voice, that would suggest
 ' Fears like his own in every Grecian breast ?
 ' Confiding in our want of worth he stands,
 ' And if we fly, 'tis what our king commands. 60
 ' Go thou, inglorious ! from th' embattled plain,
 ' Ships thou hast store, and nearest to the main ;
 ' A nobler care the Grecians shall employ,
 ' To combat, conquer, and extirpate Troy.
 ' Here Greece shall stay ; or, if all Greece retire 65
 ' Myself will stay, till Troy or I expire ;
 ' Myself, and Sthenelus, will fight for fame ;
 ' God bade us fight, and 'twas with God we came.'

What can be the drift of Diomede, when he insults Agamemnon in his griefs and distresses ? The truth is, this whole accusation of Diomede is only a feint to serve the designs of Agamemnon ; for being desirous to persuade the Greeks against their departure, he effects that design by this counterfeited anger and licence of speech ; and seeming to resent that Agamemnon should be capable of imagining that the army would return to Greece, he artfully makes use of these reproaches to cover his argument. Dionysius of Halicarnassus, Tech. sect. 8. Pope.

- He ceas'd; the Greeks loud acclamations raise,
 And voice to voice resounds Tydides' praise. 70
 Wise Nestor then his reverend figure rear'd;
 He spoke: the host in still attention heard:
 'O truly great! in whom the gods have join'd
 'Such strength of body with such force of mind;
 'In conduct, as in courage, you excel, 75
 'Still first to act what you advise so well.
 'Those wholesome counsels which thy wisdom moves,
 'Applauding Greece, with common voice, approves.
 'Kings thou canst blame; a bold, but prudent youth;
 'And blame e'en kings with praise, because with truth. 80
 'And yet those fears that since thy birth have run,
 'Would hardly style thee Nestor's youngest son.
 'Then let me add what yet remains behind,
 'A thought unfinish'd in that generous mind;
 'Age bids me speak; nor shall th' advice I bring 85
 'Distaste the people, or offend the king:
 'Curs'd is the man, and void of law and right,
 'Unworthy property, unworthy light,
 'Unfit for public rule, or private care,
 'That wretch, that monster, that delights in war: 90
 'Whose lust is murder, and whose horrid joy
 'To tear his country, and his kind destroy!
 'This night refresh and fortify thy train;
 'Between the trench and wall<sup>a</sup> let guards remain:
 'Be that the duty of the young and bold; 95
 'But thou, O king, to council call the old:
 'Great is thy sway, and weighty are thy cares:
 'Thy high commands must spirit all our wars:
 'With Thracian wines recruit thy honour'd guests,
 'For happy counsels flow from sober feasts. 100
 'Wise, weighty counsels aid a state distress'd
 'And such a monarch as can choose the best.
 'See! what a blaze from hostile tents aspires,
 'How near our fleet approach the Trojan fires!
 'Who can, unmov'd, behold the dreadful light? 105
 'What eye beholds them, and can close to-night?
 'This dreadful interval determines all;
 'To-morrow, Troy must flame, or Greece must fall.
 Thus spoke the hoary sage: the rest obey;
 Swift through the gates the guards direct their way. 110

<sup>a</sup> The space here mentioned between the trench and the wall, observes Pope, must be kept in mind through this and the following book, as frequent allusion is made to it.

His son was first to pass the lofty mound,
 The generous Thrasydes, in arms renown'd :
 Next him Ascalaphus, Ialmen, stood,
 The double offspring of the warrior-god.
 Deïpyrus, Aphareus, Merion join, 115
 And Lycomed, of Creon's noble line.

Seven were the leaders of the nightly bands,
 And each bold chief a hundred spears commands.
 The fires they light, to short repasts they fall,
 Some line the trench, and others man the wall. 120

The king of men, on public counsels bent,
 Conven'd the princes in his ample tent ;
 Each seiz'd a portion of the kingly feast,
 But stay'd his hand when thirst and hunger ceas'd.
 Then Nestor spoke, for wisdom long approv'd, 125
 And, slowly rising, thus the council mov'd :

' Monarch of nations ! whose superior sway
 ' Assembled states and lords of earth obey,
 ' The laws and sceptres to thy hand are given,
 ' And millions own the care of thee and heav'n. 130

' O king ! the counsels of my age attend ;
 ' With thee my cares begin, with thee must end ;
 ' Thee, prince ! it fits alike to speak and hear,
 ' Pronounce with judgment, with regard give ear,
 ' To see no wholesome motion be withstood, 135
 ' And ratify the best for public good.

' Nor, though a meaner give advice, repine,
 ' But follow it, and make the wisdom thine.
 ' Hear then a thought, not now conceiv'd in haste,
 ' At once my present judgment, and my past :<sup>6</sup> 140

' When from Pelides' tent you forc'd the maid,
 ' I first oppos'd, and, faithful, durst dissuade ;
 ' But, bold of soul, when headlong fury fir'd,
 ' You wrong'd the man, by men and gods admir'd :
 ' Now seek some means his fatal wrath to end, 145
 ' With prayers to move him, or with gifts to bend.'

To whom the king : ' With justice hast thou shewn
 ' A prince's faults, and I with reason own.
 ' That happy man whom Jove still honours most,
 ' Is more than armies, and himself a host. 150
 ' Bless'd in his love, this wondrous hero stands ;
 ' Heaven fights his war, and humbles all our bands.

'Wain would my heart, which err'd through frantic rage,
 'The wrathful chief and angry gods assuage.
 'If gifts immense his mighty soul can bow, 155
 'Hear, all ye Greeks, and witness what I vow :
 'Ten weighty talents of the purest gold,
 'And twice ten vases of refulgent mould ;
 'Seven sacred tripods, whose unsullied frame<sup>a</sup>
 'Yet knows no office, nor has felt the flame : 160
 'Twelve steeds unmatched in fleetness and in force,
 'And still victorious in the dusty course :
 ' (Rich were the man whose ample stores exceed
 'The prizes purchas'd by their winged speed :)
 'Seven lovely captives of the Lesbian line, 165
 'Skill'd in each art, unmatched in form divine,
 'The same I chose for more than vulgar charms,
 'When Lesbos sunk beneath the hero's arms :
 'All these, to buy his friendship, shall be paid,
 'And join'd with these the long-contested maid ; 170
 'With all her charms, Briseïs I resign,
 'And solemn swear those charms were never mine ;
 'Untouch'd she staid, uninjur'd she removes,
 'Pure from my arms, and guiltless of my loves.
 'These instant shall be his ; and if the powers 175
 'Give to our arms proud Ilion's hostile towers,
 'Then shall he store (when Greece the spoil divides)
 'With gold and brass his loaded navy's sides.
 'Besides, full twenty nymphs of Trojan race
 'With copious love shall crown his warm embrace ; 180
 'Such as himself will choose ; who yield to none,
 'Or yield to Helen's heavenly charms alone.
 'Yet hear me farther : when our wars are o'er,
 'If safe we land on Argos' fruitful shore,
 'There shall he live my son, our honours share, 185
 'And with Orestes' self divide my care.
 'Yet more—three daughters in my court are bred,
 'And each well worthy of a royal bed,
 'Laodicé and Iphigenia fair,
 'And bright Chrysothemis with golden hair ; 190
 'After let him choose whom most his eyes approve,
 'I ask no presents, no reward for love ;"

<sup>a</sup> There were two kinds of tripods : in the one they used to boil water, the other was used as goblets, in which they mixed wine and water.

<sup>b</sup> In Greece, the bridegroom, before he married, was obliged to make two presents ; one to his betrothed wife, and the other to his father-in-law. This custom is very ancient ; it was practised by the Hebrews in the time of the patriarchs. Pope.

' Myself will give the dower ; so vast a store,
 ' As never father gave a child before.
 ' Seven ample cities shall confess his sway, 195
 ' Him Enopé, and Pheræ him obey,
 ' Cardamylé with ample turrets crown'd,
 ' And sacred Pedasus for vines renown'd ;
 ' Æpea fair, the pastures Hira yields,
 ' And rich Antheia with her flowery fields : 200
 ' The whole extent to Pylos' sandy plain,
 ' Along the verdant margin of the main.
 ' There heifers graze, and labouring oxen toil ;
 ' Bold are the men, and generous is the soil ;
 ' There shall he reign with power and justice crown'd, 205
 ' And rule the tributary realms around.
 ' All this I give, his v'engeance to control,
 ' And sure all this may move his mighty soul.
 ' Pluto, the grizly god, who never spares,
 ' Who feels no mercy, and who hears no prayers, 210
 ' Lives dark and dreadful in deep hell's abodes,
 ' And mortals hate him as the worst of gods.
 ' Great though he be, it fits him to obey :
 ' Since more than his my years, and more my sway.'
 The monarch thus : the reverend Nestor then : 215
 ' Great Agamemnon ! glorious king of men !
 ' Such are thy offers as a prince may take,
 ' And such as fits a generous king to make.
 ' Let chosen delegates this hour be sent
 ' (Myself will name them) to Pelides' tent : 220
 ' Let Phoenix lead, rever'd for hoary age,
 ' Great Ajax next, and Ithacus the sage.
 ' Yet more to sanctify the word you send,
 ' Let Hodius and Eurybates attend.
 ' Now pray to Jove to grant what Greece demands ; 225
 ' Pray, in deep silence, and with purest hands.'
 He said, and all approv'd. The heralds bring *
 The cleansing water from the living spring.
 The youth with wine the sacred goblets crown'd,
 And large libations drench'd the sands around. 230
 The rite perform'd, the chiefs their thirst allay,
 Then from the royal tent they take their way ;
 Wise Nestor turns on each his careful eye,
 Forbids t' offend, instructs them to apply :
 Much he advis'd them all, Ulysses most, 235
 To deprecate the chief, and save the host.
 Through the still night they march, and hear the roar
 Of murmuring billows on the sounding shore.

To Neptune, ruler of the seas profound,
 Whose liquid arms the mighty globe surround, 240
 They pour forth vows, their embassy to bless,
 And calm the rage of stern Æacides.
 And now arriv'd, where, on the sandy bay
 The Myrmidonian tents and vessels lay,
 Amus'd at ease, the godlike man they found, 245
 Pleas'd with the solemn harp's harmonious sound.
 (The well-wrought harp from conquer'd Thebæ came,
 Of polish'd silver was its costly frame.)
 With this he soothes his angry soul, and sings
 Th' immortal deeds of heroes and of kings. 250
 Patroclus only of the royal train,
 Placed in his tent, attends the lofty strain :
 Full opposite he sat, and listen'd long,
 In silence waiting till he ceas'd the song.
 Unseen the Grecian embassy proceeds 255
 To his high tent ; the great Ulysses leads.
 Achilles starting, as the chiefs he spied,
 Leap'd from his seat, and laid the harp aside.
 With like surprise arose Menœtius' son :
 Pelides grasp'd their hands, and thus begun : 260
 ' Princes, all hail ! whatever brought you here,
 ' Or strong necessity, or urgent fear ;
 ' Welcome, though Greeks ! for not as foes ye came ;
 ' To me more dear than all that bear the name.
 With that, the chiefs beneath his roof he led, 265
 And placed in seats with purple carpets spread.
 Then thus : ' Patroclus, crown a larger bowl,
 ' Mix purer wine, and open every soul.
 ' Of all the warriors yonder host can send,
 ' Thy friend most honours these, and these thy friend.' 270
 He said : Patroclus, o'er the blazing fire
 Heaps in a brazen vase three chines entire :
 The brazen vase Automedon sustains,
 Which flesh of porket, sheep, and goat contains :
 Achilles at the genial feast presides, 275
 The parts transfixes, and with skill divides.
 Meanwhile Patroclus sweats the fire to raise ;
 The tent is brighten'd with the rising blaze ;
 Then, when the languid flames at length subside,
 He strews a bed of glowing embers wide, 280
 Above the coals the smoking fragments turns,
 And sprinkles sacred salt from lifted urns ;
 With bread the glittering canisters they load,
 Which round the board Menœtius' son bestow'd :

Himself, oppos'd t' Ulysses full in sight, 285
 Each portion parts, and orders every rite.
 The first fat offerings, to th' immortals due,
 Amidst the greedy flames Patroclus throw ;
 Then each, indulging in the social feast,
 His thirst and hunger soberly repress'd. 290
 That done, to Phoenix Ajax gave the sign ;<sup>10</sup>
 Not unperceiv'd ; Ulysses crown'd with wine
 The foaming bowl, and instant thus began,
 His speech addressing to the godlike man :
 ' Health to Achilles ! happy are thy guests ! 295
 ' Not those more honour'd whom Atrides feasts :
 ' Though gen'rous plenty crown thy loaded boards,
 ' That, Agamemnon's regal tent affords ;
 ' But greater cares sit heavy on our souls,
 ' Not cas'd by banquets or by flowing bowls. 300
 ' What scenes of slaughter in yon fields appear !
 ' The dead we mourn, and for the living fear ;
 ' Greece on the brink of fate all doubtful stands,
 ' And owns no help but from thy saving hands :
 ' Troy and her aids for ready vengeance call ; 305
 ' Their threat'ning tents already shade our wall :
 ' Hear how with shouts their conquest they proclaim,
 ' And point at ev'ry ship their vengeful flame !
 ' For them the father of the gods declares,
 ' Theirs are his omens, and his thunder theirs. 310
 ' See, full of Jovē, avenging Hector rise !
 ' See ! heaven and earth the raging chief defies ;
 ' What fury in his breast, what lightning in his eyes !
 ' He waits but for the morn, to sink in flame
 ' The ships, the Greeks, and all the Grecian name. 315
 ' Heavens ! how my country's woes distract my mind,
 ' Lest fate accomplish all his rage design'd.
 ' And must we, gods ! our heads inglorious lay
 ' In Trojan dust, and this the fatal day ?
 ' Return, Achilles ! oh return, though late, 320
 ' To save thy Greeks, and stop the course of fate ;
 ' If in that heart or grief or courage lies,
 ' Rise to redeem ; ah yet, to conquer, rise !
 ' The day may come, when, all our warriors slain,
 ' That heart shall melt, that courage rise in vain. 325
 ' Regard in time, O prince divinely brave !
 ' Those wholesome counsels which thy father gave.

<sup>10</sup> Ajax, who was a rough soldier, and no orator, is impatient to have the business over ; he makes a sign to Phoenix to begin, but Ulysses prevents him. Pope.

When Peleus in his aged arms embraced
 His parting son, these accents were his last :
 " My child ! with strength, with glory, and success, 330
 " Thy arms may Juno and Minerva bless !
 " Trust that to heaven : but thou thy cares engage
 " To calm thy passions, and subdue thy rage :
 " From gentler manners let thy glory grow,
 " And shun contention, the sure source of woe ; 335
 " That young and old may in thy praise combine,
 " The virtues of humanity be thine."
 This, now despis'd, advice thy father gave,
 Ah ! check thy anger, and be truly brave.
 If thou wilt yield to great Atrides' prayers, 340
 Gifts worthy thee his royal hand prepares ;
 If not—but hear me, while I number o'er
 The proffer'd presents, an exhaustless store.
 Ten weighty talents of the purest gold,
 And twice ten vases of refulgent mould ; 345
 Seven sacred tripods, whose unsullied frame
 Yet knows no office, nor has felt the flame :
 Twelve steeds unmatched in fleetness and in force,
 And still victorious in the dusty course :
 (Rich were the man whose ample stores exceed 350
 The prizes purchas'd by their winged speed :)
 Seven lovely captives of the Lesbian line,
 Skill'd in each art, unmatched in form divine,
 The same he chose for more than vulgar charms,
 When Lesbos sunk beneath thy conquering arms ; 355
 All these, to buy thy friendship, shall be paid.
 And join'd with these the long-contested maid ;
 With all her charms, Briseis he'll resign,
 And solemn swear those charms were only thine ;
 Untouch'd she stay'd, uninjur'd she removes, 360
 Pure from his arms, and guiltless of his loves.
 These instant shall be thine : and if the powers
 Give to our arms proud Ilion's hostile towers,
 Then shalt thou store (when Greece the spoil divides)
 With gold and brass thy loaded navy's sides. 365
 Besides, full twenty nymphs of Trojan race
 With copious love shall crown thy warm embrace ;
 Such as thyself shalt choose ; who yield to none,
 Or yield to Helen's heavenly charms alone.
 Yet hear me farther : when our wars are o'er, 370
 If safe we land on Argos' fruitful shore,
 There shalt thou live his son, his honours share,
 And with Orestes' self divide his care.

- ' Yet more—three daughters in his court are bred,
 ' And each well worthy of a royal bed ; 375
 ' Laodicé and Iphigenia fair,
 ' And bright Chrysothemis with golden hair ;
 ' Her shalt thou wed whom most thy eyes approve ;
 ' He asks no presents, no reward for love :
 ' Himself will give the dower : so vast a store, 380
 ' As never father gave a child before.
 ' Seven ample citics shall confess thy sway,
 ' Thee Enopé, and Phœæ thee obey,
 ' Cardamylé with ample turrets crown'd,
 ' And sacred Pedagus, for vines renown'd : 385
 ' Æpea fair, the pastures Hira yields,
 ' And rich Antheia with her flowery fields .
 ' The whole extent to Pylus' sandy plain
 ' Along the verdant margin of the main.
 ' There heifers graze, and labouring oxen toil ; 390
 ' Bold are the men, and generous is the soil.
 ' There shalt thou reign with power and justice crown'd,
 ' And rule the tributary realms around.
 ' Such are the proffers which this day we bring,
 ' Such the repentance of a suppliant king 395
 ' But if all this, relentless, thou disdain,
 ' If honour, and if interest, plead in vain ;
 ' Yet some redress to suppliant Greece afford.
 ' And be, amongst her guardian gods, ador'd
 ' If no regard thy suffering country claim, 400
 ' Hear thy own glory, and the voice of fame .
 ' For now that chief, whose unresisted ire
 ' Made nations tremble, and whole hosts retire,
 ' Proud Hector, now, th' unequal fight demands,
 ' And only triumphs to deserve thy hands.' 405
 ' Then thus the goddess-born : ' Ulysses, hear
 ' A faithful speech, that knows nor art nor fear ;
 ' What in my secret soul is understood,
 ' My tongue shall utter, and my deeds make good
 ' Let Greece then know, my purpose I retain, 410
 ' Nor with new treaties vex my peace in vain
 ' Who dares think one thing, and another tell,
 ' My heart detests him as the gates of hell.
 ' Taken thus in short my fix'd resolves attend,
 ' Which nor Atrides, nor his Greeks, can bend : 415
 ' Long toils, long perils, in their cause I bore ;
 ' But now th' unfruitful glories charm no more.
 ' Fight or not fight, a like reward we claim,
 ' The wretch and hero find their prize the same ;

' Alike<sup>9</sup> regretted in the dust he lies, 420
 ' Who yields ignobly, or who bravely dies.
 ' Of all my dangers, all my glorious pains,
 ' A life of labours, lo ! what fruit remains ?
 ' As the bold bird her helpless young attends,
 ' From danger guards them, and from want defends ; 425
 ' In search of prey she wings the spacious air,
 ' And with th' untasted food supplies her care :
 ' For thankless Greece such hardships have I brav'd,
 ' Her wives, her infants, by my labours sav'd ;
 ' Long sleepless nights in heavy arms I stood, 430
 ' And sweat laborious days in dust and blood.
 ' I sack'd twelve ample cities on the main,
 ' And twelve lay smoking on the Trojan plain :
 ' Then at Atrides' haughty feet were laid
 ' The wealth I gather'd, and the spoils I made. 435
 ' Your mighty monarch these in peace possess'd ;
 ' Some few my soldiers had, himself the rest.
 ' Some present too to every prince was paid ;
 ' And every prince enjoys the gift he made ;
 ' I only must refund of all his train ; 440
 ' See what pre-eminence our merits gain !
 ' My spoil alone his greedy soul delights ;
 ' My spouse alone must bless his lustful nights :
 ' The woman, let him (as he may) enjoy :
 ' But what's the quarrel then of Greece to Troy ? 445
 ' What to these shores th' assembled nations draws,
 ' What calls for vengeance but a woman's cause ?
 ' Are fair endowments and a beauteous face
 ' Belov'd by none but those of Atreus' race ?
 ' The wife whom choice and passion both approve, 450
 ' Sure every wise and worthy man will love.
 ' Nor did my fair one less distinction claim ;
 ' Slave as she was, my soul ador'd the dame.
 ' Wrong'd in my love, all proffers I disdain ;
 ' Deceiv'd for once, I trust not kings again. 455
 ' Ye have my answer. What remains to do,
 ' Your king, Ulysses, may consult with you.
 ' What needs he the defence this arm can make ?
 ' Has he not walls no human force can shake ?
 ' Has he not fenced his guarded navy round 460
 ' With piles, with ramparts, and a trench profound ?
 ' And will not these (the wonders he has done)
 ' Repel the rage of Priam's single son ?
 ' There was a time ('twas when for Greece I fought)
 ' When Hector's prowess no such wonders wrought ; 465

' He kept the verge of Troy, nor dar'd to wait
 ' Achilles' fury at the Scæan gate ;
 ' He tried it once, and scarce was sav'd by Fate.
 ' But now those ancient enmities are o'er ;
 ' To-morrow we the favouring gods implore ; 470
 ' Then shall you see our parting vessels crown'd,
 ' And hear with oars the Hellespont resound.
 ' The third day hence, shall Pthia<sup>11</sup> greet our sails,
 ' If mighty Neptune send propitious gales ;
 ' Pthia to her Achilles shall restore, 475
 ' The wealth he left for this detested shore :
 ' Thither the spoils of this long war shall pass,
 ' The ruddy gold, the steel, and shining brass ;
 ' My beauteous captives thither I'll convey,
 ' And all that rests of my ungravis'd prey. 480
 ' One only valued gift your tyrant gave,
 ' And that resum'd ; the fair Lyrnessian slave.
 ' Then tell him, loud, that all the Greeks may hear,
 ' And learn to scorn the wretch they basely fear ;
 ' (For, arm'd in impudence, mankind he braves, 485
 ' And meditates new cheats on all his slaves ;
 ' Though, shameless as he is, to face these eyes
 ' Is what he dares not ; if he dares, he dies ;)
 ' Tell him, all terms, all commerce I decline,
 ' Nor share his council, nor his battle join ; 490
 ' For once deceiv'd, was his ; but twice, were mine.
 ' No—let the stupid prince, whom Jove deprives
 ' Of sense and justice, run where frenzy drives ;
 ' His gifts are hateful : kings of such a kind
 ' Stand but as slaves before a noble mind. 495
 ' Not though he proffer'd all himself possess'd,
 ' And all his rapine could from others wrest ;
 ' Not all the golden tides of wealth that crown
 ' The many-peopled Orchomenian town ;
 ' Not all proud Thebes'<sup>12</sup> unrivall'd walls contain, 500
 ' The world's great empress on th' Egyptian plain,
 ' (That spreads her conquests o'er a thousand states,
 ' And pours her heroes through a hundred gates,
 ' Two hundred horsemen and two hundred cars
 ' From each wide portal issuing to the wars ;) 505
 ' Than bribes were heap'd on bribes, in number more
 ' Than dust in fields, or sands along the shore ;
 ' Should all these offers for my friendship call ;
 ' *Tis he that offers, and I scorn them all,

- ' Atrides' daughter never shall be led
 ' (An ill-match'd consort) to Achilles' bed ;
 ' Like golden Venus though she charm'd the heart,
 ' And vied with Pallas in the works of art.
 ' Some greater Greek let those high nuptials grace,
 ' I hate alliance with a tyrant's race. 515
 ' If heaven restore me to my realms with life,
 ' The reverend Peleus shall elect my wife ;
 ' Thessalian nymphs there are, of form divine,
 ' And kings that sue to mix their blood with mine.
 ' Bless'd in kind love, my years shall glide away, 520
 ' Content with just hereditary sway ;
 ' There, deaf for ever to the martial strife,
 ' Enjoy the dear prerogative of life,
 ' Life is not to be bought with heaps of gold ;
 ' Not all Apollo's Pythian treasures hold, 525
 ' Or Troy once held, in peace and pride of sway,
 ' Can bribe the poor possession of a day !
 ' Lost herds and treasures we by arms regain,
 ' And steeds unrivall'd on the dusty plain :
 ' But from our lips the vital spirit fled, 530
 ' Returns no more to wake the silent dead.
 ' My fates long since by Thetis were disclos'd,
 ' And each alternate, life or fame, propos'd :
 ' Here if I stay, before the Trojan town,
 ' Short is my date, but deathless my renown ; 535
 ' If I return, I quit immortal praise
 ' For years on years, and long-extended days.
 ' Convinced, though late, I find my fond mistake ;
 ' And warn the Greeks the wiser choice to make ;
 ' To quit these shores, their native seats enjoy, 540
 ' Nor hope the fall of heaven-defended Troy.
 ' Jove's arm display'd asserts her from the skies ;
 ' Her hearts are strengthen'd, and her glories rise.
 ' Go then, to Greece report our fix'd design :
 ' Bid all your councils, all your armies join, 545
 ' Let all your forces, all your arts conspire,
 ' To save the ships, the troops, the chiefs, from fire.
 ' One stratagem has fail'd ; and others will :
 ' Ye find Achilles is unconquer'd still.
 ' Go then : digest my message as ye may : 550
 ' But here this night let reverend Phoenix stay ;
 ' His tedious toils and hoary hairs demand
 ' A peaceful death in Pthia's friendly land.
 ' But whether he remain, or sail with me, •
 ' His age be sacred, and his will be free.' 555

The son of Peleus ceas'd : the chiefs around
 In silence wrapp'd, in consternation drown'd,
 Attend the stern reply. Then Phoenix rose,
 (Down his white beard a stream of sorrow flows,)
 And while the fate of suffering Greece he mourn'd, 566
 With accent weak these tender words return'd :
 ' Divine Achilles ! wilt thou then retire,
 ' And leave our hosts in blood, our fleets on fire ?
 ' If wrath so dreadful fill thy ruthless mind,
 ' How shall thy friend, thy Phoenix, stay behind ? 568
 ' The royal Peleus, when from Pthia's coast
 ' He sent thee early to th' Achaian host ;
 ' Thy youth as then in sage debates unskill'd,
 ' And new to perils of the dreadful field ;
 ' He bade me teach thee all the ways of war ; 571
 ' To shine in councils, and in camps to dare.
 ' Never, ah never, let me leave thy side !
 ' No time shall part us, and no fate divide.
 ' Not though the god, that breath'd my life, restore
 ' The bloom I boasted, and the port I bore, 575
 ' When Greece of old beheld my youthful flames,
 ' (Delightful Greece, the land of lovely dames )
 ' My father, faithless to my mother's arms,
 ' Old as he was, ador'd a stranger's charms,
 ' I tried what youth could do (at her desire) 580
 ' To win the damsel, and prevent my sire.
 ' My sire with curses loads my hated head,
 ' And cries, " Ye furies ! barren be his bed."
 ' Infernal Jove, the vengeful fiends below,
 ' And ruthless Proserpine, confirm'd his vow. 585
 ' Despair and grief attract my labouring mind ;
 ' Gods ! what a crime my unpious heart design'd !
 ' I thought (but some kind God that thought suppress'd)
 ' To plunge the poniard in my father's breast :
 ' Then meditate my flight ; my friends in vain 590
 ' With prayers entreat me, and with force detain.
 ' On fat of rams, black bulls, and brayny swine,
 ' They daily feast, with draughts of fragrant wine :
 ' Strong guards they placed, and watch'd nine nights entire .
 ' The roofs and porches flamm'd with constant fire. 595
 ' The fifth, I forced the gates, unseen of all ,
 ' And, favour'd by the night, o'erleap'd the wall.
 ' My travels thence through spacious Greece extend :
 ' In Pthia's court at last my labours end.
 ' Your sire receiv'd me, as his son caress'd, 600
 ' With gifts enrich'd, and with possessions bless'd,

' The strong Dolopians thenceforth own'd my reign,
 ' And all the coast that runs along the main.
 ' By love to thee his bounties I repaid,
 ' And early wisdom to thy soul convey'd : 605
 ' Great as thou art, my lessons made thee brave,
 ' A child I took thee, but a hero gave
 ' Thy infant breast a like affection shew'd ;
 ' Still in my arms, (an ever-pleasing load,)
 ' Or at my knee, by Phoenix wouldst thou stand ; 610
 ' No food was grateful but from Phoenix' hand.
 ' I pass my watchings o'er thy helpless years,
 ' The tender labours, the compliant cares ;
 ' The gods (I thought) revers'd their hard decree,
 ' And Phoenix felt a father's joys in thee ; 615
 ' Thy growing virtues justified my cares,
 ' And promised comfort to my silver hairs.
 ' Now be thy rage, thy fatal rage, resign'd ;
 ' A cruel heart ill suits a manly mind :
 ' The gods (the only great, and only wise) 620
 ' Are mov'd by offerings, vows, and sacrifice ;
 ' Offending man their high compassion wins,
 ' And daily prayers atone for daily sins.
 ' Prayers are Jove's daughters, of celestial race,
 ' Lame are their feet, and wrinkled is their face ; 625
 ' With humble mien, and with dejected eyes,
 ' Constant they follow where Injustice flies :
 ' Injustice, swift, erect, and unconfin'd,
 ' Sweeps the wide earth, and tramples o'er mankind,
 ' While Prayers, to heal her wrongs, move slow behind. 630
 ' Who hears these daughters of almighty Jove,
 ' For him they mediate to the throne above :
 ' When man rejects the humble suit they make,
 ' The sire revenges for the daughters' sake ;
 ' From Jove commission'd, fierce Injustice then 635
 ' Descends, to punish unrelenting men.
 ' Oh let not headlong passion bear the sway ;
 ' These reconciling goddesses obey :
 ' Due honours to the seed of Jove belong ;
 ' Due honours calm the fierce and bend the strong. 640
 ' Were these not paid thee by the terms we bring,
 ' Were rage still harbour'd in the haughty king,
 ' Nor Greece, nor all her fortunes, should engage
 ' Thy friend to plead against so just a rage.
 ' But since what honour asks, the general sends, 645
 ' And sends by those whom most thy heart commends,
 ' The best and noblest of the Grecian train ;
 ' Permit not these to sue, and sue in vain !

' Let me (my son) an ancient fact unfold,
 ' A great example drawn from times of old ; 650
 ' Hear what our fathers were, and what their praise,
 ' Who conquer'd their revenge in former days.
 ' Where Calydon on rocky mountains stands,
 ' Once fought th' Ætolian and Curetæan bands ;
 ' To guard it those, to conquer these, advance ; 655
 ' And mutual deaths were dealt with mutual chance.
 The silver Cynthis bade Contention rise,
 In vengeance of neglected sacrifice ;
 ' On Ceneus'<sup>13</sup> fields she sent a monstrous boar,
 ' That levell'd harvests and whole forests tore : 660
 ' This beast (when many a chief his tusks had slain)
 ' Great Meleager stretch'd along the plain.
 ' Then, for his spoils,<sup>14</sup> a new debate arose,
 ' The neighbour nations thence commencing foes.
 ' Strong as they were, the bold Curetes fail'd, 665
 ' While Meleager's thundering arm prevail'd :
 ' Till rage at length inflam'd his lofty breast,
 ' (For rage invades the wisest and the best.)
 ' Curs'd by Althæa,<sup>15</sup> to his wrath he yields,
 ' And, in his wife's embrace,<sup>16</sup> forgets the fields. 670
 (' She from Marpessa sprung, divinely fair,
 ' And matchless Idas, more than man in war ;
 ' The god of day ador'd the mother's charms :
 ' Against the god the father bent his arms :'<sup>17</sup>
 ' Th' afflicted pair, their sorrows to proclaim, 675
 ' From Cleopatra changed this daughter's name,
 ' And call'd Alcione ; a name to shew
 ' The father's grief, the mourning mother's woe )
 ' To her the chief retir'd from stern debate,
 ' But found no peace from fierce Althæa's hate : 680
 ' Althæa's hate th' unhappy warrior drew,
 ' Whose luckless hand his royal uncle slew ;
 ' She beat the ground, and call'd the powers beneath
 ' On her own son to wreak her brother's death :<sup>18</sup>

' Hell heard her curses from the realms profound, 685
 ' And the red fiends that walk'd the nightly round.
 ' In vain Ætolia her deliverer<sup>19</sup> waits,
 ' War shakes her walls, and thunders at her gates.
 ' She sent ambassadors, a chosen band,
 ' Priests of the gods, and elders of the land, 690
 ' Besought the chief to save the sinking state :
 ' Their prayers were urgent, and their proffers great ;
 ' (Full fifty acres of the richest ground,
 ' Half pasture green, and half with vineyards crown'd.)
 ' His suppliant father, aged Ceneus, came ; 695
 ' His sisters follow'd . e'en the vengeful dame
 ' Althæa sues ; his friends before him fall :
 ' He stands relentless, and rejects them all.
 ' Meanwhile the victors'<sup>20</sup> shouts ascend the skies ;
 ' The walls are scal'd ; the rolling flames arise ; 700
 ' At length his wife (a form divine) appears,
 ' With piercing cries, and supplicating tears ;
 ' She paints the horrors of a conquer'd town,
 ' The heroes slain, the palaces o'erthrown,
 ' The matrons ravish'd, the whole race enslav'd : 705
 ' The warrior heard, he vanquish'd, and he sav'd.
 ' Th' Ætolians, long disdain'd, now took their turn,
 ' And left the chief their broken faith to mourn.<sup>21</sup>
 ' Learn hence, betimes to curb pernicious ire,
 ' Nor stay, till yonder fleets ascend in fire : 710
 ' Accept the presents ; draw thy conquering sword ;
 ' And be amongst our guardian gods ador'd.'
 Thus he : the stern Achilles thus replied :
 ' My second father, and my reverend guide !
 ' Thy friend, believe me, no such gifts demands, 715
 ' And asks no honours from a mortal's hands :
 ' Jove honours me, and favours my designs :
 ' His pleasure guides me, and his will confines :
 ' And here I stay (if such his high behest)
 ' While life's warm spirit beats within my breast. 720
 ' Yet hear one word, and lodge it in thy heart ;
 ' No more molest me on Atrides' part :

- ' Is it for him these tears are taught to flow,
 ' For him these sorrows ? for my mortal foe ?
 ' A generous friendship no cold medium knows, 725
 ' Burns with one love, with one resentment glows ;
 ' One should our interests, and our passions, be ;
 ' My friend must hate the man that injures me.
 ' Do this, my Phoenix, 'tis a generous part,
 ' And share my realms, my honours, and my heart 730
 ' Let these return : our voyage, or our stay,
 ' Rest undetermin'd till the dawning day.'
 He ceas'd : then order'd for the sage's bed
 A warmer couch with numerous carpets spread.
 With that, stern Ajax his long silence broke, 735
 And thus, impatient, to Ulysses spoke :
 ' Hence let us go—why waste we time in vain ?
 ' See what effect our low submissions gain !
 ' Liked or not liked, his words we must relate,
 ' The Greeks expect them, and our heroes wait. 740
 ' Proud as he is, that iron heart retains
 ' Its stubborn purpose, and his friends disdains.
 ' Stern, and unpitying ! if a brother bleed,
 ' On just atonement, we remit the deed ;
 ' A sire the slaughter of his son forgives ; 745
 ' The price of blood discharg'd, the murderer lives :
 ' The haughtiest hearts at length their rage resign,
 ' And gifts can conquer every soul but thine :
 ' The gods that unrelenting breast have steel'd,
 ' And curs'd thee with a mind that cannot yield. 750
 ' One woman-slave was ravish'd from thy arms :
 Lo, seven are offer'd, and of equal charms.
 ' Then hear, Achilles ! be of better mind ;
 ' Revere thy roof, and to thy guests be kind ;
 ' And know the men, of all the Grecian host, 755
 ' Who honour worth, and prize thy valour most.
 ' Oh soul of battles, and thy people's guide !'
 (To Ajax thus the first of Greeks replied)
 ' Well hast thou spoke ; but at the tyrant's name
 ' My rage rekindles and my soul's on flame ; 760
 ' 'Tis just resentment, and becomes the brave ;
 ' I'mgrac'd, dishonour'd, like the vilest slave !
 ' Return then, heroes ! and our answer bear,
 ' The glorious combat is no more my care ;
 ' Not till amidst yon sinking navy slain, 765
 ' The blood of Greeks shall dye the sable main ;
 ' Not till the flames, by Hector's fury thrown,
 ' Consume your vessels, and approach my own ;

'Just there, th' impetuous homicide shall stand,
'There cease his battle, and there feel our hand.'

770

This said, each prince a double goblet crown'd,
And cast a large libation on the ground:

Then to their vessels, through the gloomy shades,
The chiefs return; divine Ulysses leads.

775

Meantime Achilles' slaves prepared a bed,
With fleeces, carpets, and soft linen spread:

There, till the sacred morn restor'd the day,
In slumbers sweet the reverend Phoenix lay,

But in his inner tent, an ampler space,
Achilles slept: and in his warm embrace

780

Fair Diomedé of the Lesbian race.

And, for Patroclus was the couch prepar'd,
Whose nightly joys the beauteous Iphigeneia shar'd:

Achilles to his friend consign'd her charms,
When Seyros fell before his conquering arms.

785

And now th' elected chiefs, whom Greece had sent,
Pass'd through the hosts, and reach'd the royal tent.

Then rising all, with goblets in their hands,
The peers, and leaders of th' Achaian bands,

790

Hail'd their return: Atrides first begun:

'Say, what success? divine Laertes' son!

'Achilles' high resolves declare to all:

'Returns the chief, or must our navy fall?'

'Great king of nations!' (Ithacus replied)

795

'Fix'd is his wrath, unconquer'd is his pride;

'He slight's thy friendship, thy proposals scorns,

'And, thus implor'd, with fiercer fury burns.

'To save our army, and our fleets to free,

'Is not his care; but left to Greece and thee.

800

'Your eyes shall view, when morning paints the sky,

'Beneath his oars the whitening billows fly.

'Us too he bids our oars and sails employ,

'Nor hope the fall of heaven-protected Troy;

'For Jove o'ershadow's her with his arm divine,

805

'Inspires her war, and bids her glory shine.

'Such was his word: what farther he declar'd,

'These sacred heralds and great Ajax heard.

'But Phoenix in his tent the chief retains,

'Safe to transport him to his native plains,

810

'When morning dawns; if other he decrees

'His age is sacred, and his choice is free.'

Ulysses ceas'd: the great Achaian host,
With sorrow seiz'd, in consternation lost,

Attend the stern reply. Tydides broke
 The general silence, and undaunted spoke : 815
 ' Why should we gifts to proud Achilles send ?
 ' Or strive with prayers his haughty soul to bend ?
 ' His country's woes he glories to deride,
 ' And prayers will burst that swelling heart with pride.
 ' Be the fierce impulse of his rage obey'd ; 820
 ' Our battles let him, or desert or aid ;
 ' Then let him arm when Jove or he think fit ;
 ' That, to his madness, or to heaven, commit :
 ' What for ourselves we can, is always ours :
 ' This night, let due repast refresh our powers ; 825
 ' (For strength consists in spirits and in blood,
 ' And those are owed to generous wine and food ;)
 ' But when the rosy messenger of day
 ' Strikes the blue mountains with her golden ray,
 ' Ranged at the ships let all our squadrons shune, 830
 ' In flaming arms, a long extended line :
 ' In the dread front let great Atrides stand,
 ' The first in danger, as in high command.'
 Shouts of acclaim the listening heroes raise,
 Then each to heaven the due libations pays ; 835
 Till sleep, descending o'er the tents, bestows
 The grateful blessings of desired repose.

BOOK X.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE NIGHT ADVENTURE OF DIOMEDE AND ULYSSES.

Upon the refusal of Achilles to return to the army, the distress of Agamemnon is described in the most lively manner. He takes no rest that night, but passes through the camp, awaking the leaders, and contriving all possible methods for the public safety. Menelaus, Nestor, Ulysses, and Diomedes, are employed in raising the rest of the captains. They call a council of war, and determine to send scouts into the enemy's camp, to learn their posture, and discover their intentions. Diomedes undertakes this hazardous enterprise, and makes choice of Ulysses for his companion. In their passage they surprise Dolon, whom Hector had sent on a like design to the camp of the Grecians. From him they are informed of the situation of the Trojan and auxiliary forces, and particularly of Rhesus, and the Thracians, who were lately arrived. They pass on with success; kill Rhesus with several of his officers, and seize the famous horses of that prince, with which they return in triumph to the camp.

The same night continues ; the scene lies in the two camps.

ALL night the chiefs before their vessels lay,
 And lost in sleep the labours of the day :
 All but the king ; with various thoughts oppress'd,
 His country's cares lay rolling in his breast.
 As when by lightnings Jove's ethereal power
 Foretells the rattling hail, or weighty shower,
 Or sends soft snows to whiten all the shore,
 Or bids the brazen throat of war to roar ;
 By fits one flash succeeds as one expires,
 And heaven flames thick with momentary fires :
 So bursting frequent from Atrides' breast,
 Sighs following sighs his inward fears confess'd.
 Now, o'er the fields, dejected, he surveys
 From thousand Trojan fires the mounting blaze ;
 Hears in the passing wind their music blow,
 And marks distinct the voices of the foe.
 Now, looking backwards to the fleet and coast,
 Anxious he sorrows for th' endanger'd host.
 He rends his hairs, in sacrifice to Jove,<sup>1</sup>
 And sues to him that ever lives above :
 Inly he groans ; while glory and despair
 Divide his heart, and wago a doubtful war.
 A thousand cares his labouring breast revolves ;
 To seek sage Nestor now the chief resolves,
 With him, in wholesome counsels, to debate
 What yet remains to save th' afflicted state.
 He rose, and first he cast his mantle round,
 Next on his feet the shining sandals bound ;
 A lion's yellow spoils his back conceal'd ;
 His warlike hand a pointed javelin held.
 Meanwhile his brother, press'd with equal woes,
 Alike denied the gift of soft repose,
 Laments for Greece ; that in his cause before
 So much had suffer'd, and must suffer more.
 A leopard's spotted hide his shoulders spread ;
 A brazen helmet glitter'd on his head :
 Thus (with a javelin in his hand) he went
 To wake Atrides in the royal tent.
 Already wak'd, Atrides he descried
 His armour buckling at his vessel's side.

Joyful they met . the Spartan thus begun
 ' Why puts my brother this bright armour on ?
 ' Sends he some spy, amidst these silent hours,
 ' To try yon camp, and watch the Trojan powers ?
 ' But say, what hero shall sustain the task ? 65
 ' Such bold exploits uncommon courage ask,
 ' Guideless, alone, through night's dark shade to go,
 ' And midst a hostile camp explore the foe.'
 To whom the king ' In such distress we stand,
 ' No vulgar counsels our affairs demand, 60
 ' Greece to preserve, is now no easy part
 ' But asks high wisdom, deep design, and art
 ' For Jove averse our humble prayer denies,
 ' And bows his head to Hector's sacrifice
 ' What eye has witness'd, or what ear believ'd,
 ' In one great day, by one great arm achiev'd
 ' Such wondrous deeds as Hector's hand has done,
 ' And we beheld, the last revolving sun ?
 ' What honours the belov'd of Jove adorn !
 ' Sprung from no god, and of no goddess born, 65
 ' Yet such his acts, as Greeks unborn shall tell,
 ' And curse the battle where their fathers fell
 ' Now speed thy hasty course along the fleet,
 ' There call great Ajax, and the prince of Crete,
 ' Ourselves to hoary Nestor's ill repair, 66
 ' To keep the guards on duty, be his care
 (For Nestor's influence best that quarter guides, Whose son with Merion o'er the watch presides )
 To whom the Spartan ' These thy orders borne,
 ' Say, shall I stay, or with despatch return ?' 70
 ' There shalt thou stay (the king of men replied )
 ' Else may we miss to meet without a guide,
 ' The paths so many, and the camp so wide
 ' Still, with your voice, the slothful soldiers raise,
 ' Urge by their fathers' fame, their future praise 75
 ' Forget we now our state and lofty birth,
 ' Not titles here, but works must prove our worth.
 ' To labour is the lot of man below,
 ' And when Jove gave us life, he gave us woe.'
 This said, each parted to his several cares ; 80
 The king to Nestor's sable ship repairs,
 The sage protector of the Greeks he found
 Stretch'd in his bed, with all his arms around ;
 The various-coloured scarf, the shield he rears,
 The shining helmet, and the pointed spears, 85
 The dreadful weapons of the warrior's rage,
 That, old in arms, disdain'd the peace of age.

- Then, leaning on his hand his watchful head,
 The hoary monarch rais'd his eyes, and said :
 ' What art thou, speak, that on designs unknown, 90
 ' While others sleep, thus range the camp alone ?
 ' Seek'st thou some friend, or nightly sentinel ?
 ' Stand off, approach not, but thy purpose tell.'
 ' O son of Neleus ! (thus the king rejoin'd)
 ' Pride of the Greeks, and glory of thy kind ! 95
 ' Lo here the wretched Agamemnon stands.
 ' Th' unhappy general of the Grecian bands ;
 ' Whom Jove decrees with daily cares to bend,
 ' And woes, that only with his life shall end !
 ' Scarce can my knees these trembling limbs sustain, 100
 ' And scarce my heart support its load of pain.
 ' No taste of sleep these heavy eyes have known ;
 ' Confus'd, and sad, I wander thus alone,
 ' With fears distracted, with no fix'd design ;
 ' And all my people's miseries are mine. 105
 ' If aught of use thy waking thought suggest,
 ' (Since cares, like mine, deprive thy soul of rest,)
 ' Impart thy counsel, and assist thy friend :
 ' Now let us jointly to the trench descend,
 ' At every gate the fainting guard excite. 110
 ' Tir'd with the toils of day, and watch of night :
 ' Else may the sudden foe our works invade,
 ' So near, and favour'd by the gloomy shade.'
 To him thus Nestor : ' Trust the powers above,
 ' Nor think proud Hector's hopes confirm'd by Jove : 115
 ' How ill agree the views of vain mankind,
 ' And the wise counsels of th' eternal mind !
 ' Audacious Hector, if the gods ordain
 ' That great Achilles rise and rage again,
 ' What toils attend thee, and what woes remain ! 120
 ' Lo faithful Nestor thy command obeys ;
 ' The care is next our other chiefs to raise :
 ' Ulysses, Diomed, we chiefly need ;
 ' Megea for strength, Oileus fam'd for speed,
 ' Some other be despatch'd of nimbler feet. 125
 ' To those tall ships, remotest of the fleet,
 ' Where lie great Ajax, and the king of Crete.
 ' To rouse the Spartan I myself decree ;
 ' Dear as he is to us, and dear to thee,
 ' Yet must I tax his sloth, that claims no share, 130
 ' With his great brother, in this martial care ;
 ' Him it behoved to every chief to sue,
 ' Preventing every part perform'd by you ;

'For strong necessity our toils demands,
 'Claims all our hearts, and urges all our hands.' 135
 To whom the king: 'With reverence we allow
 Thy just rebukes, yet learn to spare them now.
 My generous brother is of gentle kind,
 He seems remiss, but bears a valiant mind;
 Through too much deference to our sovereign sway, 140
 Content to follow when we lead the way.
 'But now, our ills industrious to prevent,
 'Long ere the rest he rose, and sought my tent.
 'The chiefs you named, already, at his call,
 'Prepare to meet us at the navy-wall; 145
 'Assembling there, between the trench and gates,
 'Near the night-guards our chosen council waits'
 'Then none (said Nestor) shall his rule withstand,
 'For great examples justify command.'
 With that, the venerable warrior rose; 150
 The shining greaves his manly legs enclose,
 His purple mantle golden buckles join'd,
 Warm with the softest wool, and doubly lin'd.
 Then, rushing from his tent, he snatch'd in haste
 His steely lance, that lighten'd as he pass'd. 155
 The camp he travers'd through the sleeping crowd.
 Stopp'd at Ulysses' tent, and call'd aloud.
 Ulysses, sudden as the voice was sent,
 Awakes, starts up, and issues from his tent:
 'What new distress, what sudden cause of fright, 160
 Thus leads you wandering in the silent night?'
 'O prudent chief! (the Pylian chief replied)
 Wise as thou art, be now thy wisdom tried:
 'Whatever means of safety can be sought,
 'Whatever counsels can inspire our thought, 165
 'Whatever methods, or to fly or fight;
 'All, all depend on this important night!'
 He heard, return'd, and took his painted shield.
 Then join'd the chiefs, and follow'd through the field.
 Without his tent, bold Diomed they found, 170
 All sheath'd in arms, his brave companions round:
 Each sunk in sleep, extended on the field,
 His head reclining on his bossy shield:
 A wood of spears stood by, that, fix'd upright,
 Shot from their flashing points a quivering light. 175
 A bull's black hide compos'd the hero's bed;
 A splendid carpet roll'd beneath his head.
 Then, with his foot, old Nestor gently shakes
 The slumbering chief, and in these words awakes:

B. X.]	PROCEEDINGS OF THE GREEKS.	179
' Rise, son of Tydeus ! to the brave and strong		180
' Rest seems inglorious, and the night too long.
' But sleep'st thou now ? when from yon hill the foe
' Hangs o'er the fleet, and shades our walls below ?
At this, soft slumber from his eyelids fled ;
The warrior saw the hoary chief, and said :	185
' Wondrous old man ! whose soul no respite knows,
' Though years and honours bid thee seek repose.
' Let younger Greeks our sleeping warriors wake ;
' Ill fits thy age these toils to undertake.'
' My friend,' (he answer'd,) ' generous is thy care,	190
' These toils, my subjects and my sons might bear,
' Their loyal thoughts and pious loves conspire
' To ease a sovereign, and relieve a sir.
' But now the last despair surrounds our host ;
' No hour must pass, no moment must be lost ;	195
' Each single Greek, in this conclusive strife,
' Stands on the sharpest edge of death or life :
' Yet if my years thy kind regard engage,
' Employ thy youth as I employ my age ;
' Succeed to these my cares, and rouse the rest ;	200
' He serves me most, who serves his country best.'
This said, the hero o'er his shoulder hung
A lion's spoils, that to his ankles hung ;
Then seiz'd his ponderous lance, and strode along.
Meges the bold, with Ajax fam'd for speed.	205
The warrior rous'd, and to th' entrenchments led.
And now the chiefs approach the mighty guard ;
A wakeful squadron, each in arms prepar'd
Th' unwearied watch their listening leaders keep,
And, couching close, repel invading sleep.	210
So faithful dogs their fleecy charge maintain,
With toil protected from the prowling train ;
When the gaunt lioness, with hunger bold,
Springs from the mountains tow'rd the guarded fold :
Through breaking woods her rustling course they hear ;	215
Loud, and more loud, the clamours strike their ear
Of hounds, and men ; they start, they gaze around ;
Watch every side, and turn to every sound.
Thus watch'd the Grecians, cautious of surprise,
Each voice, each motion, drew their ears and eyes ;	220
Each step of passing feet increas'd th' affright ;
And hostile Troy was ever full in sight.
Nestor with joy the wakeful band survey'd,
And thus accosted through the gloomy shade :

'Tis well my sons! your nightly cares employ 22,
 Else must our host become the scorn of Troy
 Watch thus and Greece shall live! The hero said,
 Then o'er the trench the following chieftains led
 His son and godlike Menon march'd behind
 For these the princes to their council join'd 23
 The trenches pass'd the assembled kings around
 In silent state the consistency crown'd
 A place there was yet undefil'd with gore
 The spot where Hector stopp'd his race before
 When night descending from his vaulted helm 24
 Repriev'd the relics of the Grecian band
 (The plain beside with mangled corpses was press'd
 And all his progress mark'd by heaps of blood)
 There sat the mournful kings when Nestor saw
 The council opening in these words began 25
 I there (said he) a chief so greatly brave
 His life to hazard and his country save
 Lives there a man who singly dares to go
 To render camp or city some strengthening blow
 O! sworn'd by the night approach so near 26
 Then speak then counsel and demand to hear
 If to besurge our navies they prepare
 'Or Troy once more must be the seat of war?
 This could he learn and to our ports retire
 And pass unharm'd the dangers of the night 27
 What funerals his throne should see and his
 While Phrygia's slaves or men hat'd to him press
 What gifts his grateful country would bestow
 What must not Greece to her d liverer owe?
 A sable ewe each leader should provide 28
 With each a sable lambkin by her side
 At every rite his share should be increased
 And his the foremost honours of the feast
 I earhld them mute alone untill night fell
 Tyndes spoke The man you seek is here 29
 Though you black camps to bend my limbs as woe
 'Some god within commands and I obey
 But let some other chosen warrior join
 To raise my hopes and second my design
 'By mutual confidence and mutual aid 30
 Great deeds are done and great discoveries made
 The wise new prudence from the wise retire,
 'And one brave hero runs another's fire

Sable let us the expedition was made by night and each with a lamb, as typical of the fruit of their labours. (Compare)

Contending leaders at the word arose ;
 Each generous breast with emulation glows : 270
 So brave a task each Ajax strove to share,
 Bold Merion strove, and Nestor's valiant heir ;
 The Spartan wish'd the second place to gain,
 And great Ulysses wish'd, nor wish'd in vain.
 Then thus the king of men the contest ends : 275
 ' Thou first of warriors, and thou best of friends,
 ' Undaunted Diomed ! what chief to join
 ' In this great enterprise, is only thine.
 ' Just be thy choice, without affection made,
 ' To birth or office no respect be paid , 280
 ' Let worth determine here.' The monarch spake,
 And inly trembled for his brother's sake.
 Then thus (the godlike Diomed rejoined) :
 ' My choice declares the impulse of my mind.
 ' How can I doubt, while great Ulysses stands 285
 ' To lend his counsels, and assist our hands ?
 ' A chief, whose safety is Minerva's care :
 ' So fam'd, so dreadful in the works of war :
 ' Bless'd in his conduct, I no aid require,
 ' Wisdom like his might pass through flames of fire.' 290
 ' It fits thee not, before these chiefs of fame,'
 (Replied the sage,) ' to praise me, or to blame :
 ' Praise from a friend, or censure from a foe,
 ' Are lost on hearers that our merits know.
 ' But let us haste. Night rolls the hours away, 295
 ' The reddening orient shows the coming day,
 ' The stars shine fainter on th' ethereal plains,
 ' And of night's empire but a third remains.'
 Thus having spoke, with generous ardour press'd,
 In arms terrific their huge limbs they dress'd. 300
 A two-edg'd faulchion Thrasymed the brave,
 And ample buckler, to Tydides gave :
 Then in a leathern helm he cas'd his head,
 Short of its crest, and with no plume o'erspread :
 (Such as by youths, unus'd to arms, are worn ; 305
 No spoils enrich it, and no studs adorn.)
 Next him Ulysses took a shining sword,
 A bow and quiver, with bright arrows stor'd :
 A well-prov'd casque, with leather braces bound,
 (Thy gift, Meriones.) his temple crown'd : 310
 Soft wool within ; without, in order spread,
 A boar's white teeth grinn'd horrid o'er his head.
 This from Amyntor, rich Ormenus' son,
 Autolycus<sup>3</sup> by fraudulent rapine won,

<sup>3</sup> Maternal grandfather of Ulysses.

Th' assembled peers their lofty chief enclos'd ;
 Who thus the counsels of his breast propos'd : 360
 ' What glorious man, for high attempts prepar'd,
 ' Dares greatly venture for a rich reward ?
 ' Of yonder fleet a bold discovery make,
 ' What watch they keep, and what resolves they take ?
 ' If now, subdued, they meditate their flight, 365
 ' And, spent with toil, neglect the watch of night ?
 ' His be the chariot that shall please him most,
 ' Of all the plunder of the vanquish'd host ;
 ' His the fair steeds that all the rest excel,
 ' And his the glory to have served so well.' 370

A youth there was among the tribes of Troy,
 Dolon his name, Eumedes' only boy :

(Five girls beside the reverend herald told :)
 Rich was the son in brass, and rich in gold :
 Not bless'd by nature with the charms of face, 375
 But swift of foot, and matchless in the race.
 ' Hector !' (he said) ' my courage bids me meet
 ' This high achievement, and explore the fleet :
 ' But first exalt thy sceptre to the skies,
 ' And swear to grant me the demanded prize ; 380
 ' Th' immortal coursers, and the glittering car
 ' That bear Pelides through the ranks of war.
 ' Encouraged thus, no idle scout I go,
 ' Fulfil thy wish, their whole intention know,
 ' E'en to the royal tent pursue my way, 385
 ' And all their councils, all their aims, betray.'

The chief then heav'd the golden sceptre high,
 Attesting thus the monarch of the sky :
 ' Be witness, thou ! immortal lord of all !
 ' Whose thunder shakes the dark ærial hall : 390
 ' By none but Dolon shall this prize be borne,
 ' And him alone th' immortal steeds adorn.'

Thus Hector swore : the gods were call'd in vain ;
 But the rash youth prepares to scour the plain :
 Across his back the bended bow he flung, 395
 A wolf's grey hide around his shoulders hung,
 A ferret's downy fur his helmet lin'd,
 And in his hand a pointed javelin shin'd.
 Then (never to return) he sought the shore,
 And trod the path his feet must tread no more. 400
 Scarce had he pass'd the steeds and Trojan throng, (Still bending forward as he cours'd along,
 When, on the hollow way, th' approaching tread
 Ulysses mark'd, and thus to Diomed :

' O friend ! I hear some step of hostile feet, 405
 ' Moving this way, or hastening to the fleet ;
 ' Some spy, perhaps, to lurk beside the main ;
 ' Or nightly pillager that strips the slain.
 ' Yet let him pass, and win a little space ;
 ' Then rush behind him, and prevent his pace. 410
 ' But if, too swift of foot, he flies before,
 ' Confine his course along the fleet and shore,
 ' Betwixt the camp and him our spears employ,
 ' And intercept his hop'd return to Troy.'
 With that they stepp'd aside, and stoop'd their head. 415
 (As Dolon pass'd,) behind a heap of dead :
 Along the path the spy unwary flew :
 Soft, at just distance, both the chiefs pursue.
 So distant they, and such the space between,
 As when two teams of mules divide the green, 420
 (To whom the hind like shares of land allows,)
 When now new furrows part th' approaching ploughs.
 Now Dolon listening heard them as they pass'd ;
 Hector, (he thought,) had sent, and check'd his haste :
 Till scarce at distance of a javelin's throw, 425
 No voice succeeding, he perceiv'd the foe.
 As when two skilful hounds the leveret wind,
 Or chase through woods obscure the trembling hind,
 Now lost, now seen, they intercept his way,
 And from the herd still turn the flying prey : 430
 So fast, and with such fears, the Trojan flew ;
 So close, so constant, the bold Greeks pursue.
 Now almost on the fleet the dastard falls,
 And mingles with the guards that watch the walls :
 When brave Tydides stopp'd : a generous thought 435
 (Inspired by Pallas) in his bosom wrought,
 Lest on the foe some forward Greek advance,
 And snatch the glory from his lifted lance.
 Then thus aloud : ' Whoe'er thou art, remain ;
 ' This javelin else shall fix thee to the plain.' 440
 He said, and high in air the weapon cast,
 Which wilful err'd, and o'er his shoulder pass'd :
 Then fix'd in earth. Against the trembling wood
 The wretch stood propp'd, and quiver'd as he stood ;
 A sudden palsy seiz'd his turning head ; 445
 His loose teeth chatter'd, and his colour fled :
 The panting warriors seize him, as he stands,
 And, with unmanly tears, his life demands :
 ' O spare my youth, and, for the breath I owe,
 ' Large gifts of price my father shall bestow : 450

' Vast heaps of brass shall in your ships be told,
' And steel well-temper'd, and refulgent gold.'

To whom Ulysses made this wise reply :

' Whoe'er thou art, be bold, nor fear to die.

What moves thee, say, when sleep has closed the sight, 455

' To roam the silent fields in dead of night ?

' Cam'st thou the secrets of our camp to find,

' By Hector prompted, or thy daring mind ?

' Or art some wretch by hopes of plunder led

' Through heaps of carnage to despoil the dead ?' 460

Then thus pale Dolon with a fearful look :

(Still as he spoke his limbs with horror shook :)

' Hither I came, by Hector's words deceiv'd :

' Much did he promise, rashly I believ'd :

No less a bribe than great Achilles' car, 465

' And those swift steeds that sweep the ranks of war,

' Urged me, unwilling, this attempt to make ;*

' To learn what counsels, what resolves, you take :

' If now, subdued, you fix your hopes on flight,

' And, tired with toils, neglect the watch of night ?' 470

' Bold was thy aim, and glorious was the prize,'

(Ulysses, with a scornful smile, replies ;)

' Far other rulers those proud steeds demand,

' And scorn the guidance of a vulgar hand ;

' E'en great Achilles scarce their rage can tame, 475

' Achilles sprung from an immortal dame.

' But say, be faithful, and the truth recite :

' Where lies encamp'd the Trojan chief to-night ?

' Where stand his coursers ? in what quarter sleep

' Their other princes ? tell what watch they keep. 480

' Say, since this conquest, what their counsels are ;

' Or here to combat, from their city far,

' Or back to Ilion's walls transfer the war ?'

Ulysses thus, and thus Eumedes' son :

' What Dolon knows, his faithful tongue shall own. 485

' Hector, the peers assembling in his tent,

' A council holds at Ilus' monument.

' No certain guards the nightly watch partake :

' Where'er you fires ascend, the Trojans wake :

' Anxious for Troy, the guard the natives keep : 490

' Safe in their cares, th' auxiliar forces sleep,

' Whose wives and infants, from the danger far,

' Discharge their souls of half the fears of war.'

' Then sleep these aids among the Trojan train,'

(Inquired the chief,) ' or scattered o'er the plain ?' 495

* Dolon represents this oath as the bait with which Hector had tempted him ; but it was at his instance that Hector made it. Cooper.

To whom the spy : ' Their powers they thus dispose :
 ' The Pæons, dreadful with their bended bows,
 ' The Carians, Caucons, the Pelasgian host,
 ' And Leleges, encamp along the coast.
 ' Not distant far, lie higher on the land 500
 ' The Lycian, Mysian, and Mæonian band,
 ' And Phrygia's horse, by Thymbra's ancient wall ;
 ' The Thracians utmost, and apart from all.
 ' These Troy but lately to her succour won,
 ' Led on by Rhesus, great Eioneus' son : 505
 ' I saw his coursers in proud triumph go,
 ' Swift as the wind, and white as winter snow :
 ' Rich silver plates his shining car infold ;
 ' His solid arms, refulgent, flame with gold ;
 ' No mortal shoulders suit the glorious load, 510
 ' Celestial panoply, to grace a god !
 ' Let me, unhappy, to your fleet be borne,
 ' Or leave me here, a captive's fate to mourn,
 ' In cruel chains ; till your return reveal :
 ' The truth or falsehood of the news I tell.' 515
 To this Tydides, with a gloomy frown :
 ' Think not to live, though all the truth be shewn ;
 ' Shall we dismiss thee, in some future ~~peace~~ life ?
 ' To risk more bravely thy now forfeit life ?
 ' Or that again our camps thou may'st explore ? 520
 ' No—once a traitor, thou betray'st no more.'
 Sternly he spoke, and, as the wretch prepar'd
 With humble blandishment to stroke his beard,
 Like lightning swift the wrathful faulchion flew,
 Divides the neck, and cuts the nerves in two ; 525
 One instant snatch'd his trembling soul to hell,
 The head, yet speaking, mutter'd as it fell.
 The furry helmet from his brow they tear,
 The wolf's grey hide, th' unbended bow and spear ;
 These great Ulysses lifting to the skies, 530
 To favouring Pallas dedicates the prize :
 ' Great queen of arms ! receive this hostile spoil,
 ' And let the Thracian steeds reward our toil :
 ' Thee first of all the heavenly host we praise ;
 ' O speed our labours, and direct our ways !' 535
 This said, the spoils, with dropping gore defac'd,
 High on a spreading tamarisk he plac'd ;
 Then heap'd with reeds and gather'd boughs the plain,
 To guide their footsteps to the place again.
 Through the still night they cross the dædious fields, 540
 Slippery with blood, o'er arms and heaps of shields.

Arriving where the Thracian squadrons lay,
 And cas'd in sleep the labours of the day.
 Ranged in three lines they view the prostrate band :
 The horses yok'd beside each warrior stand ; 545
 Their arms in order on the ground reclin'd,
 Through the brown shade the fulgid weapons shin'd ;
 Amidst, lay Rhesus, stretch'd in sleep profound,
 And the white steeds behind his chariot bound.
 The welcome sight Ulysses first descries, 550
 And points to Diomed the tempting prize :
 ' The man, the coursers, and the car behold !
 ' Describ'd by Dolon with the arms of gold.
 ' Now, brave Tydides ! now thy courage try,
 ' Approach the chariot, and the steeds untie ; 555
 ' Or if thy soul aspire to fiercer deeds,
 ' Urge thou the slaughter, while I seize the steeds.'
 Pallas (this said) her hero's bosom warms,
 Breath'd in his heart, and strung his nervous arms ;
 Where'er he pass'd, a purple stream pursued ; 560
 His thirsty faulchion, fat with hostile blood,
 Bath'd all his footsteps, dy'd the fields with gore,
 And a low groan remurmur'd through the shore.
 So the grim lion, from his nightly den,
 O'erleaps the fences, and invades the pen ; 565
 On sheep or goats, resistless in his way,
 He falls, and foaming rends the guardless prey.
 Nor stopp'd the fury of his vengeful hand,
 Till twelve lay breathless of the Thracian band.
 Ulysses following as his partner slew, 570
 Back by the foot each slaughter'd warrior drew ;
 The milk-white coursers studious to convey
 Safe to the ships, he wisely clear'd the way ;
 Lest the fierce steeds, not yet to battles bred,
 Should start and tremble at the heaps of dead. 575
 Now twelve despatch'd, the monarch last they found ;
 Tydides' faulchion fix'd him to the ground.
 Just then a dreadful dream Minerva sent ;
 A warlike form appear'd before his tent,
 Whose visionary steel his bosom tore : 580
 So dream'd the monarch, and awak'd no more.
 Ulysses now the snowy steeds detains.
 And leads them fasten'd by the silver reins ;
 These, with his bow unbent, he lash'd along ;
 (The scourge, forgot, on Rhesus' chariot hung,) 585
 Then gave his friend the signal to retire ;
 But him new dangers, new achievements, fire :

Doubtful he stood, or with his reeking blade
 To send more heroes to th' infernal shade,
 Drag off the car where Rhesus' armour lay,
 Or leave with manly force, and lift away.
 While unresolv'd the son of Tydeus stands,
 Pallas appears, and thus her chief commands :

59

' Enough, my son ; from farther slaughter cease,
 ' Regard thy safety, and depart in peace ;
 ' Haste to the ships, the gotten spoils enjoy,
 ' Nor tempt too far the hostile gods of Troy.'

The voice divine confess'd the martial maid ;
 In haste he mounted, and her word obey'd ;
 The coursers fly before Ulysses' bow,
 Swift as the wind, and white as winter snow.

600

Not unobserv'd they pass'd : the god of light
 Had watch'd his Troy, and mark'd Minerva's flight,
 Saw Tydeus' son with heavenly succour bless'd,
 And vengeful anger fill'd his sacred breast.

605

Swift to the Trojan camp descends the power,
 And wakes Hippocoön in the morning hour,
 (On Rhesus' side accustom'd to attend,
 A faithful kinsman and instructive friend.)

He rose, and saw the field deform'd with blood,
 An empty space where late the coursers stood,
 The yet warm Thracians panting on the coast ;
 For each he wept, but for his Rhesus most.

610

Now, while on Rhesus' name he calls in vain,
 The gathering tumult spreads o'er all the plain ;
 On heaps the Trojans rush, with wild affright,
 And wondering view the slaughter of the night.

615

Meanwhile the chiefs arriving at the shade
 Where late the spoils of Hector's spy were laid,
 Ulysses stopp'd ; to him Tydides bore
 The trophy, dropping yet with Dolon's gore :
 Then mounts again ; again their nimble feet
 The coursers ply, and thunder towards the fleet.

620

Old Nestor first perceiv'd th' approaching sound,
 Bespeaking thus the Grecian peers around :

625

' Methinks the noise of trampling steeds I hear,
 ' Thickening this way, and gathering on my ear ;
 ' Perhaps some horses of the Trojan breed

' (So may, ye gods ! my pious hopes succeed)

' The great Tydides and Ulysses bear,

630

' Return'd triumphant with this prize of war.

' Yet much I fear (ah may that fear be vain !)

' The chiefs outnumber'd by the Trojan train ;

- 'Perhaps, e'en now pursued, they seek the shore ;
 'Or, oh ! perhaps those heroes are no more.' 635
 Scarcely had he spoke, when lo ! the chiefs appear,
 And spring to earth ; the Greeks dismiss their fear :
 With words of friendship and extended hands
 They greet the kings ; and Nestor first demands :
 ' Say thou, whose praises all our host proclaim, 640
 ' Thou living glory of the Grecian name !
 ' Say, whence these coursers ? by what chance bestow'd,
 ' The spoil of foes, or present of a god ?
 ' Not those fair steeds so radiant and so gay,
 ' That draw the burning chariot of the day, 645
 ' Old as I am, to age I scorn to yield,
 ' And daily mingle in the martial field ;
 ' But sure till now no coursers struck my sight
 ' Like these, conspicuous through the ranks of fight.
 ' Some god, I deem, conferr'd the glorious prize, 650
 ' Bless'd as ye are, and favourites of the skies :
 ' The care of him who bids the thunder roar,
 ' And her, whose fury bathes the world with gore.'
 ' Father ! not so : (sage Ithacus rejoin'd,)
 ' The gifts of heaven are of a nobler kind, 655
 ' Of Thracian lineage are the steeds ye view,
 ' Whose hostile king the brave Tydides slew ;
 ' Sleeping he died, with all his guards around,
 ' And twelve beside lay gasping on the ground.
 ' These other spoils from conquer'd Dolon came, 660
 ' A wretch, whose swiftness was his only fame ;
 ' By Hector sent our forces to explore,
 ' He now lies headless on the sandy shore.'
 Then o'er the trench the bounding coursers flew ;
 The joyful Greeks with loud acclaim pursue. 665
 Straight to 'Tydides' high pavilion borne,
 The matchless steeds his ample stalls adorn :
 The neighing coursers their new fellows greet,
 And the full racks are heap'd with generous wheat.
 But Dolon's armour to his ships convey'd, 670
 High on the painted stern Ulysses laid,
 A trophy destin'd to the blue-eyed maid.
 Now from nocturnal sweat, and sanguine stain,
 They cleanse their bodies in the neighbouring main :
 Then in the polish'd bath, refresh'd from toil, 675
 Their joints they supple with dissolving oil,
 In due repast indulge the genial hour,
 And first to Pallas the libations pour :
 They sit rejoicing in her aid divine,
 And the crown'd goblet foams with floods of wine. 680

BOOK XI.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE THIRD BATTLE, AND THE ACTS OF AGAMEMNON.

Agamemnon, having armed himself, leads the Grecians to battle; Hector prepares the Trojans to receive them: while Jupiter, Juno, and Minerva, give the signals of war. Agamemnon bears all before him; and Hector is commanded by Jupiter (who sends Iris for that purpose) to decline the engagement, till the king should be wounded and retire from the field. He then makes a great slaughter of the enemy; Ulysses and Diomedes put a stop to him for a time; but the latter, being wounded by Paris, is obliged to desert his companion, who is encompassed by the Trojans, wounded, and in the utmost danger, till Menelaus and Ajax rescue him. Hector comes against Ajax, but that hero alone opposes multitudes and rallies the Greeks. In the meantime Machaon, in the other wing of the army, is pierced with an arrow by Paris, and carried from the fight in Nestor's chariot. Achilles (who overlooked the action from his ship) sends Patroclus to inquire which of the Greeks was wounded in that manner. Nestor entertains him in his tent with an account of the accidents of the day, and a long recital of some former wars which he had remembered, tending to put Patroclus upon persuading Achilles to fight for his countrymen, or at least to permit him to do it clad in Achilles' armour. Patroclus in his return meets Eurypylus also wounded, and assists in that distress.

This book opens with the eight-and-twentieth day of the poem, and the same day, with its various actions and adventures, is extended through the twelfth, thirteenth, fourteenth, fifteenth, sixteenth, seventeenth, and part of the eighteenth books. The scene lies in the field near the monument of Ilus.

THE saffron morn, with early blushes spread,
 Now rose refulgent from Tithonus' bed;
 With new-born day to gladden mortal sight,
 And gild the courts of heaven with sacred light:
 When baleful Eris, sent by Jove's command, 5
 The torch of discord blazing in her hand,
 Through the red skies her bloody sign extends,
 And, wrapp'd in tempests, o'er the fleet descends.
 High on Ulysses' bark her horrid stand
 She took, and thunder'd through the seas and land. 10
 E'en Ajax and Achilles heard the sound,
 Whose ships, remote, the guarded navy bound.
 Thence the black fury through the Grecian throng
 With horror sounds the loud Orthian song:<sup>1</sup>

<sup>1</sup> This is a kind of Odaic song, invented and sung on purpose to fire

The navy shakes, and at the dire alarms	15
Each bosom boils, each warrior starts to arms.
No more they sigh inglorious to return,
But breathe revenge, and for the combat burn.
The king of men his hardy host inspires
With loud command, with great example fires :	20
Himself first rose, himself before the rest
His mighty limbs in radiant armour dress'd.
And first he cas'd his manly legs around
In shining greaves, with silver buckles bound :
The beaming cuirass next adorn'd his breast,	25
The same which once King Cinyras possess'd :
(The fame of Greece and her assembled host
Had reach'd that monarch on the Cyprian coast ;
'Twas then, the friendship of the chief to gain,
This glorious gift he sent, nor sent in vain.)	30
Ten rows <sup>2</sup> of azure steel the work infold,
Twice ten of tin, and twelve of ductile gold ;
Three glittering dragons to the gorget rise,
Whose imitated scales against the skies
Reflected various light, and arching bow'd.	35
Like coloured rainbows o'er a showery cloud ;
Above's wondrous bow, of three celestial dyes,
Reed as a sign to man amid the skies.)
A radiant baldrick, o'er his shoulder tied,
Sustain'd the sword that glitter'd at his side :	40
Gold was the hilt, a silver sheath encas'd
The shining blade, and golden hangers grac'd.
A buckler's mighty orb was next display'd,
Around the warrior cast a dreadful shade ;
Rings of brass its ample brim surround,	45
Twice ten bosses the bright convex crown'd ;
Dread Gorgon frown'd upon its field,
Dread terrors fill th' expressive shield :
A concave hung a silver thong,
And a mimic serpent creeps along,	50

the soul to noble deeds in war. Such was that of Timotheus before Alexander the Great, which had such an influence upon him, that he leaped from his seat, and laid hold on his arms. EUSTATHIUS. Pope.

<sup>2</sup> Cowper calls these rows "rods," and says that the arrangement of them is supposed to have been alternate first a rod of steel, then one of tin, after that a golden one, then again a rod of tin, and again a rod of steel. "Two of gold," he adds, "according to this disposition, remain unaccounted for, which are supposed to have been both attached to the superior part of the corslet where it joined the neck."

His azure length in easy waves extends,
 Till in three heads th' embroider'd monster ends.
 Last o'er his brows his fourfold helm he placed,
 With nodding horse-hair formidably graced ;
 And in his hands two steely javelins wield, 55
 That blaze to heaven, and lighten all the fields.
 That instant Juno and the martial maid
 In happy thunders promis'd Greece their aid ;
 High o'er the chief they clash'd their arms in air,
 And, leaning from the clouds, expect the war. 60
 Close to the limits of the trench and mound,
 The fiery coursers, to their chariots bound,
 The squires restrain'd ; the foot, with those who wield
 The lighter arms, rush forward to the field.
 To second these, in close array combin'd, 65
 The squadrons spread their sable wings behind.
 Now shouts and tumults wake the tardy sun,
 As with the light the warriors' toils begun ;
 E'en Jove, whose thunder spoke his wrath, distill'd
 Red drops of blood o'er all the fatal field ; 70
 The woes of men unwilling to survey,
 And all the slaughters that must stain the day.
 Near Ilus' tomb in order ranged around,
 The Trojan lines possess'd the rising ground.
 There wise Polydamas and Hector stood ; 75
 Æneas, honour'd as a guardian god ;
 Bold Polybus, Agenor the divine ;
 The brother-warriors of Antenor's line ;
 With youthful Acamas, whose beauteous face,
 And fair proportions, match'd th' ethereal race. 80
 Great Hector, cover'd with his spacious shield,
 Plies all the troops, and orders all the field.
 As the red star now shews his sanguine fires,
 Through the dark clouds, and now in night retires ;
 Thus through the ranks appear'd the godlike man, 85
 Plung'd in the rear, or blazing in the van ;
 While streamy sparkles, restless as he flies,
 Flash from his arms, as lightning from the skies.
 As sweating reapers in some wealthy field,
 Ranged in two bands, their crooked weapons wield, 90
 Bear down the furrows till their labours meet ;<sup>3</sup>
 Thick fall the heapy harvests at their feet :

<sup>3</sup> Such was their manner of reaping. Two reapers or more, beginning on opposite sides of the field, persevered till they met in the middle furrow.

So Greece and Troy the field of war divide,
 And falling ranks are strew'd on every side.
 None stoop'd a thought to base inglorious flight; 95
 But horse to horse and man to man they fight.
 Not rabid wolves more fierce contest their prey;
 Each wounds, each bleeds, but none resign the day.
 Discord with joy the scene of death describes,
 And drinks large slaughter at her sanguine eyes: 100
 Discord alone, of all th' immortal train,
 Swells the red horrors of this direful plain:
 The gods in peace their golden mansions fill,
 Ranged in bright order on th' Olympian hill;
 But general murmurs told their griefs above, 105
 And each accus'd the partial will of Jove.
 Meanwhile apart, superior, and alone,
 Th' eternal monarch, on his awful throne,
 Wrapp'd in the blaze of boundless glory sat:
 And, fix'd, fulfill'd the just decrees of fate. 110
 On earth he turn'd his all-considering eyes,
 And mark'd the spot where Ilion's towers arise;
 The sea with ships, the field with armies spread,
 The victor's rage, the dying, and the dead.
 Thus while the morning beams increasing bright 115
 O'er heaven's pure azure spread the glowing light,
 Commutual death the fate of war confounds,
 Each adverse battle gor'd with equal wounds.
 But now (what time in some sequester'd vale
 The weary woodman spreads his sparing meal, 120
 When his tir'd arms refuse the axe to rear,
 And claim a respite from the sylvan war;
 But not till half the prostrate forests lay
 Stretch'd in long ruin, and expos'd to day;
 Then, nor till then, the Greeks' impulsive might 125
 Pierced the black phalanx, and let in the light.
 Great Agamemnon then the slaughter led,
 And slew Bionor at his people's head;
 Whose squire Oileus, with a sudden spring,
 Leap'd from the chariot to revenge his king, 130
 But in his front he felt the fatal wound,
 Which pierc'd his brain, and stretch'd him on the ground:
 Atrides spoil'd, and left them on the plain:
 Vain was their youth, their glittering armour vain:
 Now soil'd with dust, and naked to the sky, 135
 Their snowy limbs and beauteous bodies lie.
 Two sons of Priam next to battle move,
 The product one of marriage, one of love;

In the same car the brother warriors ride,
 This took the charge to combat, that to guide : 140
 Far other task, than when they went to keep,
 On Ida's tops, their father's fleecy sheep !
 These on the mountains once Achilles found,
 And captive led, with pliant osiers bound ;
 Then to their sire for ample sums restor'd ; 145
 But now to perish by Atrides' sword :
 Pierc'd in the breast the base-born Isus bleeds :
 Cleft through the head, his brother's fate succeeds.
 Swift to the spoil the hasty victor falls, c 150
 And, stripp'd, their features to his mind recalls.
 The Trojans see the youths untimely die,
 But helpless tremble for themselves, and fly.
 So when a lion, ranging o'er the lawns,
 Finds, on some grassy lair, the couching fawns,
 Their bones he cracks, their reeking vitals draws, 155
 And grinds the quivering flesh with bloody jaws ;
 The frightened hind beholds, and dares not stay.
 But swift through rustling thickets bursts her way ;
 All drown'd in sweat the panting mother flies,
 And the big tears roll trickling from her eyes. 160
 Amidst the tumult of the routed train,
 The sons of false Antimachus were slain,
 He, who for bribes his faithless counsels sold,
 And voted Helen's stay for Paris' gold.<sup>4</sup>
 Atrides mark'd, as these their safety sought, 165
 And slew the children for the father's fault ;
 Their headstrong horse unable to restrain,
 They shook with fear, and dropp'd the silken rein ;
 Then in their chariot on their knees they fall,
 And thus with lifted hands for mercy call : * 170
 ' O spare our youth, and, for the life we owe,
 ' Antimachus shall copious gifts bestow ;
 ' Soon as he hears, that, not in battle slain,
 ' The Grecian ships his captive sons detain,
 ' Large heaps of brass in ransom shall be told, 175
 ' And steel well-temper'd, and persuasive gold.'
 These words, attended with a flood of tears,
 The youths address'd to unrelenting ears :
 The vengeful monarch gave this stern reply :
 ' If from Antimachus ye spring, ye die : 180
 ' The daring wretch who once in council stood
 ' To shed Ulysses' and my brother's blood,
 ' For proffer'd peace ! and sues his seed for grace ?
 ' No, die, and pay the forfeit of your race.'
<sup>4</sup> This dishonesty of Antimachus has not been mentioned by Homer before.

This said, Pisander from the car he cast, 185
 And pierced his breast: supine he breath'd his last.
 His brother leap'd to earth; but, as he lay,
 The trenchant faulchion lopp'd his hands away:
 His sever'd head was toss'd among the throng,
 And rolling drew a bloody trail along. 190
 Then, where the thickest fought, the victor flew;
 The king's example all his Greeks pursue.
 Now by the foot the flying foot were slain,
 Horse trod by horse lay foaming on the plain.
 From the dry fields thick clouds of dust arise, 195
 Shade the black host, and intercept the skies.
 The brass-hoof'd steeds tumultuous plunge and bound,
 And the thick thunder beats the labouring ground.
 Still, slaughtering on, the king of men proceeds;
 The distanced army wonders at his deeds. 200
 As when the winds with raging flames conspire,
 And o'er the forests roll the flood of fire,
 In blazing heaps the grove's old honours fall,
 And one refulgent ruin-levels all:
 Before Atrides' rage so sinks the foe, 205
 Whole squadrons vanish, and proud heads lie low.
 The steeds fly trembling from his waving sword;
 And many a car, now lighten'd of its lord,
 Wide o'er the fields with guideless fury rolls,
 Breaking their ranks, and crushing out their souls: 210
 While his keen faulchion drinks the warriors' lives;
 More grateful now to vultures than their wives!
 Perhaps great Hector then had found his fate,
 But Jove and Destiny prolong'd his date.
 Safe from the darts, the care of heaven, he stood, 215
 Amidst alarms, and death, and dust, and blood.
 Now past the tomb where ancient Ilus lay,
 Through the mid field the routed urge their way:
 Where the wild figs th' adjoining summit crown,
 That path they take, and speed to reach the town. 220
 As swift Atrides with loud shouts pursued,
 Hot with his toil, and bath'd in hostile blood.
 Now near the beech-tree, and the Scæan gates,
 The hero halts, and his associates waits.
 Meanwhile, on every side, around the plain, 225
 Dispers'd, disorder'd, fly the Trojan train.
 So flies a herd of bees, that hear dismay'd
 The lion's roaring through the midnight shade:
 On heaps they tumble with successful haste:
 The savage seizes, draws, and rends the last: 230

Not with less fury stern Atrides flew,
Still press'd the rout, and still the hindmost slew ;
Hurl'd from their cars the bravest chiefs are kill'd,
And rage, and death, and carnage, load the field.

Now storms the victor at the Trojan wall ; 235
Surveys the towers, and meditates their fall.
But Jove, descending, shook th' Idæan hills,
And down their summits pour'd a hundred rills :
, Th' unkindled lightning in his hand he took,
And thus the many-colour'd maid bespoke : 240

' Iris, with haste thy golden wings display,
' To godlike Hector this our word convey.
' While Agamemnon wastes the ranks around,
' Fights in the front, and bathes with blood the ground,
' Bid him give way ; but issue forth commands, 245
' And trust the war to less important hands :
' But when, or wounded by the spear, or dart,
' That chief shall mount his chariot and depart :
' Then Jove shall string his arm, and fire his breast,
' Then to her ships shall flying Greece be press'd. 250
' Till to the main the burning sun descend,
' And sacred night her awful shade extend.'

He spoke, and Iris at his word obey'd ;
On wings of winds descends the various maid.
The chief she found amidst the ranks of war, 255
Close to the bulwarks, on his glittering car.
The goddess then : ' O son of Priam, hear !
' From Jove I come, and his high mandate bear.
' While Agamemnon wastes the ranks around,
' Fights in the front, and bathes with blood the ground, 260
' Abstain from fight, yet issue forth commands,
' And trust the war to less important hands :
' But when, or wounded by the spear or dart,
' The chief shall mount his chariot, and depart ;
' Then Jove shall string thy arm, and fire thy breast, 265
' Then to her ships shall flying Greece be press'd,
' Till to the main the burning sun descend,
' And sacred night her awful shade extend.'

She said, and vanish'd : Hector with a bound,
Springs from his chariot on the trembling ground, 270
In clanging arms : he grasps in either hand
A pointed lance, and speeds from band to band ;
Revives their ardour, turns their steps from flight,
And wakes anew the dying flames of fight.
They stand to arms ! the Greeks their onset dare, 275
Condense their powers, and wait the coming war.

New force, new spirit, to each breast returns ;
 The fight renew'd, with fiercer fury burns :
 The king leads on ; all fix on him their eye,
 And learn, from him, to conquer, or to die. 280

Ye sacred nine, celestial Muses ! tell,
 Who faced him first, and by his prowess fell ?
 The great Iphidamas, the bold and young :
 From sage Antenor and Theano sprung ;
 Whom from his youth his grandsire Cisseus bred, 285
 And nurs'd in Thrace, where snowy flocks are fed.

Scarcely did the down his rosy cheeks invest,
 And early honour warm his generous breast,
 When the kind sire consign'd his daughter's charms
 (Theano's sister) to his youthful arms :<sup>5</sup> 290

But, call'd by glory to the wars of 'Troy,
 He leaves untasted the first fruits of joy ;
 From his lov'd bride departs with melting eyes,
 And swift to aid his dearer country flies.

With twelve black ships he reach'd Percopé's<sup>6</sup> strand, 295
 Thence took the long laborious march by land.

Now fierce for fame, before the ranks he springs,
 Towering in arms, and braves the king of kings.
 Atrides first discharg'd the missive spear ;
 The Trojan stoop'd, the javelin pass'd in air. 300

Then near the corslet, at the monarch's heart,
 With all his strength the youth directs his dart :
 But the broad belt, with plates of silver bound,
 The point rebated, and repell'd the wound.

Encumber'd with the dart,<sup>7</sup> Atrides stands, 305
 Till, grasp'd with force, he wrench'd it from his hands.

At once his weighty sword discharg'd a wound
 Full on his neck, that fell'd him to the ground.
 Stretch'd in the dust th' unhappy warrior lies,
 And sleep eternal seals his swimming eyes. 310

Oh worthy better fate ! oh early slain !

Thy country's friend ; and virtuous, though in vain !
 No more the youth shall join his consort's side,
 At once a virgin, and at once a bride !

<sup>5</sup> That the reader may not be shocked at the marriage of Iphidamas with his mother's sister, it may not be amiss to observe, from Eustathius, that consanguinity was no impediment in Greece in the days of Homer ; nor is Iphidamas singular in this kind of marriage, for Diomed was married to his own aunt as well as he. Pope. <sup>6</sup> On the banks of the Hellespont. He landed at that city, because, the Greeks being masters of the sea, he could not with security to his fleet conduct it farther. Cooper.

<sup>7</sup> That is, the lance, which Iphidamas still held.

No more with presents her embraces meet, 315
 Or lay the spoils of conquest at her feet,
 On whom his passion, lavish of his store,
 Bestow'd so much, and vainly promis'd more !
 Unwept, uncover'd, on the plain he lay,
 While the proud victor bore his arms away. 320
 Coön, Antenor's eldest hope, was nigh :
 Tears at the sight came starting from his eye,
 While pierc'd with grief the much-lov'd youth he view'd,
 And the pale features now deform'd with blood.
 Then with his spear, unseen, his time he took, 325
 Aim'd at the king, and near his elbow struck.
 The thrilling steel transpierced the brawny part,
 And through his arm stood forth the barbed dart.
 Surpris'd the monarch feels, yet void of fear
 On Coön rushes with his lifted spear : 330
 His brother's corpse the pious Trojan draws,
 And calls his country to assert his cause,
 Defends him breathless on the sanguine field,
 And o'er the body spreads his ample shield.
 Atrides, marking an unguarded part, 335
 Transfix'd the warrior with his brazen dart ;
 Prone on his brother's bleeding breast he lay
 The monarch's faulchion lopp'd his head away :
 The social shades the same dark journey go,
 And join each other in the realms below. 340
 The vengeful victor rages round the fields,
 With every weapon art or fury yields :
 By the long lance, the sword, or ponderous stone,
 Whole ranks are broken, and whole troops o'erthrown.
 This, while, yet warm, distill'd the purple flood ; 345
 But when the wound grew stiff with clotted blood,
 Then grinding tortures his strong bosom rend ;
 Less keen those darts the fierce Ilythiæ<sup>a</sup> send,
 (The powers that cause the teeming matron's throes,
 Sad mothers of unutterable woes!) 350
 Stung with the smart, all panting with the pain,
 He mounts the car, and gives his squire the rein :
 Then with a voice which fury made more strong,
 And pain augmented, thus exhorts the throng :
 ' O friends ! O Greeks ! assert your honours won ; 355
 Proceed, and finish what this arm begun :
 ' Lo ! angry Jove forbids your chief to stay,
 And envies half the glories of the day.'
 He said, the driver whirls his lengthful thong :
 The horses fly, the chariot smokes along. 360

<sup>a</sup> The goddesses that preside over child-birth.

Clouds from their nostrils the fierce coursers blow,
 And from their sides the foam descends in snow ;
 Shot through the battle in a moment's space,
 The wounded monarch at his tent they place.

No sooner Hector saw the king retir'd,
 But thus his Trojans and his aids he fir'd : 365

' Hear, all ye Dardan, all ye Lycian race !
 ' Fam'd in close fight, and dreadful face to face ;
 ' Now call to mind your ancient trophies won,
 ' Your great forefathers' virtues, and your own. 370
 ' Behold, the general flies, deserts his powers !
 ' Lo, Jove himself declares the conquest ours !
 ' Now on yon ranks impel your foaming steeds ;
 ' And, sure of glory, dare immortal deeds.'

With words like these the fiery chief alarms 375
 His fainting host, and every bosom warms.
 As the bold hunter cheers his hounds to tear
 The brindled lion, or the tusky bear,
 With voice and hand provokes their doubting heart,
 And springs the foremost with his lifted dart : 380
 So godlike Hector prompts his troops to dare :
 Nor prompts alone, but leads himself the war.

On the black body of the foes he pours ;
 As from the cloud's deep bosom, swell'd with showers.
 A sudden storm the purple ocean sweeps, 385
 Drives the wild waves, and tosses all the deeps.
 Say, Muse ! when Jove the Trojan's glory crown'd.
 Beneath his arm what heroes bit the ground ?

Assæus, Dolops, and Autonous died,
 Opites next was added to their side, 390

Then brave Hipponous, fam'd in many a fight,
 Opheltius, Orus, sunk to endless night,
 Asynnus, Agelaus ; all chiefs of name :
 The rest were vulgar deaths, unknown to fame.

As when a western whirlwind, charged with storms, 395
 Dispels the gather'd clouds that Notus forms ;
 The gust continued, violent, and strong,

Rolls sable clouds in heaps on heaps along ;
 Now to the skies the foaming billows rears,
 Now breaks the surge, and wide the bottom bars : 400
 Thus raging Hector, with resistless hands,
 O'erturns, confounds, and scatters all their bands.

Now the last ruin the whole host appals ;
 Now Greece had trembled in her wooden walls ;
 But wise Ulysses call'd Tydides forth, 405
 His soul rekindled, and awak'd his worth :

' And stand we deedless, O eternal shame !
 ' Till Hector's arm involve the ships in flame ?
 ' Haste, let us join, and combat side by side.'
 The warrior thus, and thus the friend replied : 410
 ' No martial toil I shun, no danger fear ;
 ' Let Hector come ; I wait his fury here.
 ' But Jove with conquest crowns the Trojan train ;
 ' And, Jove our foe, all human force is vain.'
 He sigh'd ; but, sighing, rais'd his vengeful steel, 415
 And from his car the proud Thymbræus fell :
 Molion, the charioteer, pursued his lord,
 His death ennobled by Ulysses' sword
 There slain, they left them in eternal night ;
 Then plunged amidst the thickest ranks of fight. 420
 So two wild boars outstrip the following hounds,
 Then swift revert, and wounds return for wounds.
 Stern Hector's conquests in the middle plain
 Stood check'd awhile, and Greece respir'd again.
 The sons of Merops shone amidst the war ; 425
 Towering they rode in one refulgent car ;
 In deep prophetic arts their father skill'd,
 Had warn'd his children from the Trojan field ;
 Fate urged them on ; the father warn'd in vain,
 They rush'd to fight, and perish'd on the plain ! 430
 Their breasts no more the vital spirit warms ;
 The stern Tydides strips their shining arms.
 Hypirochus by great Ulysses dies,
 And rich Hippodamus becomes his prize.
 Great Jove from Ide with slaughter fills his sight, 435
 And level hangs the doubtful scale of fight.
 By Tydeus' lance Agastrophus was slain,
 The far-fam'd hero of Pæonian strain ;<sup>9</sup>
 Wing'd with his fears, on foot he strove to fly.
 His steeds too distant, and the foe too nigh ; 440
 Through broken orders, swifter than the wind,
 He fled, but, flying, left his life behind.
 Thus Hector sees, as his experienced eyes
 Traverse the files, and to the rescue flies ;
 Shouts, as he pass'd, the crystal regions rend, 445
 And moving armies on his march attend.
 Great Diomed himself was seiz'd with fear,
 And thus bespoke his brother of the war :

<sup>9</sup> This is a strange verse. The following attempt is literal :

Then in the gain close wounds Tydides' spear
 Agastrophus the hero, Pæon's son. Wakefield.

' Mark how this way yon bending squadrons yield !
 ' The storm rolls on, and Hector rules the field : 450
 ' Here stand his utmost force'—The warrior said :
 Swift at the word his ponderous javelin fled ;
 Nor miss'd its aim, but, where the plumage danc'd,
 Raz'd the smooth cone, and thence obliquely glanc'd.
 Safe in his helm (the gift of Phœbus' hands) 455
 Without a wound the Trojan hero stands ;
 But yet so stunn'd, that, staggering on the plain,
 His arm and knee his sinking bulk sustain ;
 O'er his dim sight the misty vapours rise,
 And a short darkness shades his swimming eyes. 460
 Tydides follow'd to regain his lance ;
 While Hector rose, recover'd from the trance,
 Remounts his car, and herds amidst the crowd ;
 The Greek pursues him, and exults aloud :
 ' Once more thank Phœbus for thy forfeit breath, 465
 ' Or thank that swiftness which outstrips the death.
 ' Well by Apollo are thy prayers repaid,
 ' And oft that partial power has lent his aid.
 ' Thou shalt not long the death deserv'd withstand,
 ' If any god assist Tydides' hand. 470
 ' Fly then, inglorious ! but thy flight, this day,
 ' Whole hecatombs of Trojan ghosts shall pay.'
 Him, while he triumph'd, Paris eyed from far,
 (The spouse of Helen, the fair cause of war):
 Around the fields his feather'd shafts he sent, 475
 From ancient Ilus' ruin'd monument ;
 Behind the column placed, he bent his bow,
 And wing'd an arrow at th' unwary foe :
 Just as he stoop'd, Agastrophus's crest
 To seize, and draw the corslet from his breast, 480
 The bow-string twang'd ; nor flew the shaft in vain,
 But pierc'd his foot, and nail'd it to the plain.
 The laughing Trojan, with a joyful spring,
 Leaps from his ambush, and insults the king :
 ' He bleeds !' (he cries) ' some god has sped my dart ; 485
 ' Would the same god had fix'd it in his heart !
 ' So Troy, reliev'd from that wide-wasting hand,
 ' Should breathe from slaughter, and in combat stand,
 ' Whose sons now tremble at his darted spear,
 ' As scatter'd lambs the rushing lion fear. 490
 He dauntless thus : ' Thou conqueror of the fair,
 ' Thou woman-warrior with the curling hair ;
 ' Vain archer ! trusting to the distant dart,
 ' Unskill'd in arms to act a manly part !

'Thou hast but done what boys or women can ; 495
 'Such hands may wound, but not incense a man.
 'Nor boast the scratch thy feeble arrow gave,
 'A coward's weapon never hurts the brave.
 'Not so this dart, which thou may'st one day feel :
 'Fate wings its flight, and death is on the steel. 500
 'Where this but lights, some noble life expires,
 'Its touch makes orphans, bathes the cheeks of sires,
 'Steeps earth in purple, gluts the birds of air,
 'And leaves such objects as distract the fair.'
 Ulysses hastens with a trembling heart, 505
 Before him steps, and bending draws the dart :
 Forth flows the blood ; an eager pang succeeds :
 Tydides mounts, and to the navy speeds.
 Now on the field Ulysses stands alone,
 The Greeks all fled, the Trojans pouring on : 510
 But stands collected in himself and whole.
 And questions thus his own unconquer'd soul :
 'What farther subterfuge, what hopes remain ?
 'What shame, inglorious if I quit the plain ?
 'What danger, singly if I stand the ground. 515
 'My friends all scatter'd, all the foes around ?
 'Yet wherefore doubtful ? let this truth suffice :
 'The brave meets danger, and the coward flies ;
 'To die, or conquer, proves a hero's heart ;
 'And, knowing this, I know a soldier's part.' 520
 Such thoughts revolving in his careful breast,
 Near, and more near, the shady cohort's press'd ;
 These, in the warrior, their own fate enclose :
 And round him deep the steely circle grows.
 So fares a boar, whom all the troop surrounds 525
 Of shouting huntsmen, and of clamorous hounds ;
 He grinds his ivory tusks ; he foams with ire ;
 His sanguine eyeballs glare with living fire ;
 By these, by those, on every part is plied ;
 And the red slaughter spreads on every side. 530
 Pierc'd through the shoulder, first Deïopis fell ;
 Next Ennomus and Thoon sunk to hell ;
 Chersidamas, beneath the navel thrust,
 Falls prone to earth, and grasps the bloody dust.
 Charops, the son of Hippasus, was near ; 535
 Ulysses reach'd him with the fatal spear ;
 But to his aid his brother Socus flies,
 Socus, the brave, the generous, and the wise :
 Near as he drew, the warrior thus began :
 'O great Ulysses, much-enduring man ! 540

' Not deeper skill'd in every martial slight,
 ' Than worn to toils, and active in the fight !
 ' This day two brothers shall thy conquest grace,
 ' And end at once the great Hippasian race,
 ' Or thou beneath this lance must press the field.' 515
 He said, and forceful pierc'd his spacious shield ;
 Through the strong brass the ringing javelin thrown,
 Plough'd half his side, and bar'd it to the bone.
 By Pallas' care, the spear, though deep infix'd,
 Stopp'd short of life, nor with his entrails mix'd, 550
 The wound not mortal wise Ulysses knew,
 Then furious thus (but first some steps withdrew):
 ' Unhappy man ! whose death our hands shall grace !
 ' Fate calls thee hence, and finish'd is thy race.
 ' No longer check my conquests on the foe : 555
 ' But, pierc'd by this, to endless darkness go,
 ' And add one spectre to the realms below !'
 He spoke, while Socus, seiz'd with sudden fright,
 Trembling gave way, and turn'd his back to flight,
 Between his shoulders pierc'd the following dart, 560
 And held its passago through the panting heart.
 Wide in his breast appear'd the grizzly wound ;
 He falls : his armour rings against the ground.
 Then thus Ulysses, gazing on the slain :
 ' Fam'd son of Hippasus ! there press the plain ; 565
 ' There ends thy narrow span assign'd by fate :
 ' Heaven owes Ulysses yet a longer date.
 ' Ah wretch ! no father shall thy corpse compose,
 ' Thy dying eyes no tender mother close,
 ' But hungry birds shall tear those balls away, 570
 ' And hovering vultures scream around their prey
 ' Mc Greece shall honour, when I meet my doom,
 ' With solemn funerals, and a lasting tomb.'
 Then, raging with intolerable smart,
 He writhes his body, and extracts the dart. 575
 The dart a tide of spouting gore pursued,
 And gladden'd Troy with sight of hostile blood.
 Now troops on troops the fainting chief invade ;
 Forc'd he recedes, and loudly calls for aid.
 Thrice to its pitch his lofty voice he rears ; 580
 The well-known voice thrice Menelaus hears ;
 Alarm'd, to Ajax Telamon he cried,
 Who shares his labours, and defends his side :
 ' O friend ! Ulysses' shouts invade my ear ;
 ' Distress'd he seems, and no assistance near : 585
 ' Strong as he is, yet, one oppos'd to all,
 ' Oppress'd by multitudes, the best may fall.

'Greece, robb'd of him, must bid her host despair,
'And feel a loss not ages can repair.'

Then, where the cry directs, his course he bends ; 590
Great Ajax like the god of war, attends.

The prudent chief in sore distress they found,
With bands of furious Trojans compass'd round,
As when some huntsman, with a flying spear,
From the blind thicket wounds a stately deer ; 595
Down his cleft side while fresh the blood distils,
He bounds aloft, and scuds from hills to hills :

'Till, life's warm vapour issuing through the wound,
Wild mountain-wolves the fainting beast surround ;
Just as their jaws his prostrate limbs invade,
The lion rushes through the woodland shade ;
The wolves, though hungry, scour dispers'd away ;
The lordly savage vindicates his prey.

Ulysses thus, unconquer'd by his pains,
A single warrior, half a host sustains ; 600

But soon as Ajax heaves his tower-like shield,
The scatter'd crowds fly frighted o'er the field :
Atides' arm the sinking hero stays,

And, sav'd from numbers, to his car conveys. 610

Victorious Ajax plies the routed crew ;
And first Doryclus, Priam's son, he slew :
On strong Pandocus next inflicts a wound,
And lays Lysander bleeding on the ground.

As when a torrent, swell'd with wintry rains,
Pours from the mountains o'er the delug'd plains, 615
And pines and oaks, from their foundation torn,
A country's ruins ! to the seas are borne :

Fierce Ajax thus o'erwhelms the yielding throng ;
Men, steeds, and chariots, roll in heaps along.

But Hector, from this scene of slaughter far, 620
Rag'd on the left, and rul'd the tide of war :

Loud groans proclaim his progress through the plain,
And deep Scamander swells with heaps of slain.

There Nestor and Idomeneus oppose
The warrior's fury ; there the battle glows ; 625

There fierce on foot, or from the chariot's height,
His sword deforms the beauteous ranks of fight.

The spouse of Helen, dealing darts around,
Had pierc'd Machaon with a distant wound :
In his right shoulder the broad shaft appear'd, 630

And trembling Greece for her physician fear'd.
To Nestor then Idomeneus begun :

'Glory of Greece, old Neleus' valiant son !

'Ascend thy chariot, haste with speed away,
'And great Machaon to the ships convey. 635
'A wise physician, skill'd our wounds to heal,
'Is more than armies to the public weal.'

Old Nestor mounts the seat. Beside him rode
The wounded offspring of the healing god.
He lends the lash; the steeds with sounding feet 640
Shake the dry field, and thunder toward the fleet.

But now Cebriones, from Hector's car,
Survey'd the various fortune of the war.
'While here' (he cried) 'the flying Greeks are slain
'Trojans on Trojans yonder load the plain. 645
'Before great Ajax, see the mingled throng
'Of men and chariots driven in heaps along!
'I know him well, distinguish'd o'er the field
'By the broad glittering of the sevenfold shield.
'Thither, O Hector, thither urge thy steeds, 650
'There danger calls, and there the combat bleeds;
'There horse and foot in mingled deaths unite,
'And groans of slaughter mix with shouts of fight.'

Thus having spoke, the driver's lash resounds;
Swift through the ranks the rapid chariot bounds; 655
Stung by the stroke, the coursers scour the fields,
O'er heaps of carcases, and hills of shields.

The horses' hoofs are bath'd in heroes' gore,
And, dashing, purple all the car before:
The groaning axle sable drops distils, 660
And mangled carnage clogs the rapid wheels.
Here Hector, plunging through the thickest fight,
Broke the dark phalanx, and let in the light:

(By the long lance, the sword, or ponderous stone,
The ranks lie scatter'd, and the troops o'erthrown.) 665

Ajax he shuns, through all the dire debate,
And fears that arm whose force he felt so late.
But partial Jove, espousing Hector's part,
Shot heaven-bred horror through the Grecian's heart;
Confus'd, unnerv'd in Hector's presence grown, 670
Amaz'd he stood, with terrors not his own.

O'er his broad back his moony shield he threw,
And, glaring round, by tardy steps withdrew.
Thus the grim lion his retreat maintains,
Beset with watchful dogs and shouting swains, 675
Repuls'd by numbers from the nightly stalls,
Though rage impels him, and though hunger calls,
Long stands the showering darts and missile fires;
Then sourly slow th' indignant beast retires.

So turn'd stern Ajax, by whole hosts repell'd, 680
While his swoln heart at every step rebell'd.

As the slow beast, with heavy strength endued,
In some wide field by troops of boys pursued,
Though round his sides a wooden tempest rain,
Crops the tall harvest, and lays waste the plain, 685
Thick on his hide the hollow blows resound ;

The patient animal maintains his ground ;
Scarce from the field with all their efforts chas'd,
And stirs but slowly when he stirs at last.
On Ajax thus a weight of Trojans hung, 690

The strokes redoubled on his buckler rung ;
Coufiding now in bulky strength he stands,
Now turns, and backward bears the yielding bands ;
Now stiff recedes, yet hardly seems to fly,
And threats his followers with retorted eye. 695

Fix'd as the bar between two warring powers,
While hissing darts descend in iron showers .
In his broad buckler many a weapon stood,
Its surface bristled with a quivering wood ;
And many a javelin, guiltless on the plain. 700

Marks the dry dust, and thirsts for blood in vain.
But bold Eurypylus his aid imparts,
And dauntless springs beneath a cloud of darts ;
Whose eager javelin launch'd against the foe,
Great Apisaon felt the fatal blow ; 705

From his torn liver the red current flow'd,
And his slack knees desert their dying load.
The victor rushing to despoil the dead,
From Paris' bow a vengeful arrow fled :
Fix'd in his nervous thigh the weapon stood, 710
Fix'd was the point, but broken was the wood.

Back to the lines the wounded Greek retur'd,
Yet thus, retreating, his associates fir'd :
' What god, O Grecians ! has your hearts dismay'd ?
' Oh, turn to arms ; 'tis Ajax claims your aid. 715

' This hour he stands the mark of hostile rage,
' And this the last brave battle he shall wage :
' Haste, join your forces ; from the gloomy grave
' The warrior rescue, and your country save.

Thus urg'd the chief ; a generous troop appears, 720
Who spread their bucklers, and advance their spears,
To guard their wounded friend : while thus they stand
With pious care, great Ajax joins the band :
Each takes new courage at the hero's sight ;
The hero rallies and renews the fight. 725

Thus raged both armies like conflicting fires,
 While Nestor's chariot far from fight retires :
 His coursers steep'd in sweat, and stain'd with gore,
 The Greeks' preserver, great Machaon, bore.
 That hour, Achilles, from the topmost height 730
 Of his proud fleet, o'erlook'd the fields of fight ;
 His feasted eyes beheld around the plain
 The Grecian rout, the slaying, and the slain.
 His friend Machaon singled from the rest,
 A transient pity touch'd his vengeful breast. 735
 Straight to Menœtius' much-lov'd son he sent ;
 Graceful as Mars, Patroclus quits his tent :
 In evil hour ! then fate decreed his doom ;
 And fix'd the date of all his woes to come !
 ' Why calls my friend ? thy lov'd injunctions lay ; 740
 ' Whate'er thy will, Patroclus shall obey.'
 ' O first of friends !' (Pelides thus replied)
 ' Still at my heart, and ever at my side !
 ' The time is come, when yon despairing host
 ' Shall learn the value of the man they lost : 745
 ' Now at my knees the Greeks shall pour their moan,
 ' And proud Atrides tremble on his throne.
 ' Go now to Nestor, and from him be taught
 ' What wounded warrior late his chariot brought ?
 ' For, seen at distance, and but seen behind, 750
 ' His form recall'd Machaon to my mind ;
 ' Nor could I, through yon cloud, discern his face,
 ' The coursers pass'd me with so swift a pace.'
 The hero said. His friend obey'd with haste ;
 Through intermingled ships and tents he pass'd ; 755
 The chiefs descending from their car he found ;
 The panting steeds Eurymedon unbound.
 The warriors, standing on the breezy shore,
 To dry their sweat, and wash away the gore,
 Here paus'd a moment, while the gentle gale 760
 Convey'd that freshness the cool seas exhale ;
 Then to consult on farther methods went,
 And took their seats beneath the shady tent.
 The draught prescrib'd fair Hecamede prepares,
 Arsinous' daughter, graced with golden hairs ; 765
 (Whom to his aged arms, a royal slave, Greece, as the prize of Nestor's wisdom, gave ;)
 A table first with azure feet she placed ;
 Whose ample orb a brazen charger graced :
 - Honey new press'd, the sacred flower of wheat, 770
 And wholesome garlicks crown'd the savoury treat.

Next her white hand an antique goblet brings,
 A goblet sacred to the Pylian kings,
 From eldest times : emboss'd with studs of gold,
 Two feet support it, and four handles hold ; 775
 On each bright handle, bending o'er the brink,
 In sculptur'd gold, two turtles seem to drink :
 A massy weight, yet heav'd with ease by him,
 When the brisk nectar overlook'd the brim.
 Temper'd in this, the nymph of form divine 780
 Pours a large portion of the Pramnian wine ;
 With goat's-milk cheese a flavoured taste bestows,
 And last with flour the smiling surface strows.
 This for the wounded prince the dame prepares ;
 The cordial beverage reverend Nestor shares : 785
 Salubrious draughts the warrior's thirst allay,
 And pleasing conference beguiles the day.
 Meantime Patroclus, by Achilles sent,
 Unheard approach'd, and stood before the tent.
 Old Nestor, rising then, the hero led 790
 To his high seat ; the chief refus'd, and said :
 ' 'Tis now no season for these kind delays ;
 ' The great Achilles with impatience stays.
 ' To great Achilles this respect I owe ;
 ' Who asks what hero, wounded by the foe, 795
 ' Was borne from combat by thy foaming steeds ?
 ' With grief I see the great Machaon bleeds.
 ' This to report, my hasty course I bend ;
 ' Thou know'st the fiery temper of my friend.
 ' Can then the sons of Greece (the sage rejoin'd) 800
 ' Excite compassion in Achilles' mind ?
 ' Seeks he the sorrows of our host to know ?
 ' This is not half the story of our woe.
 ' Tell him, not great Machaon bleeds alone,
 ' Our bravest heroes in the navy groan ; 805
 ' Ulysses, Agamemnon, Diomed,
 ' And stern Eurypylus, already bleed.
 ' But ah ! what flattering hopes I entertain !
 ' Achilles heeds not, but derides our pain ;
 ' E'en till the flames consume our fleet he stays, 810
 ' And waits the rising of the fatal blaze.
 ' Chief after chief the raging foe destroys ;
 ' Calm he looks on, and every death enjoys.
 ' Now the slow course of all-impairing time
 ' Unstrings my nerves, and ends my manly prime ; 815
 ' Oh ! had I still that strength my youth possess'd,
 ' When this bold arm th' Epeian powers oppress'd,

'The bulls of Elis<sup>10</sup> in glad triumph led,
 'And stretch'd the great Itymonæus dead !
 'Then, from my fury fled the trembling swains, 820
 'And ours was all the plunder of the plains :
 'Fifty white flocks, full fifty herds of swine,
 'As many goats, as many lowing kine :
 'And thrice the number of unrivall'd steeds,
 'All teeming females, and of generous breeds. 825
 'These as my first essay of arms, I won ;
 'Old Neleus gloried in his conquering son.
 'Thus Elis forced, her long arrears restor'd,
 'And shares were parted to each Pylian lord.
 'The state of Pyle was sunk to last despair, 830
 'When the proud Elians first commenced the war.
 'For Neleus' sons Alcides' rage had slain ;
 'Of twelve bold brothers, I alone remain !
 'Oppress'd, we arm'd ; and now, this conquest gain'd,
 'My sire three hundred chosen sheep obtain'd. 835
 '(That large reprisal he might justly claim,
 'For prize defrauded, and insulted fame ;
 'When Elis' monarch at the public course
 'Detain'd his chariot, and victorious horse.)
 'The rest the people shar'd ; myself survey'd 840
 'The just partition, and due victims paid.
 'Three days were past, when Elis rose to war,
 'With many a courser, and with many a car ;
 'The sons of Actor at their army's head
 '(Young as they were) the vengeful squadrons led. 845
 'High on a rock fair Thryoessa stands,
 'Our utmost frontier on the Pylian lands ;
 'Not far the streams of fam'd Alphæus flow ;
 'The stream they pass'd, and pitch'd their tents below ,
 'Pallas, descending in the shades of night, 850
 'Alarms the Pylians, and commands the fight.
 'Each burns for fame, and swells with martial pride ;
 'Myself the foremost, but my sire denied ;
 'Fear'd for my youth, expos'd to stern alarms,
 'And stopp'd my chariot, and detain'd my arms. 855
 'My sire denied in vain : on foot I fled
 'Amidst our chariots : for the godless led.

<sup>10</sup> Elis is the whole southern part of Peloponnesus, between Achaia and Messenia : it was originally divided into several districts or principalities, afterwards it was reduced to two ; the one of the Elians, who were the same with the Epeians, the other of Nestor. This remark is necessary for the understanding what follows. In Homer's time the city of Elis was not built. Dacier Pope.

' Along fair Arcæ's delightful plain,
 ' Soft Minyas rolls his waters to the main.
 ' There, horse and foot, the Pylian troops unite, 860
 ' And, sheath'd in arms, expect the dawning light.
 ' Thence, ere the sun advanced his noon-day flame,
 ' To great Alphæus' sacred source we came.
 ' There first to Jove our solemn rites were paid ;
 ' An untam'd heifer pleas'd the blue-ey'd maid, 865
 ' A bull Alphæus ; and a bull was slain
 ' To the blue monarch of the watery main.
 ' In arms we slept, beside the winding flood.
 ' While round the town the fierce Epeians stood.
 ' Soon as the sun, with all-revealing ray, 870
 ' Flam'd in the front of heaven, and gave the day,
 ' Bright scenes of arms, and works of war appear ;
 ' The nations meet ; there Pylos, Elis here.
 ' The first who fell, beneath my javelin bled ;
 ' King Augias' son, and spouse of Agamædo : 875
 ' (She that all simples' healing virtues knew,
 ' And every herb that drinks the morning dew.)
 ' I seiz'd his car, the van of battle led ;
 ' Th' Epeians saw, they trembled, and they fled.
 ' The foe dispers'd, their bravest warrior kill'd, 880
 ' Fierce as a whirlwind now I swept the field :
 ' Full fifty captive chariots graced my train ;
 ' Two chiefs from each fell breathless to the plain.
 ' Then Actor's sons had died, but Neptune shrouds
 ' The youthful heroes in a veil of clouds. 885
 ' O'er heapy-shields, and o'er the prostrate throng,
 ' Collecting spoils, and slaughtering all along,
 ' Through wide Buprasian fields we forced the foes,
 ' Where o'er the vales th' Olenian rocks arose ;
 ' Till Pallas stopp'd us where Alisium<sup>11</sup> flows. 890
 ' E'en there, the hindmost of their rear I slay,
 ' And the same arm that led, concludes the day ;
 ' Then back to Pyle triumphant take my way.
 ' There to high Jove were public thanks assign'd
 ' As first of gods ; to Nestor, of mankind. 895
 ' Such then I was, impell'd by youthful blood :
 ' So prov'd my valour for my country's good.
 ' Achilles with inactive fury glows,
 ' And gives to passion what to Greece he owes.
 ' How shall he grieve, when to th' eternal shade 900
 ' Her hosts shall sink, nor his the power to aid ?

11 Alisium is generally taken for a hill or plain ; but Strabo tells us in his eighth book, that some pointed out a river of this name. Wakefield.

' O friend ! my memory recalls the day,
 ' When, gathering aids along the Grecian sea,
 ' I, and Ulysses, touch'd at Pthia's port,
 ' And enter'd Peleus' hospitable court. 905
 ' A bull to Jove he slew in sacrifice,
 ' And pour'd libations on the flaming thighs.
 ' Thyself, Achilles, and thy reverend sire
 ' Menœtius, turn'd the fragments on the fire.
 ' Achilles sees us, to the feast invites ; 910
 ' Social we sit, and share the genial rites.
 ' We then explain'd the cause on which we came,
 ' Urged you to arms, and found you fierce for fame.
 ' Your ancient fathers generous precepts gave :
 ' Peleus said only this : " My son ! be brave," 915
 ' Menœtius thus : " Though great Achilles shine
 " In strength superior, and of race divine,
 " Yet cooler thoughts thy elder years attend ;
 " Let thy just counsels aid, and rule thy friend." ' .
 ' Thus spoke your father at Thessalia's court ; 920
 ' Words now forgot, though now of vast import.
 ' Ah ! try the utmost that a friend can say,
 ' Such gentle force the fiercest minds obey ;
 ' Some favouring god Achilles' heart may move ;
 ' Though deaf to glory, he may yield to love. 925
 ' If some dire oracle his breast alarm,
 ' If aught from heaven withhold his saving arm ;
 ' Some beam of comfort yet on Greece may shine,
 ' If thou but lead the Myrmidonian line ;
 ' Clad in Achilles' arms, if thou appear, 930
 ' Proud Troy may tremble, and desist from war !
 ' Press'd by fresh forces, her o'erlabour'd train
 ' Shall seek their walls, and Greece respire again.'
 ' This touch'd his generous heart, and from the tent
 ' Along the shore with hasty strides he went ; 935
 ' Soon as he came, where, on the crowded strand,
 ' The public mart and courts of justice stand,
 ' Where the tall fleet of great Ulysses lies,
 ' And altars to the guardian gods arise ;
 ' There sad he met the brave Evæmon's son ; 940
 ' Large painful drops from all his members run ;
 ' An arrow's head yet rooted in his wound,
 ' The sable blood in circles mark'd the ground,
 ' As, faintly reeling, he confess'd the smart :
 ' Weak was his pace, but dauntless was his heart. 945
 ' Divine compassion touch'd Patroclus' breast,
 ' Who, sighing, thus his bleeding friend address'd :

' Ah, hapless leaders of the Grecian host !
 ' Thus must ye perish on a barbarous coast ?
 ' Is this your fate, to glut the dogs with gore, 950
 ' Far from your friends, and from your native shore ?
 ' Say, great Eurypylus ! shall Greece yet stand ?
 ' Resists she yet the raging Hector's hand ?
 ' Or are her heroes doom'd to die with shame,
 ' And this the period of our wars and fame ?' 955
 Eurypylus replies : ' No more, my friend,
 ' Greece is no more ! this day her glories end.
 ' E'en to the ships victorious Troy pursues,
 ' Her force increasing as her toil renews. 960
 ' Those chiefs, that us'd her utmost rage to meet,
 ' Lie pierced with wounds, and bleeding in the fleet.
 ' But thou, Patroclus ! act a friendly part,
 ' Lead to my ships, and draw this deadly dart ;
 ' With lukewarm water wash the gore away,
 ' With healing balms the raging smart allay, 965
 ' Such as sage Chiron, sire of pharmacy,
 ' Once taught Achilles, and Achilles thee.
 ' Of two fam'd surgeons, Podalirius stands
 ' This hour surrounded by the Trojan bands ;
 ' And great Machaon, wounded in his tent, 970
 ' Now wants that succour which so oft he lent.'
 To whom the chief : ' What then remains to do ?
 ' Th' event of things the gods alone can view.
 ' Charg'd by Achilles' great command I fly,
 ' And bear with haste the Pylian king's reply : 975
 ' But thy distress this instant claims relief.'
 He said, and in his arms upheld the chief.
 The slaves their master's slow approach survey'd,
 And hides of oxen on the floor displayed :
 There stretch'd at length the wounded hero lay ; 980
 Patroclus cut the forky steel away.
 Then in his hands a bitter root he bruis'd ;
 The wound he wash'd, the styptic juice infus'd.
 The closing flesh that instant ceas'd to glow,
 The wound to torture, and the blood to flow. 985

BOOK XII.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE BATTLE AT THE GRECIAN WALL.

The Greeks being retired into their entrenchments, Hector attempts to force them ; but it proving impossible to pass the ditch, Polydamas advises to quit their chariots, and manage the attack on foot. The Trojans follow his counsel, and having divided their army into five bodies of foot, begin the assault. But upon the signal of an eagle with a serpent in his talons, which appeared on the left hand of the Trojans, Polydamas endeavours to withdraw them again. This Hector opposes, and continues the attack ; in which, after many actions, Sarpedon makes the first breach in the wall : Hector also, casting a stone of a vast size, forces open one of the gates, and enters at the head of his troops, who victoriously pursue the Grecians even to their ships.

WHILE thus the hero's pious cares attend
 The cure and safety of his wounded friend,
 Trojans and Greeks with clashing shields engage,
 And mutual deaths are dealt with mutual rage.
 Nor long the trench or lofty walls oppose ; 5
 With gods averse th' ill-fated works arose ;
 Their powers neglected, and no victim slain,
 The walls are rais'd, the trenches sunk, in vain.
 Without the gods, how short a period stands
 The proudest monument of mortal hands ! 10
 This stood, while Hector and Achilles raged,
 While sacred Troy the warring hosts engaged ;
 But when her sons were slain, her city burn'd,
 And what surviv'd of Greece to Greece return'd ;
 Then Neptune and Apollo shook the shore, 15
 Then Ida's summits pour'd their watery store ;
 Rhesus and Rhodius then unite their rills,
 Caresus roaring down the stony hills,
 Esepus, Granicus, with mingled force,
 And Xanthus foaming from his fruitful source ; 20
 And gulfy Simois, rolling to the main
 Helmets, and shields, and godlike heroes slain :
 These, turn'd by Phœbus from their wonted ways,
 Deluged the rampire nine continual days ;
 The weight of waters saps the yielding wall, 25
 And to the sea the floating bulwarks fall.

Incessant cataracts the Thunderer pours,
 And half the skies descend in sluicy showers.
 The god of ocean, marching stern before,
 With his huge trident wounds the trembling shore, 30
 Vast stones and piles from their foundation heaves,
 And whelms the smoky ruin in the waves.
 Now, smooth'd with sand, and levell'd by the flood,
 No fragment tells where once the wonder stood ;
 In their old bounds the rivers roll again, 35
 Shine 'twixt the hills, or wander o'er the plain.
 But this the gods in later times perform ;
 As yet the bulwark stood, and brav'd the storm !
 The strokes yet echoed of contending powers ;
 War thunder'd at the gates, and blood distain'd the towers. 40
 Smote by the arm of Jove, and dire dismay,
 Close by their hollow ships the Grecians lay ;
 Hector's approach in every wind they hear,
 And Hector's fury every moment fear.
 He, like a whirlwind, toss'd the scattering throng, 45
 Mingled the troops, and drove the field along.
 So, 'midst the dogs and hunters' daring bands,
 Fierce of his might, a boar or lion stands ;
 Arm'd foes around a dreadful circle form,
 And hissing javelins rain an iron storm ; 50
 His powers untam'd their bold assault defy,
 And, where he turns, the rout disperse, or die :
 He foams, he glares, he bounds against them all,
 And, if he falls, his courage makes him fall.
 With equal rage encompass'd Hector glows ; 55
 Exhorts his armies, and the trenches shows.
 The panting steeds impatient fury breathe,
 But snort and tremble at the gulf beneath ;
 Just on the brink, they neigh, and paw the ground,
 And the turf trembles, and the skies resound. 60
 Eager they view'd the prospect dark and deep,
 Vast was the leap, and headlong hung the steep ;
 The bottom bare, (a formidable show !)
 And bristled thick with sharpen'd stakes below.
 The foot alone this strong defence could force, 65
 And try the pass impervious to the horse.
 This saw Polydamas ; who, wisely brave,
 Restrain'd great Hector, and this counsel gave :
 ' O thou ! bold leader of our Trojan bands,
 ' And you, confederate chiefs from foreign lands ! 70
 ' What entrance here can cumbrous chariots find,
 ' The stakes beneath, the Grecian walls behind ?

' No pass through those without a thousand wounds ;
 ' No space for combat in yon narrow bounds.
 ' Proud of the favours mighty Jove has shown, 75
 ' On certain dangers we too rashly run :
 ' If 'tis his will our haughty foes to tame,
 ' O may this instant end the Grecian name !
 ' Here, far from Argos, let their heroes fall,
 ' And one great day destroy, and bury all ! 80
 ' But should they turn, and here oppress our train,
 ' What hopes, what methods of retreat remain ?
 ' Wedg'd in the trench, by our own troops confus'd,
 ' In one promiscuous carnage crush'd and bruis'd,
 ' All Troy must perish, if their arms prevail, 85
 ' Nor shall a Trojan live to tell the tale.
 Hear then, ye warriors ! and obey with speed ;
 ' Back from the trenches let your steeds be led ;
 ' Then all alighting, wedg'd in firm array,
 ' Proceed on foot, and Hector lead the way. 90
 ' So Greece shall stoop before our conquering power,
 ' And this (if Jove consent) her fatal hour.'
 This counsel pleas'd : the godlike Hector sprung
 Swift from his seat ; his clanging armour rung.
 The chief's example follow'd by his train, 95
 Each quits his car, and issues on the plain.
 By orders strict the charioteers enjoin'd,
 Compel the coursers to their ranks behind.
 The forces part in five distinguish'd bands,
 And all obey their several chiefs' commands, 100
 The best and bravest in the first conspire,
 Pant for the fight, and threat the fleet with fire :
 Great Hector glorious in the van of these,
 Polydamas, and brave Cebriones.
 Before the next the graceful Paris shines, 105
 And bold Alcathous, and Agenor joins.
 The sons of Priam with the third appear,
 Deiphobus, and Helenus the seer ;
 In arms with these the mighty Asius stood,
 Who drew from Hyrtacus his noble blood, 110
 And whom Arisba's yellow coursers bore,
 The coursers fed on Selle's winding shore.
 Antenor's sons the fourth battalion guide,
 And great Æneas, born on fountful Ide.
 Divine Sarpedon the last band obey'd, 115
 Whom Glaucus and Asteropæus aid ;
 Next him, the bravest at their army's head,
 But he more brave than all the hosts he led.

Now, with compacted shields, in close array,
 The moving legions speed their headlong way : 120
 Already in their hopes they fire the fleet,
 And see the Grecians gasping at their feet.
 While every Trojan thus, and every aid,
 Th' advice of wise Polydamas obey'd ;
 Asius alone, confiding in his car, 125
 His vaunted coursers urg'd to meet the war.
 Unhappy hero ! and advis'd in vain !
 Those wheels returning ne'er shall mark the plain ;
 No more those coursers with triumphant joy
 Restore their master to the gates of Troy ! 130
 Black death attends behind the Grecian wall,
 And great Idomeneus shall boast thy fall !
 Fierce to the left he drives, where from the plain
 The flying Grecians strove their ships to gain ;
 Swift through the wall their horse and chariots past, 135
 The gates half-open'd to receive the last.
 Thither, exulting in his force, he flies ;
 His following host with clamours rend the skies :
 To plunge the Grecians headlong in the main,
 Such their proud hopes, but all their hopes were vain ! 140
 To guard the gates, two mighty chiefs attend,
 Who from the Lapiths' warlike race descend ;
 This Polypoetes, great Perithous' heir,
 And that Leonteus, like the god of war -
 As two tall oaks, before the wall they rise ; 145
 Their roots in earth, their heads amidst the skies :
 Whose spreading arms, with leafy honours crown'd,
 Forbid the tempest, and protect the ground ;
 High on the hills appears their stately form,
 And their deep roots for ever brave the storm. 150
 So graceful these, and so the shock they stand
 Of raging Asius, and his furious band.
 Drestes, Acamas, in front appear,
 And CEnomaus and Thoön close the rear.
 In vain their clamours shake the ambient fields, 155
 In vain around them beat their hollow shields ;
 The fearless brothers on the Grecians call,
 To guard their navies, and defend their wall.
 E'en when they saw Troy's sable troops impend,
 And Greece tumultuous from her towers descend, 160
 Forth from the portals rush'd th' intrepid pair,
 Oppos'd their breasts, and stood themselves the war.
 So two wild boars spring furious from their den,
 Loud with the cries of dogs, and voice of men ;

On every side the crackling trees they tear, 165
 And root the shrubs, and lay the forest bare ;
 They gnash their tusks, with fire their eyeballs roll,
 Till some wide wound lets out their mighty soul.
 Around their heads the whistling javelins sung ;
 With sounding strokes their brazen targets rung : 170
 Fierce was the fight, while yet the Grecian powers
 Maintain'd the walls, and mann'd the lofty towers :
 To save their fleet, the last efforts they try,
 And stones and darts in mingled tempests fly.
 As when sharp Boreas blows abroad, and brings 175
 The dreary winter on his frozen wings ;
 Beneath the low-hung clouds the sheets of snow
 Descend, and whiten all the fields below ?
 So fast the darts on either army pour,
 So down the rampires rolls the rocky shower ; 180
 Heavy, and thick, resound the batter'd shields,
 And the deaf echo rattles round the fields.
 With shame repuls'd, with grief and fury driven,
 The frantic Asius thus accuses heaven :
 ' In powers immortal who shall now believe ? 185
 ' Can those too flatter, and can Jove deceive ?
 ' What man can doubt but Troy's victorious power
 ' Should humble Greece, and this her fatal hour ?
 ' But like when wasps from hollow crannies drive,
 ' To guard the entrance of their common hive, 190
 ' Darkening the rock, while, with unwearied wings,
 ' They strike th' assailants, and infix their stings ;
 ' A race determin'd, that to death contend :
 ' So fierce, these Greeks their last retreat defend.
 ' Gods ! shall two warriors only guard their gates, 195
 ' Repel an army, and defraud the fates ?'
 Those empty accents mingled with the wind,
 Nor mov'd great Jove's unalterable mind ;
 To godlike Hector and his matchless might
 Was ow'd the glory of the destin'd fight. 200
 Like deeds of arms through all the forts were tried,
 And all the gates sustain'd an equal tide ;
 Through the long walls the stony showers were heard,
 The blaze of flames, the flash of arms, appear'd.
 The spirit of a god my breast inspire, 205
 To raise each æt to life, and sing with fire !
 While Greece unconquer'd kept alive the war,
 Secure of death, confiding in despair ;
 And all her guardian gods, in deep dismay,
 With unassisting arms deplor'd the day. 210

E'en yet the dauntless Lapithæ maintain
 The dreadful pass, and round them heap the slain
 First Damasus, by Polypætes' steel
 Pierc'd through his helmet's brazen vizor, fell ;
 The weapon drank the mingled brains and gore ; 215
 The warrior sinks, tremendous now no more !
 Next Ormenus and Pylon yield their breath :
 Nor less Leonteus strows the field with death ;
 First through the belt Hippomachus he gor'd,
 Then sudden wav'd his unresisted sword ; 220
 Antiphates, as through the ranks he broke,
 The faulchion struck, and fate pursued the stroke ;
 Iämenus, Orestes, Menon, bled ;
 And round him rose a monument of dead.
 Meantime, the bravest of the Trojan crew 225
 Bold Hector and Polydamas pursue ;
 Fierce with impatience on the works to fall,
 And wrap in rolling flames the fleet and wall.
 These on the farther bank now stood and gaz'd,
 By heaven alarm'd, by prodigies amaz'd : 230
 A signal omen stopp'd the passing host,
 Their martial fury in their wonder lost.
 Jove's bird on sounding pinions beat the skies,
 A bleeding serpent of enormous size
 His talons truss'd ; alive, and curling round, 235
 He stung the bird, whose throat receiv'd the wound :
 Mad with the smart, he drops the fatal prey,
 In airy circles wings his painful way,
 Floats on the winds, and rends the heavens with cries ;
 Amidst the host the fallen serpent lies : 240
 They, pale with terror, mark its spires unroll'd,
 And Jove's portent with beating hearts behold.
 Then first Polydamas the silence broke,
 Long weigh'd the signal, and to Hector spoke :
 ' How oft, my brother, thy reproach I bear, 245
 ' For words well meant, and sentiments sincere ?
 ' True to those counsels which I judge the best,
 ' I tell the faithful dictates of my breast.
 ' To speak his thoughts, is every freeman's right,
 ' In peace and war, in council and in fight ; 250
 ' And all I move, deferring to thy sway,
 But tends to raise that power which I obey.
 ' Then hear my words, nor may my words be vain ;
 ' Seek not, this day, the Grecian ships to gain
 ' For sure to warn us Jove his omen sent, 255
 ' And thus my mind explains its clear event.

' The victor eagle, whose sinister flight
 ' Retards our host, and fills our hearts with fright,
 ' Dismiss'd his conquest in the middle skies,
 ' Allow'd to seize, but not possess, the prize ; 260
 ' Thus, though we gird with fires the Grecian fleet,
 ' Though these proud bulwarks tumble at our feet,
 ' Toils unforeseen, and fiercer, are decreed ;
 ' More woes shall follow, and more heroes bleed.
 ' So bodes my soul, and bids me thus advise ; 265
 ' For thus a skilful seer would read the skies.'

To him then Hector with disdain return'd :
 (Fierce as he spoke, his eyes with fury burn'd :)
 ' Are these the faithful counsels of thy tongue ?
 ' Thy will is partial, not thy reason wrong : 270
 ' Or if the purpose of thy heart thou vent,
 ' Sure heaven resumes the little sense it lent.
 ' What coward counsels would thy madness move,
 ' Against the word, the will reveal'd of Jove ?
 ' The leading sign, th' irrevocable nod,
 ' And happy thunders of the favouring god,
 ' These shall I slight ? and guide my wavering mind
 ' By wandering birds, that flit with every wind ?
 ' Ye vagrants of the sky ! your wings extend,
 ' Or where the suns arise, or where descend ; 280
 ' To right, to left, unheeded take your way,
 ' While I the dictates of high heaven obey.
 ' Without a sign, his sword the brave man draws,
 ' And asks no omen but his country's cause.
 ' But why shouldst thou suspect the war's success ? 285
 ' None fears it more, as none promotes it less :
 ' Though all our chiefs amid yon ships expire,
 ' Trust thy own cowardice t' escape their fire.
 ' Troy and her sons may find a general grave,
 ' But thou canst live, for thou canst be a slave. 290
 ' Yet should the fears that wary mind suggests
 ' Spread their cold poison through our soldiers' breasts,
 ' My javelin can revenge so base a part,
 ' And free the soul that quivers in thy heart.'

Furious he spoke, and, rushing to the wall, 295
 Calls on his host ; his host obey the call ;
 With ardour follow where their leader flies :
 Redoubling clamours thunder in the skies.
 Jove breathes a whirlwind from the hills of Ide,
 And drifts of dust the clouded navy hide : 300
 He fills the Greeks with terror and dismay,
 And gives great Hector the predestin'd day.

Strong in themselves, but stronger in his aid,
 Close to the works their rigid siege they laid.
 In vain the mounds and massy beams defend, 305
 While these they undermine, and those they rend ;
 Upheave the piles that prop the solid wall ;
 And heaps on heaps the smoky ruins fall.
 Greece on her ramparts stands the fierce alarms ;
 The crowded bulwarks blaze with waving arms, 310
 Shield touching shield, a long refulgent row ;
 Whence hissing darts, incessant, rain below.
 The bold Ajaces fly from tower to tower,
 And rouse, with flame divine, the Grecian power.
 The generous impulse every Greek obeys ; 315
 Threats urge the fearful ; and the valiant, praise.
 ' Fellows in arms ! whose deeds are known to fame,
 ' And you whose ardour hopes an equal name !
 ' Since not alike endued with force or art,
 ' Behold a day when each may act his part ! 320
 ' A day to fire the brave, and warm the cold,
 ' To gain new glories, or augment the old.
 ' Urge those who stand, and those who faint, excite
 ' Drown Hector's vaunts in loud exhortations of fight ;
 ' Conquest, not safety, fill the thoughts of all ; 325
 ' Seek not your fleet, but sally from the wall ;
 ' So Jove once more may drive their routed train,
 ' And Troy lie trembling in her walls again.'
 Their ardour kindles all the Grecian powers ;
 And now the stones descend in heavier showers. 330
 As when high Jove his sharp artillery forms,
 And opes his cloudy magazine of storms ;
 In winter's bleak uncomfortable reign,
 A snowy inundation hides the plain ;
 He stills the winds, and bids the skies to sleep ; 335
 Then pours the silent tempest, thick and deep :
 And first the mountain tops are cover'd o'er,
 Then the green fields, and then the sandy shore ;
 Bent with the weight the nodding woods are seen,
 And one bright waste hides all the works of men : 340
 The circling seas alone absorbing all,
 Drink the dissolving fleeces as they fall.
 So from each side increas'd the stony rain,
 And the white ruin rises o'er the plain.
 Thus godlike Hector and his troops contend 345
 To force the ramparts, and the gates to rend ;
 Nor Troy could conquer, nor the Greeks would yield,
 Till great Sarpedon tower'd amid the field ;

For mighty Jove inspir'd with martial flame
 His matchless son, and urg'd him on to fame. 350
 In arms he shines, conspicuous from afar,
 And bears aloft his ample shield in air ;
 Within whose orb the thick bull-hides were roll'd,
 Ponderous with brass, and bound with ductile gold :
 And while two pointed javelins arm his hands, 355
 Majestic moves along, and leads his Lycian bands.
 So press'd with hunger, from the mountain's brow,
 Descends a lion on the flocks below :
 So stalks the lordly savage o'er the plain,
 In sullen majesty, and stern disdain : 360
 In vain loud mastiffs bay him from afar,
 And shepherds gall him with an iron war ;
 Regardless, furious, he pursues his way ;
 He foams, he roars, he rends the panting prey.
 Resolv'd alike, divine Sarpedon glows 365
 With generous rage that drives him on the foes.
 He views the towers, and meditates their fall ;
 To sure destruction dooms th' aspiring wall :
 Then, casting on his friend an ardent look,
 Fir'd with the thirst of glory, thus he spoke : 370
 ' Why boast we, Glaucus ! our extended reign,
 ' Where Xanthus' streams enrich the Lycian plain,
 ' Our numerous herds that range the fruitful field,
 ' And hills where vines their purple harvest yield,
 ' Our foaming bowls with purer nectar crown'd, 375
 ' Our feasts enhanced with music's sprightly sound ?
 ' Why on those shores are we with joy survey'd,
 ' Admir'd as heroes, and as gods obey'd ;
 ' Unless great acts superior merit prove,
 ' And vindicate the bounteous powers above ? 380
 ' 'Tis ours, the dignity they give to grace ;
 ' The first in valour, as the first in place :
 ' That when, with wondering eyes, our martial bands
 ' Behold our deeds transcending our commands,
 ' Such, they may cry, deserve the sovereign state, 385
 ' Whom those that envy dare not imitate !
 ' Could all our care elude the gloomy grave,
 ' Which claims no less the fearful than the brave,
 ' For lust of fame I should not vainly dare
 ' In fighting fields, nor urge thy soul to war. 390
 ' But since, alas ! ignoble age must come,
 ' Disease, and death's inexorable doom ;
 ' The life which others pay, let us bestow,
 ' And give to fame what we to nature owe ;

' Brave though we fall, and honour'd if we live, 395
' Or let us glory gain, or glory give !'

He said : his words the listening chief inspire
With equal warmth, and rouse the warrior's fire ;
The troops pursue their leaders with delight,
Rush to the foe, and claim the promis'd fight. 400

Menestheus from on high the storm beheld,
Threatening the fort, and blackening in the field ;
Around the walls he gaz'd, to view from far
What aid appear'd t' avert th' approaching war,
And saw where Teucer with th' Ajaces stood, 405
Of fight insatiate, prodigal of blood.

In vain he calls ; the din of helms and shields
Rings to the skies, and echoes through the fields ;
The brazen hinges fly, the walls resound, 409
Heaven trembles, roar the mountains, thunders all the ground.

Then thus to Thoös :—' Hence with speed,' (he said,)
' And urge the bold Ajaces to our aid ;
' Their strength united best may help to bear
' The bloody labours of the doubtful war :
' Hither the Lycian princes bend their course, 415
' The best and bravest of the hostile force.
' But if too fiercely there the foes contend,
' Let Telamon, at least, our towers defend,
' And Teucer haste with his unerring bow,
' To share the danger, and repel the foe.' 420

Swift as the word, the herald speeds along
The lofty ramparts, through the martial throng ;
And finds the heroes, bath'd in sweat and gore,
Oppos'd in combat on the dusty shore.

' Ye valiant leaders of our warlike bands ! 425
' Your aid,' (said Thoös), ' Peteus' son demands.
' Your strength, united, best may help to bear
' The bloody labours of the doubtful war :
' Thither the Lycian princes bend their course,
' The best and bravest of the hostile force. 430
' But if too fiercely here the foes contend,
' At least let Telamon those towers defend,
' And Teucer haste with his unerring bow,
' To share the danger, and repel the foe.'

Straight to the fort great Ajax turn'd his care, 435
And thus bespoke his brothers of the war :

' Now, valiant Lycomede ! exert your might,
' And, brave Oïleus, prove your force in fight :
' To you I trust the fortune of the field,
' Till by this arm the foe shall be repell'd : 440

'That done, expect me to complete the day—'
Then, with his seven-fold shield, he strode away.
With equal steps bold Teucer press'd the shore,
Whose fatal bow the strong Pandion bore.

High on the walls appear'd the Lycian powers, 445
Like some black tempest gathering round the towers ;
The Greeks, oppress'd, their utmost force unite,
Prepar'd to labour in th' unequal fight ;
The war renews, mix'd shouts and groans arise ;
Tumultuous clamour mounts, and thickens in the skies. 450
Fierce Ajax first th' advancing host invades,
And sends the brave Epicles to the shades,
Sarpedon's friend ; across the warrior's way,
Rent from the walls a rocky fragment lay ,
In modern ages not the strongest swain 455
Could heave th' unwieldy burthen from the plain.
He pois'd, and swung it round ; then toss'd on high ;
It flew with force, and labour'd up the sky :
Full on the Lycian's helmet thundering down,
The ponderous ruin crush'd his batter'd crown. 460
As skilful divers from some airy steep
Headlong descend, and shoot into the deep,
So falls Epicles ; then in groans expires,
And murmuring to the shades the soul retires.

While to the ramparts daring Glaucus drew, 465
From Teucer's hand a winged arrow flew ;
The bearded shaft the destin'd passage found ;
And on his naked arm inflicts a wound.
The chief, who fear'd some foe's insulting boast
Might stop the progress of his warlike host, 470
Conceal'd the wound, and, leaping from his height,
Retir'd reluctant from th' unfinish'd fight.
Divine Sarpedon with regret beheld
Disabled Glaucus slowly quit the field :
His beating breast with generous ardour glows, 475
He springs to fight, and flies upon the foe.
Alcmaon first was doom'd his force to feel :
Deep in his breast he plung'd the pointed steel ;
Then, from the yawning wound with fury tore
The spear, pursued by gushing streams of gore : 480
Down sinks the warrior with a thundering sound,
His brazen armour rings against the ground.

Swift to the battlement the victor<sup>1</sup> flies,
Tugs with full force, and every nerve applies ;
It shakes ; the ponderous stones disjointed yield : 485
The rolling ruins smoke along the field.

<sup>1</sup> Sarpedon.

A mighty breach appears : the walls lie bare ,
And, like a deluge, rushes in the war.

At once bold Teucer draws the twanging bow,
And Ajax sends his javelin at the foe :

490

Fix'd in his belt the feather'd weapon stood,
And through his buckler drove the trembling wood ;
But Jove was present in the dire debate,
To shield his offspring, and avert his fate.

495

The prince gave back, not meditating flight,
But urging vengeance and severer fight ;
Then, rais'd with hope, and fir'd with glory's charms,
His fainting squadrons to new fury warms :

' O where, ye Lycians ! is the strength you boast ?

' Your former fame, and ancient virtue lost !

500

' The breach lies open, but your chief in vain

' Attempts alone the guarded pass to gain :

' Unite, and soon that hostile fleet shall fall ;

' The force of powerful union conquers all.'

This just rebuke inflam'd the Lycian crew,

505

They join, they thicken, and th' assault renew :

Unmov'd th' embodied Greeks their fury dare,

And fix'd support the weight of all the war !

Nor could the Greeks repel the Lycian powers,

Nor the bold Lycians force the Grecian towers.

510

As on the confines of adjoining grounds,

Two stubborn swains with blows dispute their bounds ;

They tug, they sweat : but neither gain, nor yield,

One foot, one inch, of the contended field :

Thus obstinate to death, they fight, they fall :

515

Nor these can keep, nor those can win, the wall.

Their manly breasts are pierced with many a wound,

Loud strokes are heard, and rattling arms resound ;

The copious slaughter covers all the shore,

And the high ramparts drop with human gore.

520

As when two scales are charg'd with doubtful loads,

From side to side the trembling balance nods,

(While some laborious matron, just and poor,

With nice exactness weighs her woolly store,)

Till, pois'd aloft, the resting beam suspends

525

Each equal weight ; nor this nor that descends :

So stood the war, till Hector's matchless might,

With fates prevailing, turn'd the scale of fight.

Fierce as a whirlwind up the walls he flies,

And fires his host with loud repeated cries :

530

' Advance, ye Trojans ! lend your valiant hands,

Haste to the fleet, and toss the blazing brands !

They hear, they run, and, gathering at his call,
 Raise scaling engines, and ascend the wall :
 Around the works a wood of glittering spears 535
 Shoots up, and all the rising host appears.
 A ponderous stone bold Hector heaved to throw,
 Pointed above, and rough and gross below :
 Not two strong men th' enormous weight could raise,
 Such men as live in these degenerate days. 540
 Yet this, as easy as a swain could bear
 The snowy fleece, he toss'd and shook in air :
 For Jove upheld, and lighten'd of its load
 Th' unwieldy rock, the labour of a god.
 Thus arm'd, before the folded gates he came, 545
 Of massy substance, and stupendous frame ;
 With iron bars and brazen hinges strong,
 On lofty beams of solid timber hung :
 Then thundering through the planks, with forceful sway,
 Drives the sharp rock : the solid beams give way ; 550
 The folds are shatter'd ; from the crackling door
 Lead the resounding bars, the flying hinges roar.
 Now, rushing in, the furious chief appears,
 Gloomy as night ! and shakes two shining spears :
 A dreadful gleam from his bright armour came, 555
 And from his eye-balls flash'd the living flame.
 He moves a god, resistless in his course,
 And seems a match for more than mortal force.
 Then, pouring after, through the gaping space, .
 A tide of Trojans flows, and fills the place ; 560
 The Greeks behold, they tremble, and they fly :
 The shore is heap'd with death, and tumult rends the sky.

BOOK XIII.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE FOURTH BATTLE CONTINUED, IN WHICH NEPTUNE ASSISTS
THE GREEKS. THE ACTS OF IDOMENEUS.

Neptune, concerned for the loss of the Grecians, upon seeing the fortification forced by Hector (who had entered the gate near the station of the Ajaxes), assumes the shape of Calchas, and inspires those heroes to oppose him ; then, in the form of one of the generals, encourages the other Greeks who had retired to their vessels. The Ajaxes form their troops into a close phalanx, and put a stop to Hector and the Trojans. Several deeds of valour are performed ; Meriones, losing his spear in the encounter, repairs to seek another at the tent of Idomeneus : this occasions a conversation between these two warriors, who return together to the battle. Idomeneus signalizes his courage above the rest ; he kills Othryoneus, Asius, and Alcathous : Deiphobus and Æneas march against him, and at length Idomeneus retires. Menelaus wounds Helenus, and kills Pisandor. The Trojans are repulsed in the left wing. Hector still keeps his ground against the Ajaxes, till, being galled by the Locrian slingers and archers, Polydamas advises to call a council of war : Hector approves his advice, but goes first to rally the Trojans ; upbraids Paris, rejoins Polydamas, meets Ajax again, and renews the attack.

The eight-and-twentieth day still continues. The scene is between Grecian wall and the sea-shore.

WHEN now the Thunderer on the sea-beat coast
 Had fix'd great Hector and his conquering host,
 He left them to the fates, in bloody fray
 To toil and struggle through the well-fought day.
 Then turned to Thracia from the field of fight<sup>1</sup> 5
 Those eyes that shed insufferable light,
 To where the Mysians prove their martial force,
 And hardy Thracians tame the savage horse ;
 And where the far-famed Hippemolgian<sup>2</sup> strays,
 Renown'd for justice and for length of days. 10
 Thrice happy race ! that, innocent of blood,
 From milk innoxious seek their simple food :
 Jove sees delighted ; and avoids the scene
 Of guilty Troy, of arms, and dying men :
 No aid, he deems, to either host is given, 15
 While his high law suspends the powers of heaven.
 Meantime the monarch<sup>3</sup> of the watery main
 Observ'd the Thunderer, nor observ'd in vain.
 In Samothracia, on a mountain's brow,
 Whose waving woods o'erhung the deeps below, 20
 He sat ; and round him cast his azure eyes,
 Where Ida's misty tops confus'dly rise ;
 Below, fair Ilion's glittering spires were seen ;
 The crowded ships, and sable seas between.
 There, from the crystal chambers of the main 25
 Emerg'd, he sat ; and mourn'd his Argives slain.

At Jove incens'd, with grief and fury stung,
 Prone down the rocky steep he rush'd along ;
 Fierce as he pass'd, the lofty mountains nod,
 The forests shake ; earth trembled as he trod, 30
 And felt th' footsteps of the immortal god.
 From realm to realm three ample strides he took,
 And, at the fourth, the distant Ægæ<sup>4</sup> shook.
 Far in the bay his shining palace stands,
 Eternal frame ! not rais'd by mortal hands : 35
 This ha ing reach'd, his brass-hoof'd steeds he reins,
 Fleet as the winds, and deck'd with golden manes.
 Refulgent arms his mighty limbs infold,
 Immortal arms of adamant and gold. •
 He mounts the car, the golden scourge applies, 40
 He sits superior, and the chariot flies :
 His whirling wheels the glassy surface sweep ;
 Th' enormous monsters, rolling o'er the deep,
 Gambol around him on the watery way ;
 And heavy whales in awkward measures play : 45
 The sea subsiding spreads a level plain,
 Exults, and owns the monarch of the main ;
 The parting waves before his coursers fly ;
 The wondering waters leave his axle dry.
 Deep in the liquid regions lies a cave, 50
 Between where Tenedos<sup>5</sup> the surges lave,
 And rocky Imbrus<sup>5</sup> breaks the rolling wave :
 There the great ruler of the azure round
 Stopp'd his swift chariot, and his steeds unbound, • 55
 Fed with ambrosial herbage from his hand,
 And link'd their fetlocks with a golden band,
 Infrangible, immortal : there they stay ;
 The father of the floods pursues his way,
 Where, like a tempest darkening heaven around,
 Or fiery deluge that devours the ground, 60
 Th' impatient Trojans, in a gloomy throng,
 Embattl'd roll'd, as Hector rush'd along :
 To the loud tumult and the barbarous cry, .
 The heavens re-echo, and the shores reply ;
 They vow destruction to the Grecian name, 65
 And in their hopes the fleets already flame.
 But Neptune, rising from the seas profound,
 The god whose earthquakes rock the solid ground,

<sup>4</sup> Probably an island of that name in the Ægean sea is meant.

Now wears a mortal form ; like Calchas seen,
 Such his loud voice, and such his manly mien ; 70
 His shouts incessant every Greek inspire,
 But most th' Ajaces, adding fire to fire :
 ' 'Tis yours, O warriors, all our hopes to raise ;
 ' Oh recollect your ancient worth and praise !
 ' 'Tis yours to save us if you cease to fear ; 75
 ' Flight, more than shameful, is destructive here
 ' On other works though Troy with fury fall,
 ' And pour her armies o'er our batter'd wall ;
 ' There, Greece has strength : but this, this part o'erthrown,
 ' Her strength were vain ; I dread for you alone. 80
 ' Here Hector rages like the force of fire,
 ' Vaunts of his gods, and calls high Jove his sire.
 ' If yet some heavenly power your breast excite,
 ' Breathe in your hearts and string your arms to fight,
 ' Greece yet may live, her threaten'd fleet maintain, 85
 ' And Hector's force, and Jove's own aid, be vain.'
 Then with his sceptre that the deep controls,
 He touch'd the chiefs, and steel'd their manly souls :
 Strength, not their own, the touch divine imparts,
 Prompts their light limbs, and swells their daring hearts. 90
 Then, as a falcon from the rocky height,
 Her quarry seen, impetuous at the sight,
 Forth-springing instant, darts herself from high,
 Shoots on the wing, and skims along the sky :
 Such, and so swift, the power of ocean flew ; 95
 The wide horizon shut him from their view.
 Th' inspiring god Oileus' active son
 Perceiv'd the first, and thus to Telamon :
 ' Some god, my friend, some god in human form,
 ' Favouring descends, and wills to stand the storm ; 100
 ' Not Calchas this, the venerable seer ;
 ' Short as he turn'd, I saw the power appear :
 ' I mark'd his parting, and the steps he trod ;
 ' His own bright evidence reveals a god.
 ' E'en now some energy divine I share, 105
 ' And seem to walk on wings, and tread in air !'
 ' With equal ardour,' (Telamon returns,)
 ' My soul is kindled, and my bosom burns ;
 ' Now rising spirits all my force alarm,
 ' Lift each impatient limb, and brace my arm. 110
 ' This ready arm, unthinking, shakes the dart ;
 ' The blood pours back, and fortifies my heart ;
 ' Singly, methinks, you towering chief I meet,
 ' And stretch the dreadful Hector at my feet.'

Full of the god that urged their burning breast, 115
 The heroes thus their mutual warmth express'd.
 Neptune meanwhile the routed Greeks inspir'd;
 Who, breathless, pale, with length of labours tir'd,
 Pant in the ships; while Troy to conquest calls,
 And swarms victorious o'er their yielding walls: 120
 Trembling before th' impending storm they lie,
 While tears of rage stand burning in their eye.
 Greece sunk they thought, and this their fatal hour;
 But breathe new courage as they feel the power.
 Teucer and Leitus first his words excite; 125
 Then stern Peneleus rises to the fight;
 Thoas, Deipyrus, in arms renown'd,
 And Merion next, th' impulsive fury found;
 Last Nestor's son the same bold ardour takes,
 While thus the god the martial fire awakes: 130
 'Oh lasting infamy, oh dire disgrace
 'To chiefs of vigorous youth, and manly race!
 'I trusted in the gods, and you, to see
 'Brave Greece victorious, and her navy free:
 'Ah no—the glorious combat you disclaim, 135
 'And one black day clouds all her former fame.
 'Heavens! what a prodigy these eyes survey,
 'Unseen, unthought, till this amazing day!
 'Fly we at length from Troy's oft-conquer'd hands?
 'And falls our fleet by such inglorious hands? 140
 'A rout undisciplin'd, a straggling train,
 'Not born to glories of the dusty plain;
 'Like frightened fawns from hill to hill pursued,
 'A prey to every savage of the wood;
 'Shall these, so late who trembled at your name, 145
 'Invade your camps, involve your ships in flame?
 'A change so shameful, say, what cause has wrought?
 'The soldier's baseness, or the general's fault?
 'Fools! will ye perish for your leader's vice?
 'The purchase infamy, and life the price! 150
 'Tis not your cause, Achilles' injur'd fame:
 'Another's is the crime, but your's the shame.
 'Grant that our chief offend through rage or lust,
 'Must you be cowards, if your king's unjust?
 'Prevent this evil, and your country save: 155
 'Small thought retrieves the spirits of the brave.
 'Think, and subdue! on dastards dead to fame
 'I waste no anger, for they feel no shame:
 'But you, the pride, the flower of all our host,
 'My heart weeps blood to see your glory lost! 160

' Nor deem this day, this battle, all you lose :
 ' A day more black, a fate more vile, ensues
 ' Let each reflect, who prizes fame or breath,
 ' On endless infamy, on instant death
 ' For lo ! the fated time, th' appointed shore : 165
 ' Hark ! the gates burst, the brazen barriers roar !
 ' Impetuous Hector thunders at the wall ;
 ' The hour, the spot, to conquer or to fall.'
 These words the Grecians' fainting hearts inspire,
 And listening armies catch the godlike fire. 170
 Fix'd at his post was each bold Ajax found,
 With well-ranged squadrons strongly circled round :
 So close their order, so disposed their fight,
 As Pallas' self might view with fix'd delight ;
 Or had the god of war inclin'd his eyes, 175
 The god of war had own'd a just surprise
 A chosen phalanx, firm, resolv'd as fate,
 Descending Hector and his battle wait.
 An iron scene gleams dreadful o'er the fields,
 Armour in armour lock'd, and shields in shields, 180
 Spears lean on spears, on targets targets throng,
 Helms stuck to helms, and man drove man along.
 The floating plumes unnumber'd wave above,
 As when an earthquake stirs the nodding grove ;
 And, levell'd at the skies with pointing rays, 185
 Their brandish'd lances at each motion blaze.
 Thus breathing death, in terrible array,
 The close-compacted legions urged their way :
 Fierce they drove on, impatient to destroy ;
 Troy charged the first, and Hector first of Troy 190
 As from some mountain's craggy forehead torn,
 A rock's round fragment flies with fury borne,
 (Which from the stubborn stone a torrent rends,)
 Precipitate the ponderous mass descends :
 From steep to steep the rolling ruin bounds ; 195
 At every shock the crackling wood resounds ;
 Still gathering force, it smokes ; and, urged amain,
 Whirls, leaps, and thunders down, impetuous to the plain :
 There stops—So Hector. Their whole force he prov'd,
 Resistless when he raged, and, when he stopp'd, unmov'd. 200
 On him the war is bent, the darts are shed,
 And all their saulchions wave around his head :
 Repuls'd he stands, nor from his stand retires ;
 But with repeated shouts his army fires.
 ' Trojans ! be firm ; this arm shall make your way 205
 ' Through you square body, and that black array ;

'Stand, and my spear shall rout their scattering power,
 'Strong as they seem, embattled like a tower.
 'For he that Juno's heavenly bosom warms,
 'The first of gods, this day inspires our arms.' 210

He said, and rous'd the soul in every breast ;
 Urged with desire of fame, beyond the rest,
 Forth march'd Deiphobus ; but marching held,
 Before his wary steps, his ample shield.
 Bold Merion aim'd a stroke, nor aim'd it wide ; 215
 The glittering javelin pierced the tough bull-hide ;
 But pierced not through : unfaithful to his hand,
 The point broke short, and sparkled in the sand.
 The Trojan warrior, touch'd with timely fear,
 On the rais'd orb to distance bore the spear : 220
 The Greek retreating mourn'd his frustrate blow,
 And curs'd the treacherous lance that spar'd a foe ;
 Then to the ships with surly speed he went,
 To seek a surer javelin in his tent.

Meanwhile with rising rage the battle glows, 225
 The tumult thickens, and the clamour grows.
 By Teucer's arm the warlike Imbrus bleeds,
 The son of Mentor, rich in generous steeds.
 Ere yet to Troy the sons of Greece were led,
 In fair Pedæus' verdant pastures bred, 230

The youth had dwelt ; remote from war's alarms,
 And bless'd in bright Medesicaste's arms :
 (This nymph, the fruit of Priam's ravish'd joy, Allied the warrior to the house of Troy.)
 To Troy, when glory call'd his arms, he came : 235

And match'd the bravest of her chiefs in fame :
 With Priam's sons, a guardian of the throne,
 He liv'd, belov'd and honour'd as his own.
 Him Teucer pierc'd between the throat and ear :
 He groans beneath the Telamonian spear. 240

As from some far-seen mountain's airy crown,
 Subdued by steel, a tall ash tumbles down,
 And soils its verdant tresses on the ground :
 So falls the youth ; his arms the fall resound.
 Then, Teucer rushing to despoil the dead, 245

From Hector's hand a shining javelin fled :
 He saw, and shunn'd the death ; the forceful dart
 Sung on, and pierc'd Amphimachus's heart,
 Cteatus' son, of Neptune's forceful line ;
 Vain was his courage, and his race divine ! 250
 Prostrate he falls ; his clanging arms resound,
 And his broad buckler thunders on the ground.

To seize his beamy helm the victor flies,
 And just had fasten'd on the dazzling prize,
 When Ajax' manly arm a javelin flung ; 255
 Full on the shield's round boss the weapon rung ;
 He felt the shock, nor more was doom'd to feel,
 Secure in mail, and sheath'd in shining steel.
 Repuls'd he yields ; the victor Greeks obtain
 The spoils contested, and bear off the slain. 260
 Between the leaders of th' Athenian line,
 (Stichius the brave, Menestheus the divine,)
 Deplor'd Amphimachus, sad object ! lies ;
 Imbrius remains the fierce Ajaces' prize. 265
 As two grim lions bear across the lawn,
 Snatch'd from devouring hounds, a slaughter'd fawn
 In their fell jaws high lifting through the wood,
 And sprinkling all the shrubs with drops of blood ;
 So these the chief : great Ajax from the dead
 Strips his bright arms, Oileus lops his head : 270
 Toss'd like a ball, and whirl'd in air away,
 At Hector's feet the gory visage lay.
 The god of ocean, fir'd with stern disdain,
 And pierc'd with sorrow for his grandson<sup>e</sup> slain,
 Inspires the Grecian hearts, confirms their hands, 275
 And breathes destruction to the Trojan bands.
 Swift as a whirlwind rushing to the fleet,
 He finds the lance-fam'd Idomen of Crete ;
 His pensive brow the generous care express'd
 With which a wounded soldier touch'd his breast 280
 Whom in the chance of war a javelin tore,
 And his sad comrades from the battle bore ;
 Him to the surgeons of the camp he sent ;
 That office paid, he issued from his tent,
 Fierce for the fight : to him the god begun, 285
 In Thoas' voice, Andræmon's valiant son,
 Who rul'd where Calydon's white rocks arise,
 And Pleuron's chalky cliffs emblaze the skies :
 ' Where's now th' impetuous vaunt, the daring
 ' Of Greece victorious, and proud Ilion lost ?' 290
 To whom the king : ' On Greece no blame be thrown,
 ' Arms are her trade, and war is all her own.
 ' Her hardy heroes from the well-fought plains
 ' Nor fear withholds, nor shameful sloth detains.
 ' 'Tis heaven, alas ! and Jove's all-powerful doom, 295
 ' That far, far distant from our native home

<sup>e</sup> Amphimachus.

' Wills us to fall, inglorious ! Oh, my friend !
 ' Once foremost in the fight, still prone to lend
 ' Or arms, or counsels ; now perform thy best,
 ' And what thou canst not singly, urge the rest.' 300

Thus he ; and thus the god whose force can make
 The solid globe's eternal basis shake :

' Ah ! never may he see his native land,
 ' But feed the vultures on this hateful strand,
 ' Who seeks ignobly in his ships to stay, 305
 ' Nor dares to combat on this signal day !
 ' For this, behold ! in horrid arms I shine,
 ' And urge thy soul to rival acts with mine ;
 ' Together let us battle on the plain ;
 ' Two. not the worst ; nor e'en this succour vain : 310
 ' Not vain the weakest, if their force unite ;
 ' But ours, the bravest have confess'd in fight.'

This said, he rushes where the combat burns ;
 Swift to his tent the Cretan king returns.
 From thence, two javelins glittering in his hand, 315
 And clad in arms that lighten'd all the strand,
 Fierce on the foe th' impetuous hero drove ;
 Like lightning bursting from the arm of Jove,
 Which to pale man the wrath of heaven declares,
 Or terrifies th' offending world with wars ; 320
 In streamy sparkles, kindling all the skies,
 From pole to pole the trail of glory flies.
 Thus his bright armour o'er the dazzled throng
 Glean'd dreadful as the monarch flash'd along.

Him, near his tent, Meriones attends ; 325
 Whom thus he questions : ' Ever best of friends !
 ' O say, in every art of battle skill'd,
 ' What holds thy courage from so brave a field ?
 ' On some important message art thou bound,
 ' Or bleeds my friend by some unhappy wound ? 330
 ' Inglorious here, my soul abhors to stay,
 ' And glows with prospects of th' approaching day.'
 ' O prince !' (Meriones replies,) ' whose care
 ' Leads forth th' embattled sons of Crete to war ;
 ' This speaks my grief : this headless lance I wield ; 335
 ' The rest lies rooted in a Trojan shield.'

To whom the Cretan : ' Enter, and receive
 ' The wanted weapons ; those my tent can give ;
 ' Spears I have store, (and Trojan lances all,) 340
 ' That shed a lustre round th' illumin'd wall.
 ' Though I, disdainful of the distant war,
 ' Nor trust the dart, nor aim th' uncertain spear,

' Yet hand to hand I fight, and spoil the slain ;
 ' And thence these trophies, and these arms I gain. 345
 ' Enter, and see on heaps the helmets roll'd,
 ' And high-hung spears, and shields that flame with gold.
 ' Nor vain' (said Merion) ' are our martial toils ;
 ' We too can boast of no ignoble spoils.
 ' But those my ship contains, whence distant far, 350
 ' I fight conspicuous in the van of war.
 ' What need I more ? If any Greek there be
 ' Who knows not Merion, I appeal to thee.'
 To this Idomeneus : ' The fields of fight
 ' Have prov'd thy valour, and unconquer'd might : 355
 ' And were some ambush for the foes design'd,
 ' E'en there thy courage would not lag behind.
 ' In that sharp service, singled from the rest,
 ' The fear of each, or valour, stands confess'd.
 ' No force, no firmness, the pale coward shews ;
 ' He shifts his place ; his colour comes and goes ; 360
 ' A dropping sweat creeps cold on every part ;
 ' Against his bosom beats his quivering heart ;
 ' Terror and death in his wild eye-balls stare ;
 ' With chattering teeth he stands, and stiffening hair,
 ' And looks a bloodless image of despair ! 365
 ' Not so the brave ; still dauntless, still the same,
 ' Unchang'd his colour, and unmov'd his frame ;
 ' Compos'd his thought, determin'd is his eye,
 ' And fix'd his soul, to conquer or to die :
 ' If aught disturb the tenor of his breast, 370
 ' 'Tis but the wish to strike before the rest.
 ' In such assays thy blameless worth is known,
 ' And every art of dangerous war thy own.
 ' By chance of fight whatever wounds you bore,
 ' Those wounds were glorious all, and all before : 375
 ' Such as may teach, 'twas still thy brave delight
 ' T' oppose thy bosom where the foremost fight.
 ' But why, like infants, cold to honour's charms,
 ' Stand we to talk, when glory calls to arms ?
 ' Go—from my conquer'd spears the choicest take, 380
 ' And to their owners send them nobly back.'
 Swift as the word bold Merion snatch'd a spear,
 And, breathing slaughter, follow'd to the war.
 So Mars armipotent invades the plain,
 (The wide destroyer of the race of man ;) 385
 Terror, his best-lov'd son, attends his course,
 Arm'd with stern boldness, and enormous force ;
 The pride of haughty warriors to confound,
 And lay the strength of tyrants on the ground :

From Thrace they fly, call'd to the dire alarms 390
 Of warring Phlegians,<sup>a</sup> and Ephyrian arms :
 Invok'd by both, relentless they dispose
 To these glad conquest, murderous rout to those.
 So march'd the leaders of the Cretan train,
 And their bright arms shot horror o'er the plain. 395
 Then first spake Merion : ' Shall we join the right,
 ' Or combat in the centre of the fight ?
 ' Or to the left our wanted succour lend ?
 ' Hazard and fame all parts alike attend.'
 ' Not in the centre ;' (Idomen replied ;) 400
 ' Our ablest chieftains the main battle guide ;
 ' Each godlike Ajax makes that post his care,
 ' And gallant Teucer deals destruction there :
 ' Skill'd, or with shafts to gall the distant field
 ' Or bear close battle on the sounding shield. 405
 ' These can the rage of haughty Hector tame ;
 ' Safe in their arms, the navy fears no flame ;
 ' Till Jove himself descends, his bolts to shed,
 ' And hurl the blazing rain at our head.
 ' Great must he be, of more than human birth, 410
 ' Nor feed like mortals on the fruits of earth,
 ' Hun neither rocks can crush, nor steel can wound,
 ' Whom Ajax fells not on the ensanguin'd ground.
 ' In standing fight he mates Achilles' force,
 ' Excell'd alone in swiftness in the course. 415
 ' Then to the left our ready arms apply,
 ' And live with glory, or with glory die.'
 He said : and Merion to th' appointed place,
 Fierce as the god of battles, urg'd his pace.
 Soon as the foe the shining chiefs beheld 420
 Rush like a fiery torrent round the field,
 Their force embodied in a tide they pour ;
 The rising combat sounds along the shore :
 As warring winds, in Sirius' sultry reign,
 From different quarters sweep the sandy plain ; 425
 On every side the dusty whirlwinds rise,
 And the dry fields are lifted to the skies :
 Thus, by despair, hope, rage, together driven,
 Met the black hosts, and, meeting, darken'd heaven.
 All dreadful glar'd the iron face of war, 430
 Bristled with upright spears, that flash'd afar ;
 Dire was the gleam of breast-plates, helms, and shields,
 And polish'd arms emblaz'd the flaming fields :

<sup>a</sup> A people to the south of Thessaly: The Ephyrians were the inhabitants of Ephyre, a city of that country.

Tremendous scene! that general horror gave,
But touch'd with joy the bosoms of the brave. 435

Saturn's great sons in fierce contention vied,
And crowds of heroes in their anger died.
The sire of earth and heaven, by Thetis won
To crown with glory Peleus' godlike son, 440

Will'd not destruction to the Grecian powers,
But spar'd awhile the destin'd Trojan towers:
While Neptune, rising from his azure main,
Warr'd on the king of heaven with stern disdain,

And breath'd revenge, and fir'd the Grecian train.
Gods of one source, of one ethereal race, 445

Alike divine, and heaven their native place;
But Jove the greater; first-born of the skies,
And more than men, or gods, supremely wise.

For this, of Jove's superior might afraid,
Neptune in human form conceal'd his aid. 450

These powers unfold the Greek and Trojan train
In War and Discord's adamant chain;
Indissolubly strong, the fatal tie
Is stretch'd on both, and close-compell'd they die.

Dreadful in arms, and grown in combat grey, 455
The bold Idomeneus controls the day.

First by his hand Othryoneus was slain,
Swell'd with false hopes, with mad ambition vain;
Call'd by the voice of war to martial fame,
From high Cakesus' <sup>9</sup> distant walls he came; 460

Cassandra's love he sought, with boasts of power,
And promis'd conquest was the proffer'd dower.

The king consented, by his vaunts abus'd;
The king consented, but the fates refus'd. 465

Proud of himself, and of th' imagin'd bride,
The field he measur'd with a larger stride.

Him, as he stalk'd, the Cretan javelin found;
Vain was his breast-plate to repel the wound:

His dream of glory lost, he plung'd to hell;
The plains resounded as the boaster fell, 470

The great Idomeneus bestrides the dead;
'And thus' (he cries) 'behold thy promise sped!'

'Such is the help thy arms to Ilion bring,
'And such the contract of the Phrygian king!

'Our offers now, illustrious prince! receive; 475
'For such an aid what will not Argos give?

'To conquer Troy, with ours thy forces join,
'And count Atreides' fairest daughter thine.

<sup>9</sup> A city on the shore of the Hellespont.

' Meantime, on farther methods to advise,
' Come, follow to the fleet thy new allies ;
' There hear what Greece has on her part to say.'
He spoke, and dragg'd the gory corse away.

480

This Asius view'd, unable to contain,
Before his chariot warring on the plain ;
(His valued coursers, to his squire consign'd, Impatient panted on his neck behind :)

485

To vengeance rising with a sudden spring,
He hoped the conquest of the Cretan king.

The wary Cretan, as his foe drew near,
Full on his throat discharg'd the forceful spear :

490

Beneath the chin the point was seen to glide,
And, glitter'd, extant, at the farther side.

As when the mountain oak, or poplar tall,
Or pine, fit mast for some great admiral,
Groans to the oft-heav'd axe, with many a wound,
Then spreads a length of ruin o'er the ground :

495

So sunk proud Asius in that dreadful day,
And stretch'd before his much-lov'd coursers lay.

He grinds the dust distain'd with streaming gore,
And, fierce in death, lies foaming on the shore.

500

Depriv'd of motion, stiff with stupid fear,
Stands all aghast his trembling charioteer,

Nor shuns the foe, nor turns the steeds away,
But falls transfix'd, an unresisting prey :

Pierced by Antilochus, he pants beneath
The stately car, and labours out his breath.

505

Thus Asius' steeds (their mighty master gone)
Remain the prize of Nestor's youthful son.

Stabb'd at the sight, Deiphobus drew nigh,
And made, with force, the vengeful weapon fly :
The Cretan saw ; and, stooping, caus'd to glance,
From his slope shield, the disappointed lance.

510

Beneath the spacious targe, (a blazing round,
Thick with bull-hides, and brazen orbits bound,
On his rais'd arm by two strong braces stay'd,)

515

He lay collected in defensive shade ;

O'er his safe head the javelin idly sung,
And on the tinkling verge more faintly rung.

E'en then, the spear the vigorous arm confess'd,
And pierc'd, obliquely, king Hypsenor's breast ;

520

Warm'd in his liver, to the ground it bore
The chief, his people's guardian now no more !

' Not unattended,' (the proud Trojan cries,)

' Nor unrevenged, lamented Asius lies :

'For thee, (though hell's black portals stand display'd, 525
'This mate shall joy thy melancholy shade.'

Heart-piercing anguish, at the haughty boast,
Touch'd every Greek, but Nestor's son the most :
Griev'd as he was, his pious arms attend,
And his broad buckler shields his slaughter'd friend : 530
Till sad Mecistheus and Alastor bore
His honour'd body to the tented shore.

Nor yet from fight Idomeneus withdraws ;
Resolv'd to perish in his country's cause,
Or find some foe, whom heaven and he shall doom 535
To wail his fate in death's eternal gloom.

He sees Alcahous in the front aspire :
Great Æsyetes was the hero's sire :
His spouse Hippodamé, divinely fair,
Anchises' eldest hope, and darling care : 540

Who charm'd her parent's and her husband's heart,
With beauty, sense, and every work of art :
He, once, of Ilium's youth the loveliest boy,
The fairest she, of all the fair of Troy.

By Neptune now the hapless hero dies, 545
Who covers with a cloud those beauteous eyes,
And fetters every limb : yet bent to meet
His fate, he stands ; nor shuns the lance of Crete.

Fix'd as some column, or deep-rooted oak,
(While the winds sleep,) his breast receiv'd the stroke. 550
Before the ponderous stroke his corslet yields,
Long used to ward the death in fighting fields.

The riven armour sends a jarring sound :
His labouring heart heaves with so strong a bound,
The long lance shakes, and vibrates in the wound : 555
Fast flowing from its source, as prone he lay,
Life's purple tide impetuous gush'd away.

Then Idomen, insulting o'er the slain
'Behold, Deiphobus ! nor vaunt in vain :

'See ! on one Greek three Trojan ghosts attend, 560
'This, my third victim, to the shades I send.

'Approaching now, thy boasted might approve,
'And try the prowess of the seed of Jove.

'From Jove, enamour'd on a mortal dame,
'Great Minos, guardian of his country, came ; 565

'Deucalion, blameless prince ! was Minos' heir ;
'His first-born I, the third from Jupiter :

'O'er spacious Crete and her bold sons I reign,
'And thence my ships transport me through the main :

'Lord of a host, o'er all my host I shine, 570
'A scourge to thee, thy father, and thy line.'

The Trojan heard ; uncertain, or to meet
 Alone, with venturous arms, the king of Crete ;
 Or seek auxiliar force ; at length decreed
 To call some hero to partake the deed. 575
 Forthwith Æneas rises to his thought ;
 For him, in Troy's remotest lines he sought,
 Where he, incensed at partial Priam,* stands,
 And sees superior posts in meaner hands.
 To him, ambitious of so great an aid, 580
 The bold Deiphobus approach'd, and said :
 ' Now, Trojan prince, employ thy pious arms,
 ' If e'er thy bosom felt fair honour's charms.
 ' Alcathous dies, thy brother and thy friend.
 ' Come, and the warrior's lov'd remains defend. 585
 Beneath his cares thy early youth was train'd.
 ' One table fed you, and one roof contain'd.
 ' This deed to fierce Idomeneus we owe ;
 ' Haste, and revenge it on th' insulting foe.
 Æneas heard, and for a space resign'd 590
 To tender pity all his manly mind ;
 Then, rising in his rage, he burns to fight :
 The Greek awaits him, with collected might.
 As the fell boar on some rough mountain's head,
 Arm'd with wild terrors, and to slaughter bred, 595
 When the loud rustics rise, and shout from far,
 Attends the tumult, and expects the war ;
 O'er his bent back the bristly horrors rise,
 Fires stream in lightning from his sanguine eyes ;
 His foaming tusks both dogs and men engage, 600
 But most his hunters rouse his mighty rage :
 So stood Idomeneus, his javelin shook,
 And met the Trojan with a lowering look.
 Antilochus, Deipyrus, were near,
 The youthful offspring of the god of war ; 605
 Merion, and Aphareus, in field renown'd :
 To these the warrior sent his voice around :
 ' Fellows in arms ! your timely aid unite :
 Lo, great Æneas rushes to the fight :
 Sprung from a god, and more than mortal bold : 610
 ' He fresh in youth, and I in arms grown old.
 ' Else should this hand, this hour, decide the strife,
 ' The great dispute, of glory, or of life.

* They say that Æneas became suspected by Priam on account of an oracle which prophesied that he should in process of time rule over the Trojans. Pope. Comp. B. xx. 220, 355.

He spoke, and all as with one soul obey'd
 Their lifted bucklers cast a dreadful shade 615
 Around the chief. Æneas too demands
 Th' assisting forces of his native bands :
 Paris, Deiphobus, Agenor join ;
 (Co-aids and captains of the Trojan line ;) 620
 In order follow all th' embodied train ;
 Like Ida's flocks proceeding o'er the plain :
 Before his fleecy care, erect and bold,
 Stalks the proud ram, the father of the fold :
 With joy the swain surveys them, as he leads
 To the cool fountains through the well-known meads : 625
 So joys Æneas, as his native band
 Moves on in rank, and stretches o'er the land.
 Round dead Alcathous now the battle rose ;
 On every side the steely circle grows ;
 Now batter'd breast-plates and hack'd helmets ring, 630
 And o'er their heads unheeded javelins sing.
 Above the rest, two towering chiefs appear,
 There great Idomeneus, Æneas here.
 Like gods of war, dispensing fate, they stood,
 And burn'd to drench the ground with mutual blood. 635
 The Trojan weapon whizz'd along in air :
 The Cretan saw, and shunn'd the brazen spear :
 Sent from an arm so strong, the massive wood
 Stuck deep in earth, and quiver'd where it stood.
 But Enomas receiv'd the Cretan's stroke ; 640
 The forceful spear his hollow corslet broke ;
 It ripp'd his belly with a ghastly wound,
 And roll'd the smoking entrails to the ground.
 Stretch'd on the plain, he sobs away his breath,
 And furious grasps the bloody dust in death. 645
 The victor from his breast the weapon tears ;
 (His spoils he could not, for the shower of spears ;)

Though now unfit an active war to wage,
 Heavy with cumbrous arms, stiff with cold age,
 His listless limbs unable for the course ; 650
 In standing fight he yet maintains his force :
 Till, faint with labour, and by foes repell'd,
 His tir'd slow steps he drags along the field.
 Deiphobus beheld him as he pass'd,
 And, fir'd with hate, a parting javelin cast : 655
 The javelin err'd, but held its course along,
 And pierced Ascalaphus, the brave and young :
 The son of Mars fell gasping on the ground,
 And gnash'd the dust all bloody with his wound.

Nor knew the furious father of his fall , 660
 High-throned amidst the great Olympian hall,
 On golden clouds th' immortal synod sat
 Detain'd from bloody war by Jove and Fate
 Now while in dust the breathless hero lay,
 For slain Ascalaphus commenc'd the fray 665
 Deiphobus to seize his helmet flies,
 And from his temples rends the glittering prize
 Valiant as Mars Meriones drew near,
 And on his loaded arm discharged his spear
 He drops the weight, disabled with the pain , 670
 The hollow helmet rings against the plain
 Swift as a vulture leaping on his prey,
 From his torn arm the Grecian rent away
 The racking javelin, and rejoind his friends
 His wounded brother good Polites tends , 675
 Around his waist his pious arms he threw,
 And from the rage of combat gently drew
 Him his swift couriers, on his splendid car,
 Ript from the lessening thunder of the war ,
 To Troy they drove him, groaning from the shore, 680
 And sprinkling as he pass'd the sands with gore
 Meanwhile fresh slaughter bathes the sanguine ground,
 Haps fall on heaps, and heaven and earth resound
 Bold Aphareus by great Æneas bled ,
 As tow'rd the chief he turn'd his daring head, 685
 He pierc'd his throat, the bending head depress'd
 Beneath his helmet, nods upon his breast ;
 His shield revers'd o'er the fall'n warrior lies ,
 And everlasting slumber seals his eyes
 Antilochus as Thoon turn'd him round, 690
 Transpierc'd his back with a dishonest wound
 The hollow vein that to the neck extends
 Along the chine, his eager javelin rends
 Supine he falls, and to his social train
 Spreads his imploring arms, but spreads in vain 695
 Th' exulting victor leaping where he lay,
 From his broad shoulders tore the spoils away ,
 His time observed , for, clos'd by foes-around,
 On all sides thick, the peals of arms resound
 His shield, emboss'd the ringing storm sustains, 700
 But he impervious and untouch'd remains
 (Great Neptune's care preserv'd from hostile rage
 This youth, the joy of Nestor's glorious age ,
 In arms intrepid with the first he fought,
 Faced every foe, and every danger sought , 705

His winged lance, resistless as the wind,
 Obeys each motion of the master's mind :
 Resilient it flies, impatient to be free,
 And meditates the distant enemy.
 The son of Asius, Adamas, drew near, 710
 And struck his target with the brazen spear,
 Fierce in his front, but Neptune wards the blow,
 And blunts the javelin of th' eluded foe.
 In the broad buckler half the weapon stood ;
 Splinter'd on earth flew half the broken wood. 715
 Disarm'd, he mingled in the Trojan crew ;
 But Merion's spear o'ertook him as he flew,
 Deep in the belly's rim an entrance found,
 Where sharp the pang, and mortal is the wound.
 Bending he fell, and, doubled to the ground, 720
 Lay panting. Thus an ox, in fetters tied,
 While death's strong pangs distend his labouring side,
 His bulk enormous on the field displays ;
 His heaving heart beats thick, as ebbing life decays.
 The spear the conqueror from his body drew, 725
 And death's dim shadows swam before his view.
 Next brave Deipyrus in dust was laid :
 King Helenus wav'd high the Thracian blade,<sup>10</sup>
 And smote his temples with an arm so strong,
 The helm fell off, and roll'd amid the throng ; 730
 There, for some luckier Greek it rests a prize,
 For dark in death the godlike owner lies !
 With raging grief great Menelaus burns,
 And, fraught with vengeance, to the victor turns ;
 That shook the ponderous lance, in act to throw, 735
 And this stood adverse with the bended bow :
 Full on his breast the Trojan arrow fell,
 But harmless bounded from the plated steel.
 As on some ample barn's well-harden'd floor,
 (The winds collected at each open door,) 740
 While the broad fan with force is whirl'd around,
 Light leaps the golden grain, resulting from the ground :
 So from the steel that guards Atrides' heart,
 Repell'd to distance flies the bounding dart.
 Atrides, watchful of th' unwary foe, 745
 Pierc'd with his lance the hand that grasp'd the bow,
 And nail'd it to the yew : the wounded hand
 Trail'd the long lance that mark'd with blood the sand ,
 But good Agenor gently from the wound
 The spear solicits, and the bandage bound ; 750

<sup>10</sup> The Thracian swords were very large and weighty

A sling's soft wool,<sup>11</sup> snatch'd from a soldier's side,
At once the tent and ligature supplied.

Behold! Pisander, urg'd by Fate's decree,
Springs through the ranks to fall, and fall by thee,
Great Menelaus! to enhance thy fame;

755

High towering in the front, the warrior came,
First the sharp lance was by Atrides thrown;
The lance far distant by the winds was blown.
Nor pierc'd Pisander through Atrides' shield;
Pisander's spear fell shiver'd on the field.

760

Not so discouraged, to the future blind,
Vain dreams of conquest swell his haughty mind;
Dauntless he rushes where the Spartan lord
Like lightning brandish'd his far-beaming sword.

765

His left arm high oppos'd the shining shield;
His right, beneath, the cover'd pole-axe hold;

(An olive's cloudy grain the handle made,
Distinct with studs; and brazen was the blade;)

This on the helm discharged a noble blow;

770

The plume dropp'd nodding to the plain below,
Shorn from the crest. Atrides wav'd his steel;
Deep through his front the weighty faulchion fell;
The crashing bones before its force gave way;

In dust and blood the groaning hero lay;

Forc'd from their ghastly orbs, and spouting gore,
The clotted eye-balls tumble on the shore.

775

The fierce Atrides spurn'd him as he bled,
Tore off his arms, and loud exulting said:

'Thus, Trojans, thus, at length be taught to fear;'

780

'O race perfidious, who delight in war!

'Already noble deeds ye have perform'd,

'A princess rap'd transcends a navy storm'd:

'In such bold feats your impious might approve,

'Without th' assistance or the fear of Jove.

785

'The violated rites, the ravish'd dame,

'Our heroes slaughter'd, and our ships on flame,

'Crimes heap'd on crimes, shall bend your glory down,

'And whelm in ruins yon flagitious town.

'O thou, great Father, lord of earth and skies,

790

'Above the thought of man, supremely wise!

'If from thy hand the fates of mortals flow,

'From whence this favour to an impious foe,

' A godless crew, abandon'd and unjust,
 ' Still breathing rapine, violence, and lust ?
 ' The best of things, beyond their measure, cloy ; 795
 ' Sleep's balmy blessing, love's endearing joy ;
 ' The feast, the dance : whate'er mankind desire,
 ' E'en the sweet charms of sacred numbers tire.
 ' But Troy for ever reaps a dire delight
 ' In thirst of slaughter, and in lust of fight.' 800
 Thus said, he seiz'd (while yet the carcass heav'd)
 The bloody armour, which his train receiv'd :
 Then sudden mix'd among the warring crew,
 And the bold son of Pylæmenes slew.
 Harpagon had through Asia travell'd far, 805
 Following his martial father to the war ;
 Through filial love he left his native shore,
 Never, ah never, to behold it more !
 His unsuccessful spear he chanc'd to fling
 Against the target of the Spartan king ; 810
 Thus of his lance disarm'd, from death he flies,
 And turns around his apprehensive eyes.
 Hun, through the hip transpiercing as he fled,
 The shaft of Merion mingled with the dead.
 Beneath the bone the glancing point descends, 815
 And, driving down, the swelling bladder rends :
 Sunk in his sad companions' arms he lay,
 And in short pantings sobb'd his soul away,
 (Like some vile worm extended on the ground,)
 While life's red torrent gush'd from out the wound. 820
 Him on his car the Paphlagonian train
 In slow procession bore from off the plain.
 The pensive father, father now no more !
 Attends the mournful pomp along the shore ;
 And unavailing tears profusely shed, 825
 And unrevenged deplor'd his offspring dead
 Paris from far the moving sight beheld,
 With pity soften'd, and with fury swell'd :
 His honour'd host, a youth of matchless grace,
 And lov'd of all the Paphlagonian race ! 830
 With his full strength he bent his angry bow,
 And wing'd the feather'd vengeance at the foe.
 A chief there was, the brave Euchenor nam'd,
 For riches much, and more for virtue, fam'd,
 Who held his seat in Corinth's stately town ; 835
 Polydus' son, a seer of old renown.
 Oft had the father told his early doom,
 By arms abroad, or slow disease at home :

He climb'd his vessel, prodigal of breath,
 And chose the certain glorious path to death. 840
 Beneath his ear the pointed arrow went ;
 The soul came issuing at the narrow vent ;
 His limbs, unnerv'd, drop useless on the ground,
 And everlasting darkness shades him round.
 Nor knew great Hector how his legions yield, 845
 (Wrapp'd in the cloud and tumult of the field ;)
 Wide on the left the force of Greece commands,
 And conquest hovers o'er th' Achaian bands :
 With such a tide superior virtue sway'd,
 And he that shakes the solid earth, gave aid. 850
 But in the centre Hector fix'd remain'd,
 Where first the gates were forced, and bulwarks gain'd ;
 There, on the margin of the hoary deep,
 (Their naval station where th' Ajaces keep,
 And where low walls confine the beating tides, 855
 Whose humble barrier scarce the foe divides ;
 Where late in fight both foot and horse engaged,
 And all the thunder of the battle raged,)
 'There join'd, the whole Boeotian strength remains,
 The proud Ionians with their sweeping trains, 860
 Locrians and Phthians, and th' Epeian force ;
 But, join'd, repel not Hector's fiery course.
 The flower of Athens, Sticheus, Phidas led,
 Bias and great Menestheus at their head.
 Meges the strong th' Epeian bands controll'd, 865
 And Dracius prudent, and Amphion bold ;
 The Phthians Medon, fam'd for martial might,
 And brave Podarces, active in the fight.
 This drew from Phylacus his noble line,
 Iphiclus' son ; and that, Oilcus, thine : 870
 (Young Ajax' brother, by a stolen embrace ;
 He dwelt far distant from his native place ;
 By his fierce stepdame from his father's reign
 Expell'd and exil'd for her brother slain :)
 These rule the Phthians, and their arms employ, 875
 Mix'd with Boeotians, on the shores of Troy.
 Now side by side, with like unweary'd care,
 Each Ajax labour'd through the field of war.
 So when two lordly bulls, with equal toil,
 Force the bright ploughshare through the fallow soil, 880
 Join'd to one yoke, the stubborn earth they tear,
 And trace large furrows with the shining share :
 O'er their huge limbs the foam descends in snow,
 And streams of sweat down their sour foreheads flow.

A train of heroes follow'd through the field, 885
 Who bore by turns great Ajax' seven-fold shield ;
 Whene'er he breath'd, remissive of his might,
 Tired with th' incessant slaughters of the fight.
 No following troops his brave associate grace ;
 In close engagement an unpractis'd race, 890
 The Locrian squadrons nor the jav'lin wield,
 Nor bear the helm, nor lift the moony shield ;
 But skill'd from far the flying shaft to wing,
 Or whirl the sounding pebble from the sling ;
 Dexterous with these they aim a certain wound, 895
 Or fell the distant warrior to the ground.
 Thus in the van, the Telamonian train,
 Throng'd in bright arms, a pressing fight maintain ;
 Far in the rear the Locrian archers lie,
 Whose stones and arrows intercept the sky : 900
 The mingled tempest on the foes they pour ;
 Troy's scattering orders open to the shower.
 Now had the Greeks eternal fame acquir'd,
 And the gall'd Ilians to their walls retir'd ;
 But sage Polydamas, discreetly brave, 905
 Address'd great Hector, and this counsel gave :
 ' Though great in all, thou seem'st averse to lend
 ' Impartial audience to a faithful friend :
 ' To gods and men thy matchless worth is known,
 ' And every art of glorious war thy own ; 910
 ' But in cool thought and counsel to excel,
 ' How widely differs this from warring well !
 ' Content with what the bounteous gods have given,
 ' Seek not alone t' engross the gifts of heaven.
 ' To some the powers of bloody war belong, 915
 ' To some, sweet music, and the charm of song ;
 ' To few, and wondrous few, has Jove assign'd
 ' A wise, extensive, all-considering mind ;
 ' Their guardians these the nations round confess,
 ' And towns and empires for their safety bless. 920
 ' If Heaven have lodged this virtue in my breast,
 ' Attend, O Hector, what I judge the best.
 ' See, as thou mov'st, on dangers dangers spread,
 ' And war's whole fury burns around thy head :
 ' Behold ! distress'd within yon hostile wall, 925
 ' How many Trojans yield, disperse, or fall !
 ' What troops, out-number'd, scarce the war maintain !
 ' And what brave heroes at the ships lie slain !
 ' Here cease thy fury ; and, the chiefs and kings
 ' Convok'd to council, weigh the sum of things. 930

- ' Whether (the gods succeeding our desires)
 ' To you tall ships to bear the Trojan fires ;
 ' Or quit the fleet, and pass unhurt away,
 ' Contented with the conquest of the day.
 ' I fear, I fear, lest Greece (not yet undone) 935
 ' Pay the large debt of last revolving sun.
 ' Achilles, great Achilles, yet remains
 ' On yonder decks, and yet o'erlooks the plains !'
 The counsel pleas'd ; and Hector, with a bound,
 Leap'd from his chariot on the trembling ground ; 940
 Swift as he leap'd, his clanging arms resound.
 ' To guard this post' (he cried) ' thy art employ,
 ' And here detain the scatter'd youth of Troy ;
 ' Where yonder heroes faint, I bend my way,
 ' And hasten back to end the doubtful day.' 945
 This said, the towering chief prepares to go,
 Shakes his white plumes that to the breezes flow,
 And seems a moving mountain topp'd with snow.
 Through all his host, inspiring force, he flies,
 And bids anew the martial thunder rise. 950
 To Panthus' son, at Hector's high command,
 Haste the bold leaders of the Trojan band :
 But round the battlements, and round the plain,
 For many a chief he look'd, but look'd in vain ;
 Deiphobus, nor Helenus the seer, 955
 Nor Asius' son, nor Asius' self appear.
 For these were pierc'd with many a ghastly wound,
 Some cold in death, some groaning on the ground ;
 Some low in dust (a mournful object) lay,
 High on the wall some breath'd their souls away. 960
 Far on the left, amidst the throng he found
 (Cheering the troops, and dealing deaths around,)
 The graceful Paris : whom, with fury mov'd,
 Opprobrious, thus th' impatient chief reprov'd :
 ' Ill-fated Paris ! slave to womankind,<sup>12</sup> 965
 ' As smooth of face as fraudulent of mind !
 ' Where is Deiphobus, where Asius gone ?
 ' The godlike father, and th' intrepid son ?
 ' The force of Helenus, dispensing fate,
 ' And great Othryoneus, so fear'd of late ? 970

<sup>12</sup> The reproaches which Hector here casts on Paris give us the character of this hero, who in many things resembles Achilles. It is he who is obstinate in attacking the intrenchments, yet asks an account of those, who were slain in the attack, from Paris. . Page.

' Black fate hangs o'er thee from the avenging gods,
 ' Imperial Troy from her foundation nods,
 ' Whelm'd in thy country's ruins shalt thou fall,
 ' And one devouring vengeance swallow all '
 When Paris thus ' My brother and my friend, 975
 ' Thy warm impatience makes thy tongue offend
 ' In other battles I deserv'd thy blame,
 ' Though then not deedless, nor unknown to fame.
 ' But since yon rampart by thy arms lay low,
 ' I scatter'd slaughter from my fatal bow 980
 ' The chiefs you seek on yonder shore lie slain;
 ' Of all those heroes, two alone remain;
 ' Deiphobus, and Helenus*the seer
 ' Each now disabled by a hostile spear.
 ' Go then, successful, where thy soul inspires; 985
 ' This heart and hand shall second all thy fires:
 What with this arm I can, prepare to know,
 ' Till death for death be paid, and blow for blow.
 ' But 'tis not ours, with forces not our own
 ' To combat, strength is of the gods alone.' 990
 These words the hero's angry mind assuage.
 Then fierce they mingle where the thickest rage.
 Around Polydamas, distain'd with blood,
 Cebrión, Phalces, stern Orthæus, stood,
 Palmus, with Polypoetes the divine, 995
 And two bold brothers of Hippotion's line:
 (Who reach'd fair-Ithón, from Ascauia far,
 The former day, the next, engaged in war)
 As when from gloomy clouds a whirlwind springs,
 That bears Jove's thunder on its dreadful wings, 1000
 Wide o'er the blasted fields the tempest sweeps,
 Then, gather'd, settles on the hoary deeps;
 Th' afflicted deeps tumultuous mix and roar;
 The waves behind impel the waves before,
 Wide-rolling, foaming high, and tumbling to the shore. 1005
 Thus rank on rank the chief battalions throng,
 Chief urg'd on chief, and man drove man along:
 Far o'er the plains in dreadful order bright,
 The brazen arms reflect a beamy light
 Full in the blazing van great Hector shin'd, 1010
 Like Mars commission'd to confound mankind.
 Before him flaming, his enormous shield,
 Like the broad sun, illumin'd all the field;
 His nodding helm emits a streamy ray;
 His piercing eyes through all the battle stray, 1015
 And, while beneath his targe he flash'd along,
 Shot terrors round, that wither'd ev'n the strong.

Thus stalk'd he dreadful ; death was in his look ;
 Whole nations fear'd ; but not an Argive shook.
 The towering Ajax, with an ample stride, 1020
 Advanc'd the first, and thus the chief defied :
 ' Hector ! come on, thy empty threats forbear :
 'Tis not thy arm, 'tis thundering Jove, we fear :
 ' The skill of war to us not idly given,
 ' Lo ! Greece is humbled, not by Troy, but heaven. 1025
 ' Vain are the hopes that haughty mind imparts
 ' To force our fleet : the Greeks have hands and hearts
 ' Long ere in flames our lofty navy fall,
 ' Your boasted city, and your god-built wall,
 ' Shall sink beneath us, smoking on the 'ground ; 1030
 ' And spread a long unmeasur'd ruin round.
 ' The time shall come, when, chas'd along the plain,
 ' E'en thou shalt call on Jove, and call in vain ;
 ' E'en thou shalt wish, to aid thy desperate course,
 ' The wings of falcons for thy flying horse ; 1035
 ' Shalt run, forgetful of a warrior's fame,
 ' While clouds of friendly dust conceal thy shame.'
 As thus he spoke, behold, in open view,
 On sounding wings a dexter eagle flew.
 To Jove's glad omen all the Grecians rise, 1040
 And hail, with shouts, his progress through the skies.
 Far-echoing clamours bound from side to side ;
 They ceas'd ; and thus the chief of Troy replied :
 ' From whence this menace, this insulting strain ?
 ' Enormous boaster ! doom'd to vaunt in vain. 1045
 ' So may the gods on Hector life bestow,
 ' (Not that short life which mortals lead below,
 ' But such as those of Jove's high lineage born,
 ' The blue-eyed maid, or he that gilds the morn,) 1050
 ' As this decisive day shall end the fame
 ' Of Greece, and Argos be no more a name.
 ' And thou, imperious ! if thy madness wait
 ' The lance of Hector, thou shalt meet thy fate :
 ' That giant-corps, extended on the shore,
 ' Shall largely feast the fowls with fat and gore.' 1055
 He said, and like a lion stalk'd along :
 With shouts incessant earth and ocean rung,
 Sent from his following host. The Grecian train
 With answering thunders fill'd the echoing plain ;
 A shout that tore heaven's concave, and above 1060
 Shook the fix'd splendours of the throne of Jove.

THE ARGUMENT.

JUNO DECEIVES JUPITER BY THE GIRDLE OF VENUS

Nestor, sitting at the table with Machaon, is alarmed with the increasing clamour of the war, and hastens to Agamemnon: on his way he meets that prince with Diomed and Ulysses, whom he informs of the extremity of the danger. Agamemnon proposes to make their escape by night, which Ulysses withstands; to which Diomed adds his advice, that, wounded as they were, they should go forth and encourage the army with their presence; which advice is pursued. Juno seeing the partiality of Jupiter to the Trojans, forms a design to overreach him; she sets off her charms with the utmost care, and (the more surely to enchant him) obtains the magic girdle of Venus. She then applies herself to the god of Sleep, and with some difficulty persuades him to seal the eyes of Jupiter; this done, she goes to mount Ida, where the god, at first sight, is ravished with her beauty, sinks in her embraces, and is laid asleep. Neptune takes advantage of his slumber, and succours the Greeks; Hector is struck to the ground with a prodigious stone by Ajax, and carried off from the battle. several actions succeed; till the Trojans, much distressed, are obliged to give way; the lesser Ajax signalizes himself in a particular manner.

But nor the genial feast, nor flowing bowl,
 Could charm the cares of Nestor's watchful soul;<sup>1</sup>
 His startled ears th' increasing cries attend;
 Then thus, impatient, to his wounded friend:
 'What new alarms, divine Machaon, say, 5
 'What mix'd events attend this mighty day?
 'Hark! how the shouts divide, and how they meet,
 'And now come full, and thicken to the fleet!
 'Here, with the cordial draught dispel thy care,
 'Let Hecamede the strengthening bath prepare, 10
 'Refresh thy wound, and cleanse the clotted gore,
 'While I th' adventures of the day explore.'
 He said: and, seizing Thrasymedes' shield,
 (His valiant offspring,) hasten'd to the field;
 (That day, the son his father's buckler bore;) 15
 Then snatch'd a lance, and issued from the door
 Soon as the prospect open'd to his view,
 His wounded eyes the scene of sorrow knew;
 Dire disarray! the tumult of the fight,
 The wall in ruins, and the Greeks in flight. 20

<sup>1</sup> At the end of the eleventh book we left Nestor at the table with Machaon. Dacier.

As when old Ocean's silent surface sleeps,
 The waves just heaving on the purple deeps ;
 While yet th' expected tempest hangs on high,
 Weighs down the cloud, and blackens in the sky,
 The mass of waters will no wind obey ; 25
 Jove sends one gust, and bids them roll away.
 While wavering counsels thus his mind engage,
 Fluctuates in doubtful thought the Pylian sage ;
 To join the host, or to the general haste ;
 Debating long, he fixes on the last : 30
 Yet, as he moves, the fight his bosom warms ;
 The field rings dreadful with the clang of arms ;
 The gleaming faulchions flash, the javelins fly ;
 Blows echo blows, and all or kill or die.
 Him, in his march, the wounded princes meet, 35
 By tardy steps ascending from the fleet ;
 The king of men, Ulysses the divine,
 And who to Tydeus owes his noble line.
 (Their ships at distance from the battle stand,
 In lines advanc'd along the shelving strand ; 40
 Whose bay the fleet unable to contain
 At length, beside the margin of the main,
 Rank above rank, the crowded ships they moor :
 Who landed first, lay highest on the shore.)
 Supported on their spears they took their way, 45
 Unfit to fight, but anxious for the day.
 Nestor's approach alarm'd each Grecian breast,
 Whom thus the general of the host address'd :
 ' O grace and glory of th' Achaean name !
 ' What drives thee, Nestor, from the field of fame ? 50
 ' Shall then proud Hector see his boast fulfill'd,
 ' Our fleets in ashes, and our heroes kill'd ?
 ' Such was his threat, ah ! now too soon made good.
 ' On many a Grecian bosom writ in blood.
 ' Is every heart inflam'd with equal rage 55
 ' Against your king, nor will one chief engage ?
 ' And have I lived to see with mournful eyes
 ' In every Greek a new Achilles rise ?'
 Gerenian Nestor then : ' So Fate has will'd ;
 ' And all confirming time has fate fulfill'd, 60
 ' Not he that thunders from th' aërial bower,
 ' Not Jove himself, upon the past has power.
 ' The wall, our late inviolable bound,
 ' And best defence, lies smoking on the ground :
 ' E'en to the ships their conqu'ring arms extend, 65
 ' And groans of slaughter'd Greeks to heaven ascend.

' On speedy measures then employ your thought ;
 ' In such distress if counsel profit aught ,
 ' Arms cannot much though Mars our souls incite,
 ' These gaping wounds withhold us from the fight.' 70
 To him the monarch : ' That our army bends,
 ' That Troy triumphant our high fleet ascends,
 ' And that the rampart, late our surest trust,
 ' And best defence, lies smoking in the dust :
 ' All this, from Jove's afflictive hand we bear, 75
 ' Who, far from Argos, wills our ruin here,
 ' Past are the days when happier Greece was bless'd,
 ' And all his favour, all his aid, confess'd ;
 ' Now heaven, averse, our hands from battle ties,
 ' And lifts the Trojan glory to the skies. 80
 ' Cease we at length to waste our blood in vain,
 ' And launch what ships lie nearest to the main ;
 ' Leave these at anchor till the coming night ,
 ' Then, if impetuous Troy forbear the fight,
 ' Bring all to sea, and hoist each sail for flight. 85
 ' Better from evils, well foreseen, to run,
 ' Than perish in the danger we may shun.'
 Thus he. The sage Ulysses thus replies,
 While anger flash'd from his disdainful eyes :
 ' What shameful words (unkingly as thou art) 90
 ' Fall from that trembling tongue and timorous heart !
 ' Oh were thy sway the curse of meaner powers,
 ' And thou the shame of any host but ours !
 ' A host, by Jove endued with martial might,
 ' And taught to conquer, or to fall in fight : 95
 ' Adventurous combats and bold wars to wage,
 ' Employ'd our youth, and yet employs our age.
 ' And wilt thou thus desert the Trojan plain ?
 ' And have whole streams of blood been spilt in vain ?
 ' In such base sentence if thou couch thy fear, 100
 ' Speak it in whispers, lest a Greek should hear.
 ' Lives there a man so dead to fame, who dares
 ' To think such meanness, or the thought declares ?
 ' And comes it e'en from him whose sovereign sway
 ' The banded legions of all Greece obey ? 105
 ' Is this a general's voice, that calls to flight ?
 ' While war hangs doubtful, while his soldiers fight ?
 ' What more could Troy ? What yet their fate denies
 ' Thou giv'st the foe : all Greece becomes their prize.
 ' No more the troops (our hoisted sails in view, 110
 ' Themselves abandon'd) shall the fight pursue ;

Agamemnon.

' But thy ships flying with despair shall see,
 ' And owe destruction to a prince like thee.'
 ' Thy just reproofs ' (Atrides calm replies,)

' Like arrows pierce me, for thy words are wise. 116
 ' Unwilling as I am to lose the host.
 ' I force not Greece to quit this hateful coast.
 ' Glad I submit, whoe'er, or young or old,
 ' Aught, more conducive to our weal, unfold.'
 Tydides cut him short, and thus began : 120
 ' Such counsel if ye seek, behold the man
 ' Who boldly gives it, and what he shall say,
 ' Young though he be, disdain not to obey :
 ' A youth, who from the mighty Tydeus springs,
 ' May speak to councils and assembled kings. 125
 ' Hear then in me the great (Euides' son,
 ' Whose honour'd dust (his race of glory run)
 ' Lies whelm'd in ruins of the Theban wall ;
 ' Brave in his life, and glorious in his fall.
 ' With three bold sons was generous Prothous bless'd, 130
 ' Who Pleuron's walls and Calydon possess'd :
 ' Melas and Agrius, but (who far surpass'd
 ' The rest in courage) (Eneus was the last :
 ' From him, my sire. From Calydon expell'd,
 ' He pass'd to Argos, and in exile dwell'd ;<sup>3</sup> 135
 ' The monarch's daughter there (so Jove ordain'd)
 ' He won, and flourish'd where Adrastus reign'd :
 ' There, rich in fortune's gifts, his acres till'd,
 ' Beheld his vines their liquid harvest yield,
 ' And numerous flocks that whiten'd all the field. 140
 ' Such Tydeus was, the foremost once in fame !
 ' Nor lives in Greece a stranger to his name.
 ' Then, what for common good my thoughts inspire,
 ' Attend, and in the son respect the sire.
 ' Though sore of battle, though with wounds oppress'd, 145
 ' Let each go forth, and animate the rest,
 ' Advance the glory which he cannot share,
 ' Though not partaker, witness of the war.
 ' But lest new wounds on wounds o'erpower us quite,
 ' Beyond the missile javelin's sounding flight, 150
 ' Safe let us stand ; and, from the tumult far,
 ' Inspire the ranks, and rule the distant war.'
 He added not : the listening kings obey,
 Slow-moving on ; Atrides leads the way.

The god of Ocean (to inflame their rage) 155
 Appears a warrior furrow'd o'er with age;
 Press'd in his own, the general's hand he took,
 And thus the venerable hero spoke:

'Atrides, lo! with what disdainful eye
 'Achilles sees his country's forces fly: 160
 'Blind impious man! whose anger is his guide,
 'Who glories in unutterable pride.
 'So may he perish, so may Jove disclaim
 'The wretch relentless, and o'erwhelm with shame!
 'But heaven forsakes not thee: o'er yonder sands 165
 'Soon shalt thou view the scatter'd Trojan bands
 'Fly diverse; while proud kings, and chiefs renown'd,
 'Driv'n heaps on heaps, with clouds involved around
 'Of rolling dust, their winged wheels employ
 'To hide their ignominious heads in Troy.' 170

He spoke, then rush'd among the warrior crew:
 And sent his voice before him as he flew,
 Loud, as the shout encountering armies yield,
 When twice ten thousand shake the labouring field;
 Such was the voice, and such the thundering sound 175
 Of him whose trident rends the solid ground.
 Each Argive bosom beats to meet the fight,
 And grizly war appears a pleasing sight.

Meantime Saturnia from Olympus' brow,
 High-thron'd in gold, beheld the fields below; 180
 With joy the glorious conflict she survey'd,
 Where her great brother gave the Grecians aid.
 But placed aloft, on Ida's shady height
 She sees her Jove, and trembles at the sight.
 Jove to deceive, what methods shall she try, 185
 What arts, to blind his all-beholding eye?
 At length she trusts her power; resolved to prove
 The old, yet still successful, cheat of love;
 Against his wisdom to oppose her charms,
 And hurl the lord of thunders in her arms. 190

Swift to her bright apartment she repairs,
 Sacred to dress, and beauty's pleasing cares:
 With skill divine had Vulcan form'd the bower,
 Safe from access of each intruding power.
 Touch'd with her secret key, the doors unfold 195
 Self-clos'd, behind her shut the valves of gold.
 Here first she bathes; and round her body pours
 Soft oils of fragrance, and ambrosial showers:
 The winds, perfum'd, the balmy gale convey
 Through heaven, through earth, and all the aerial way; 200

Spirit divine ! whose exhalation greets
 The sense of gods with more than mortal sweets.
 Thus while she breath'd of heaven, with decent pride
 Her artful hands the radiant tresses tied ;
 Part on her head in shining ringlets roll'd, 205
 Part o'er her shoulders wav'd like melted gold.
 Around her next a heavenly mantle flow'd,
 That rich with Pallas' labour'd colours glow'd ;
 Large clasps of gold the foldings gather'd round,
 A golden zone her swelling bosom bound. 210
 Far-beaming pendants tremble in her ear,
 Each gem illumin'd with a triple star.
 Then o'er her head she cast a veil more white
 Than new-fall'n snow, and dazzling as the light.
 Last her fair feet celestial sandals grace. 215
 Thus issuing radiant, with majestic pace,
 Forth from the dome th' imperial goddess moves,
 And calls the mother of the smiles and loves.
 'How long' (to Venus thus apart she cried)
 'Shall human strife celestial minds divide ?' 220
 'Ah yet, will Venus aid Saturnia's joy,
 'And set aside the cause of Greece and Troy ?'
 'Let heaven's dread empress' (Cytherea said)
 'Speak her request, and deem her will obey'd.' 224
 'Then grant me' (said the queen) 'those conqu'ring charms,
 'That power, which mortals and immortals warms,
 'That love, which melts mankind in fierce desires,
 'And burns the sons of heaven with sacred fires !
 'For lo ! I haste to those remote abodes,
 'Where the great parents (sacred source of gods !) 230
 'Ocean and Tethys their old empire keep,
 'On the last limits of the land and deep.
 'In their kind arms my tender years were pass'd ;
 'What time old Saturn, from Olympus cast,
 'Of upper heaven to Jove resign'd the reign, 235
 'Whelm'd under the huge mass of earth and main.
 'For strife, 'I hear, has made the union cease,
 'Which held so long that ancient pair in peace.
 'What honour, and what love, shall I obtain,
 'If I compose those fatal feuds again ?' 240
 'Once more their minds in mutual ties engage,
 'And what my youth has ow'd, repay their age.'
 She said. With awe divine the queen of love
 Obey'd the sister and the wife of Jove ;
 And from her fragrant breast the zone unbrac'd, 245
 With various skill and high embroidery grac'd.

In this was every art, and every charm,
 To win the wisest, and the coldest warm :
 Fond love, the gentle vow, the gay desire,
 The kind deceit, the still reviving fire ; 250
 Persuasive speech, and more persuasive sighs,
 Silence that spoke, and eloquence of eyes.
 This on her hand the Cyprian goddess laid ;
 'Take this, and with it all thy wish,' she said :
 With smiles she took the charm ; and smiling press'd 255
 The powerful cestus to her snowy breast.
 Then Venus to the courts of Jove withdrew ;
 Whilst from Olympus pleas'd Saturnia flew.
 O'er high Pieria thence her course she bore,
 O'er fair Etnathia's ever-pleasing shore, 260
 O'er Hæmus' hills with snows eternal crown'd :
 Nor once her flying foot approach'd the ground.
 Then taking wing from Athos' lofty steep,
 She speeds to Lemnos o'er the rolling deep.
 And seeks the cave of Death's half-brother, Sleep. 265
 'Sweet pleasing Sleep !' (Saturnia thus began)
 'Who spread'st thy empire o'er each god and man ;
 'If e'er obsequious to thy Juno's will,
 'O Power of Slumbers ! hear, and favour still.
 'Shed thy soft dews on Jove's immortal eyes, 270
 'While sunk in love's entrancing joys he lies.
 'A splendid footstool, and a throne, that shine
 'With gold unfading. Somnus, shall be thine ;
 'The work of Vulcan, to indulge thy ease,
 'When wine and feasts thy golden humours please.' 275
 'Imperial dame,' (the balmy power replies.)
 'Great Saturn's heir, and empress of the skies !
 'O'er other gods I spread my easy chain ;
 'The sire of all, old Ocean, owns my reign,
 'And his hush'd waves lie silent on the main. 280
 'But how, unbidden, shall I dare to steep :
 'Jove's awful temples in the dew of sleep ?
 'Long since, too venturous, at thy bold command,
 'On those eternal lids I laid my hand ;
 'What time, deserting Ilion's wasted plain, 285
 'His conquering son, Alcides, plough'd the main :
 'When lo ! the deeps arise, the tempests roar,
 'And drive the hero to the Coan shore :
 'Great Jove, awaking, shook the bless'd abodes
 'With rising wrath, and tumbled gods on gods ; 290
 'Me chief he sought, and from the realms on high
 'Had hurl'd indignant to the nether sky,

‘But gentle Night, to whom I fled for aid,
 ‘(The friend of earth and heaven,) her wings display’d;
 ‘Empower’d the wrath of gods and men to tame,
 ‘E’en Jove rever’d the venerable dame.’ 295

‘Vain are thy fears,’ (the queen of heaven replies,
 And, speaking, rolls her large majestic eyes;)
 ‘Think’st thou that Troy has Jove’s high favour won,
 ‘Like great Alcides, his all-conquering son? 300
 ‘Hear, and obey the mistress of the skies,
 ‘Nor for the deed expect a vulgar prize:
 ‘For know, thy lov’d-one shall be ever thine,
 ‘The youngest Grace, Pasithaë the divine.’

‘Swear then’ (he said) ‘by those tremendous floods,
 ‘That roar through hell, and bind th’ invoking gods:
 ‘Let the great parent earth one hand sustain,
 ‘And stretch the other o’er the sacred main:
 ‘Call the black Titans that with Cronos dwell,
 ‘To hear and witness from the depths of hell; 310
 ‘That she, my lov’d-one, shall be ever mine,
 ‘The youngest Grace, Pasithaë the divine.’

The queen assents, and from th’ infernal bowers
 Invokes the sable subtartarean powers,
 And those who rule th’ inviolable floods, 315
 Whom mortals name the dread Titanian gods.

Then, swift as wind, o’er Lemnos’ smoky isle,
 They wing their way, and Imbrus’ sea-beat soil,
 Through air, unseen, involv’d in darkness glide,
 And light on Lectos, on the point of Ide; 320
 (Mother of savages, whose echoing hills
 Are heard resounding with a hundred rills;)

Fair Ida trembles underneath the god;
 Hush’d are her mountains, and her forests nod.
 There, on a fir, whose spiry branches rise 325
 To join its summit to the neighbouring skies,
 Dark in embowering shade, conceal’d from sight,
 Sat Sleep, in likeness of the bird of night.
 (Chalcis his name with those of heavenly birth,
 But called Cymindis by the race of earth.) 330

To Ida’s top successful Juno flies;
 Great Jove surveys her with desiring eyes:
 The god, whose lightning sets the heavens on fire,
 Through all his bosom feels the fierce desire;

* This was a bird, according to the Greek commentators, about the size of a hawk, entirely black. Clarke supposes that it was called Chalcis by the more learned, and Cymindis by the vulgar.

Fierce as when first by stealth he seiz'd her charms, 335
 Mix'd with her soul, and melted in her arms.
 Fix'd on her eyes he fed his eager look,
 Then press'd her hand, and then with transport spoke :
 ' Why comes my goddess from th' ethereal sky,
 ' And not her steeds and flaming chariot nigh !' 340
 Then she—' I haste to those remote abodes,
 ' Where the great parents of the deathless gods,
 ' The reverend Ocean and great Tethys, reign,
 ' On the last limits of the land and main.
 ' I visit these, to whose indulgent cares 345
 ' I owe the nursing of my tender years.
 ' For strife, I hear, has made that union cease,
 ' Which held so long this ancient pair in peace.
 ' The steeds, prepar'd my chariot to convey
 ' O'er earth and seas, and through th' aërial way, 350
 ' Wait under Ide : of thy superior power
 ' To ask consent, I leave th' Olympian bower ;
 ' Nor seek, unknown to thee, the sacred cells
 ' Deep under seas, where hoary Ocean dwells.'
 ' For that,' (said Jove) ' suffice another day ; 355
 ' But eager love denies the least delay.
 ' Let softer cares the present hour employ,
 ' And be these moments sacred all to joy.
 ' Ne'er did my soul so strong a passion prove,
 ' Or for an earthly, or a heavenly love ; 360
 ' Not when I press'd Ixion's matchless dame,
 ' Whence rose Pirithous, like the gods in fame.
 ' Not when fair Danaë felt the shower of gold
 ' Stream into life, whence Perseus brave and bold.
 ' Not thus I burn'd for either Theban dame, 365
 ' (Bacchus from this, from that Alcides came,)
 ' Not Phoenix' daughter,<sup>5</sup> beautiful and young,
 ' Whence godlike Prodamanth and Minos sprung ;
 ' Not thus I burn'd for fair Latona's face,
 ' Nor comelier Ceres' more majestic grace. 370
 ' Not thus e'en for thyself I felt desire,
 ' As now my veins receive the pleasing fire.'
 He spoke ; the goddess with the charming eyes
 Glows with celestial red, and thus replies :
 ' Is this a scene for love ? On Ida's height, 375
 ' Expos'd to mortal and immortal sight ;
 ' Our joys profan'd by each familiar eye ;
 ' The sport of heaven, and fable of the sky !

<sup>5</sup> Europa.

'How shall I e'er review the bless'd abodes,
 'Or mix among the senate of the gods? 380
 'Shall I not think, that, with disorder'd charms,
 'All heaven beholds me recent from thy arms?
 'With skill divine has Vulcan form'd thy bower,
 'Sacred to love and to the genial hour;
 'If such thy will, to that recess retire, 385
 'And secret there indulge thy soft desire.'
 She ceas'd: and smiling with superior love,
 Thus answer'd mild the cloud-compelling Jove:
 'Not god nor mortal shall our joys behold,
 'Shaded with clouds, and circumfus'd in gold; 390
 'Not e'en the sun, who darts through heaven his rays,
 'And whose broad eye th' extended earth surveys.'
 Gazing he spoke, and, kindling at the view,
 His eager arms around the goddess threw.
 Glad Earth perceives, and from her bosom pours 395
 Unbidden herbs, and voluntary flowers;
 Thick new-born violets a soft carpet spread,
 And clustering lotos swell'd the rising bed,
 And sudden hyacinths the turf bestrow,
 And flamy crocus made the mountain glow. 400
 There golden clouds conceal the heavenly pair,
 Steep'd in soft joys, and circumfus'd with air;
 Celestial dews, descending o'er the ground,
 Perfume the mount, and breathe ambrosia round.
 At length with love and sleep's soft power oppress'd, 405
 The panting Thunderer nods, and sinks to rest.
 Now to the navy borne on silent wings,
 To Neptune's ear soft Sleep his message brings:
 Beside him sudden, unperceiv'd he stood,
 And thus with gentle words address'd the god: 410
 'Now Neptune! now, th' important hour employ,
 'To check awhile the haughty hopes of Troy:
 'While Jove yet rests, while yet my vapours shed
 'The golden vision round his sacred head;
 'For Juno's love, and Somnus' pleasing ties, 415
 'Have clos'd those awful and eternal eyes.'
 Thus having said, the power of slumber flew,
 On human lids to drop the balmy dew.
 Neptune, with zeal increas'd, renews his care,
 And towering in the foremost ranks of war, 420
 Indignant thus: 'Oh once of martial fame!
 'O Greeks! if yet ye can deserve the name!
 'This half-recover'd day shall Troy obtain!
 'Shall Hector thunder at your ships again?

' Lo, still he vaunts, and threats the fleet with fires, 425
 ' While stern Achilles in his wrath retires.
 ' One hero's loss too tamely you deplore,
 ' Be still yourselves, and we shall need no more.
 ' Oh yet, if glory any bosom warms,
 ' Brace on your firmest helms, and stand to arms : 430
 ' His strongest spear each valiant Grecian wield,
 ' Each valiant Grecian seize his broadest shield ;
 ' Let to the weak the lighter arms belong,
 ' The ponderous targe be wielded by the strong.
 ' Thus arm'd, not Hector shall our presence stay ; 435
 ' Myself, ye Greeks ! myself will lead the way.
 The troops assent ; their martial arms they change,
 The busy chiefs their banded legions range.
 The kings, though wounded, and oppress'd with pain,
 With helpful hands themselves assist the train. 440
 The strong and cumbrous arms the valiant wield,
 The weaker warrior takes a lighter shield. .
 Thus sheath'd in shining brass, in bright array
 The legions march, and Neptune leads the way :
 His brandish'd faulchion flames before their eyes, 445
 Like lightning flashing through the frightened skies.
 Clad in his might th' earth-shaking power appears ;
 Pale mortals tremble, and confess their fears.
 Troy's great defender stands alone unaw'd,
 Arms his proud host, and dares oppose a god : 450
 And lo ! the god and wondrous man appear ;
 ' The sea's stern ruler there, and Hector here.
 The roaring main, at her great master's call,
 Rose in huge ranks, and form'd a watery wall
 Around the ships, seas hanging o'er the shores ; 455
 Both armies join ; earth thunders, ocean roars.
 Not half so loud the bellowing deeps resound,
 When stormy winds disclose the dark profound ;
 Less loud the winds that from th' Æolian hall
 Roar through the woods, and make whole forests fall ; 460
 Less loud the woods, when flames in torrents pour,
 Catch the dry mountain and its shades devour.
 With such a rage the meeting hosts are driven,
 And such a clamour shakes the sounding heaven.
 The first bold javelin, urg'd by Hector's force, 465
 Direct at Ajax' bosom wing'd its course ;
 But there no pass the crossing belts afford,
 (One brac'd his shield, and one sustain'd his sword.)
 Then back the disappointed Trojan drew,
 And curs'd the lance that unavailing flew : 470

But 'scap'd not Ajax ; his tempestuous hand
 A ponderous stone up-heaving from the sand,
 (Where heaps, laid loose beneath the warrior's feet,
 Or serv'd to ballast, or to prop the fleet.)
 Toss'd round and round, the missive marble flings ; 475
 On the raz'd shield the falling ruin rings,
 Full on his breast and throat with force descends ;
 Nor deaden'd there its giddy fury spends,
 But, whirling on, with many a fiery round,
 Smokes in the dust, and ploughs into the ground. 480
 As when the bolt, red-hissing from above,
 Darts on the consecrated plant of Jove,
 The mountain-oak in flaming ruin lies,
 Black from the blow, and smokes of sulphur rise :
 Stiff with amaze the pale beholders stand, 485
 And own the terrors of th' almighty hand !
 So lies great Hector prostrate on the shore ;
 His slacken'd hand deserts the lance it bore ;
 His following shield the fallen chief o'erspread ;
 Beneath his helmet dropp'd his fainting head ; 490
 His load of armour, sinking to the ground,
 Clanks on the field : a dead and hollow sound.
 Loud shouts of triumph fill the crowded plain ;
 Greece sees, in hope, Troy's great defender slain :
 All spring to seize him : storms of arrows fly ; 495
 And thicker javelins intercept the sky.
 In vain an iron tempest hisses round :
 He lies protected and without a wound.
 Polydamas, Agenor the divine,
 The pious warrior of Anchises' line, 500
 And each bold leader of the Lysian band,
 With covering shields (a friendly circle) stand.
 His mournful followers, with assistant care,
 The groaning hero to his chariot bear ;
 His foaming coursers, swifter than the wind ~~wind~~ 505
 Speed to the town, and leave the war behind.
 When now they touch'd the mead's enamell'd side,
 Where gentle Xanthus rolls his easy tide,
 With watery drops the chief they sprinkle round,
 Placed on the margin of the flowery ground. 510
 Rais'd on his knees, he now ejects the gore ;
 Now faints anew, low sinking on the shore :
 By fits he breathes, half views the fleeting skies,
 And seals again, by fits, his swimming eyes.
 Soon as the Greeks the chief's retreat beheld, 515
 With double fury each invades the field.

Oilean Ajax first his javelin sped,
 Pierced by whose point the son of Enops bled ;
 (Satnius the brave, whom beauteous Neis bore
 Amidst her flocks, on Satnio's silver shore.) 520
 Struck through the belly's rim, the warrior lies
 Supine, and shades eternal veil his eyes.
 An arduous battle rose around the dead ;
 By turns the Greeks, by turns the Trojans, bled.
 Fir'd with revenge, Polydamas drew near, 525
 And at Prothœnor shook the trembling spear :
 The driving javelin through his shoulder thrust,
 He sinks to earth, and grasps the bloody dust.
 ' Lo ! thus' (the victor cries) ' we rule the field,
 ' And thus their arms the race of Panthus wield : 530
 ' From this unerring hand there flies no dart,
 ' But bathes its point within a Grecian heart.
 ' Propp'd on that spear to which thou ow'st thy fall.
 ' Go, guide thy darksome steps to Pluto's dreary hall.'
 He said, and sorrow touch'd each Argive breast ; 535
 The soul of Ajax burn'd above the rest.
 As by his side the groaning warrior fell,
 At the fierce foe he lanced his piercing steel ;
 The foe, reclining, shunn'd the flying death ;
 But Fate, Archilochus,<sup>7</sup> demands thy breath ; 540
 Thy lofty birth no succour could impart,
 The wings of death o'ertook thee on the dart :
 Swift to perform heaven's fatal will it fled,
 Full on the juncture of the neck and head,
 And took the joint, and cut the nerves in twain ; 545
 The drooping head first tumbled to the plain :
 So just the stroke, that yet the body stood
 Erect, then roll'd along the sands in blood.
 ' Here, proud Polydamas, here turn thy eyes !'
 (The towering Ajax loud-insulting cries :) 550
 ' Say, is this chief, extended on the plain,
 ' A worthy vengeance for Prothœnor slain ?
 ' Mark well his port ! his figure and his face
 ' Nor speak him vulgar, nor of vulgar race ;
 ' Some lines, methinks, may make his lineage known, 555
 ' Antenor's brother, or perhaps his son.'
 He spake, and smil'd severe, for well he knew
 The bleeding youth : Troy sadden'd at the view.
 But furious Acamas avenged his cause ;
 As Promachus his slaughter'd brother<sup>8</sup> draws, 560

He pierced his heart—' Such fate attends you all,
 ' Proud Argives ! destin'd by our arms to fall.
 ' Not Troy alone, but haughty Greece, shall share
 ' The toils, the sorrows, and the wounds, of war.
 ' Behold your Promachus depriv'd of breath, 565
 ' A victim ow'd to my brave brother's death.
 ' Not unappeas'd he enters Pluto's gate,
 ' Who leaves a brother to revenge his fate.'
 Heart-piercing anguish struck the Grecian host,
 But touch'd the breast of bold Peneleus most : 570
 At the proud boaster he directs his course ;
 The boaster flies, and shuns superior force.
 But young Ilioneus receiv'd the spear ;
 Ilioneus, his father's only care :
 (Phorbas the rich, of all the Trojan train 575
 Whom Hermes lov'd, and taught the arts of gain :)
 Full in his eye the weapon chanc'd to fall,
 And from the fibres scoop'd the rooted ball,
 Drove through the neck, and hurl'd him to the plain :
 He lifts his miserable arms in vain ! 580
 Swift his broad faulchion fierce Peneleus spread,
 And from the spouting shoulders struck his head ;
 To earth at once the head and helmet fly :
 The lance, yet sticking through the bleeding eye,
 The victor seiz'd ; and as aloft he shook 585
 The gory visage, thus insulting spoke :
 ' Trojans ! your great Ilioneus behold !
 ' Haste, to his father let the tale be told.
 ' Let his high roofs resound with frantic woe
 ' Such, as the house of Promachus must know ; 590
 ' Let doleful tidings greet his mother's ear,
 ' Such, as to Promachus' sad spouse we bear ;
 ' When we victorious shall to Greece return,
 ' And the pale matron in our triumphs mourn.'
 Dreadful he spoke, then toss'd the head on high ; 595
 The Trojans hear, they tremble, and they fly :
 Aghast they gaze around the fleet and wall,
 And dread the ruin that impends on all.
 Daughters of Jove ! that on Olympus shine,
 Ye all beholding, all-recording Nine !
 O say, when Neptune made proud Ilion yield,
 What chief, what hero, first imbrued the field ?
 Of all the Grecians, what immortal name,
 And whose bless'd trophies, will ye raise to fame ?
 Thou first, great Ajax ! on th' ensanguin'd plain 605
 Laid Hyrtius, leader of the Mysian train.

Phalces and Mermer, Nestor's son o'erthrew,
 Bold Merion, Morys and Hippotion slew.
 Strong Periphætēs and Prothoön bled,
 By Teucer's arrows mingled with the dead. 610
 Pierced in the flank by Menelaus' steel,
 His people's pastor, Hyperenor fell ;
 Eternal darkness wrapp'd the warrior round,
 And the fierce soul came rushing through the wound.
 But stretch'd in heaps before Oileus' son, 615
 Fall mighty numbers, mighty numbers run
 Ajax the less, of all the Grecian race
 Skill'd in pursuit, and swiftest in the chase.

BOOK XV.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE FIFTH BATTLE, AT THE SHIPS ; AND THE ACTS OF AJAX.

Jupiter, awaking, sees the Trojans repulsed from the trenches, Hector in a swoon, and Neptune at the head of the Greeks ; he is highly incensed at the artifice of Juno, who appeases him by her submissions ; she is then sent to Iris and Apollo. Juno, repairing to the assembly of the gods, attempts with extraordinary address to incense them against Jupiter ; in particular she touches Mars with a violent resentment ; he is ready to take arms, but is prevented by Minerva. Iris and Apollo obey the orders of Jupiter ; Iris commands Neptune to leave the battle, to which, after much reluctance and passion, he consents. Apollo re-inspires Hector with vigour, brings him back to the battle, marches before him with his ægis, and turns the fortune of the fight. He breaks down great part of the Grecian wall ; the Trojans rush in, and attempt to fire the first line of the fleet, but are yet repelled by the greater Ajax with a prodigious slaughter.

Now in swift flight they pass the trench profound,
 And many a chief lay gasping on the ground ;
 Then stopp'd and panted, where the chariots lie ;
 Fear on their cheek, and horror in their eye.
 Meanwhile, awaken'd from his dream of love, 5
 On Ida's summit sat imperial Jove ;
 Round the wide fields he cast a careful view,
 There saw the Trojans fly, the Greeks pursue ;
 These proud in arms, those scatter'd o'er the plain ;
 And, midst the war, the monarch of the main. 10

Not far, great Hector on the dust he spies,
 (His sad associates round with weeping eyes,)
 Ejecting blood, and panting yet for breath,
 His senses wandering to the verge of death.
 The god beheld him with a pitying look, 15
 And thus, incens'd, to fraudulent Juno spoke :
 ' O thou, still adverse to th' eternal will,
 ' For ever studious in promoting ill !
 ' Thy arts have made the godlike Hector yield,
 ' And driven his conquering squadrons from the field. 20
 ' Canst thou, unhappy in thy wiles ! withstand
 ' Our power immense, and brave th' almighty hand ?
 ' Hast thou forgot, when, bound and fix'd on high,
 ' From the vast concave of the spangled sky,
 ' I hung thee trembling in a golden chain ; 25
 ' And all the raging gods oppos'd in vain ?
 ' Headlong I hurl'd them from th' Olympian hall,
 ' Stunn'd in the whirl, and breathless with the fall.
 ' For godlike Hercules these deeds were done,
 ' Nor seem'd the vengeance worthy such a son ;<sup>1</sup> 30
 ' When, by thy wiles induced, fierce Boreas toss'd
 ' The shipwreck'd hero on the Coan coast :
 ' Him through a thousand forms of death I bore,
 ' And sent to Argos, and his native shore.
 ' Hear this, remember, and our fury dread, 35
 ' Nor pull th' unwilling vengeance on thy head ;
 ' Lest arts and blandishments successless prove,
 ' Thy soft deceits, and well-dissembled love.'
 The Thunderer spoke : imperial Juno mourn'd,
 And, trembling, these submissive words return'd : 40
 ' By every oath that powers immortal ties,
 ' The foodful earth, and all infolding skies,
 ' By thy black waves, tremendous Styx ! that flow
 ' Through the drear realms of gliding ghosts below :
 ' By the dread honours of thy sacred head, 45
 ' And that unbroken vow, our virgin bed !
 ' Not by my arts the ruler of the main
 ' Steeps Troy in blood, and ranges round the plain :
 ' By his own ardour, his own pity, sway'd
 ' To help his Greeks ; he fought, and disobey'd : 50
 ' Else had thy Juno better counsels given,
 ' And taught submission to the sire of heaven.'
 ' Thinkst thou with me ? fair empress of the skies !'
 ' Th' immortal father with a smile replies : )

<sup>1</sup> That is, it did not appear sufficient.

'Then soon the haughty sea-god shall obey, 55
 'Nor dare to act, but when we point the way.
 'If truth inspires thy tongue, proclaim our will
 'To yon bright synod on th' Olympian hill;
 'Our high decree let various Iris know,
 * 'And call the god that bears the silver bow. 60
 'Let her descend, and from th' embattled plain
 'Command the sea-god to his watery reign:
 'While Phœbus hastes great Hector to prepare
 'To rise afresh, and once more wake the war;
 'His labouring bosom re-inspires with breath, 65
 'And calls his senses from the verge of death.
 'Greece, chas'd by Troy e'en to Achilles' fleet,
 'Shall fall by thousands at the hero's feet.
 'He, not untouch'd with pity, to the plain
 'Shall send Patroclus, but shall send in vain. 70
 'What youths he slaughters under Ilion's walls
 'E'en my loved son, divine Sarpedon, falls!
 'Vanquish'd at last by Hector's lance he lies,
 'Then, not till then, shall great Achilles rise:
 'And lo! that instant, godlike Hector dies. 75
 'From that great hour the war's whole fortune turns,
 'Pallas assists, and lofty Ilion burns.
 'Not till that day shall Jove relax his rage,
 'Nor one of all the heavenly host engage
 'In aid of Greece. The promise of a god 80
 'I gavo, and seal'd it with th' almighty nod,
 'Achilles' glory to the stars to raise;
 'Such was our word, and fate the word obeys.'
 The trembling queen (th' almighty order given)
 Swift from th' Idæan summit shot to heaven. 85
 As some wayfaring man, who wanders o'er,
 In thought, a length of lands he trod before,
 Sends forth his active mind from place to place,
 Joins hill to dale, and measures space with space:
 So swift flew Juno to the blest abodes, 90
 If thought of man can match the speed of gods.
 There sat the powers in awful synod plac'd:
 They bow'd, and made obeisance as she pass'd,
 Through all the brazen dome: with goblets crown'd
 They hail her queen; the nectar streams around. 95
 Fair Themis first presents the golden bowl,
 And anxious asks what cares disturb her soul?
 To whom the white-arm'd goddess thus replies:
 'Enough thou know'st the tyrant of the skies;
 'Severely bent his purpose to fulfil, 100
 'Unmov'd his mind, and unrestrain'd his will.

'Go thou, the feasts of heaven attend thy call;
 'Bid the crown'd nectar circle round the hall;
 'But Jove shall thunder through th' ethereal dome
 'Such stern decrees, such threaten'd woes to come, 105
 'As soon shall freeze mankind with dire surprise,
 'And damp th' eternal banquets of the skies.'

The goddess said, and sullen took her place:
 Blank horror sadden'd each celestial face.
 To see the gathering grudge in every breast, 110
 Smiles on her lips a spleenful joy express'd.
 While on her wrinkled front, and eyebrow bent,
 Sat steadfast care, and lowering discontent.

Thus she proceeds: 'Attend, ye powers above!'
 'But know, 'tis madness to contest with Jove: 115
 'Supreme he sits; and sees, in pride of sway,
 'Your vassal godheads grudgingly obey;
 'Fierce in the majesty of power controls,
 'Shakes all the thrones of heaven, and bends the poles.
 'Submiss, immortals! all he wills, obey; 120
 'And thou, great Mars, begin and show the way.
 'Behold Ascalaphus! behold him die,

'But dare not murmur, dare not vent a sigh;
 'Thy own lov'd boasted offspring lies o'erthrown,
 'If that lov'd boasted offspring be thy own.' 125

Stern Mars, with anguish for his slaughter'd son,
 Smote his rebelling breast, and fierce begun:
 'Thus then, immortals! thus shall Mars obey? •
 'Forgive me, gods, and yield my vengeance way: 130
 'Descending first to yon forbidden plain,
 'The god of battles dares avenge the slain;
 'Dares, though the thunder bursting o'er my head
 'Should hurl me blazing on those heaps of dead.'

With that, he gives command to Fear and Flight
 To join his rapid coursers for the fight: 135
 Then grim in arms, with hasty vengeance flies;
 Arms, that reflect a radiance through the skies.

2 The ancients have affirmed of Homer that examples of all kinds of oratory are to be found in him. The present speech of Juno is considered a masterpiece—she seems to say one thing, and persuades another. For while she is only declaring to the gods the orders of Jupiter, at the same time that she tells them they must obey, she fills them with a reluctance to do it. By representing so strongly the superiority of his power, she makes them uneasy at it, and by particularly advising that god to submit, whose temper could least brook it, she incites him to downright rebellion. Nothing can be more sly and artfully provoking, than that stroke on the death of his darling son. Pope.

And now had Jove, by bold rebellion driven,
 Discharging his wrath on half the host of heaven ;
 But Pallas springing through the bright abode, 140
 Starts from her azure throne to calm the god
 Struck for th' immortal race with timely fear,
 From frantic Mars she snatch'd the shield and spear ;
 Then the huge helmet lifting from his head,
 Thus to th' impetuous homicide she said . 145
 ' By what wild passion, furious ' art thou toss'd ?
 ' Striv'st thou with Jove ? thou art already lost
 ' Shall not the Thunderer's dread command restrain,
 ' And was imperial Juno heard in vain ?
 ' Back to the skies wouldst thou with shame be driven, 150
 ' And in thy guilt involve the host of heaven ?
 ' Thion and Greece no more shall Jove engage ,
 ' The skies would yield an ampler scene of rage,
 ' Guilty and guiltless find an equal fate,
 ' And one vast ruin overwhelm th' Olympian state 155
 ' Cease then thy offspring's death unjust to call ,
 ' Heroes as great have died, and yet shall fall
 ' Why should heaven's law with foolish man comply.
 ' Exempted from the race ordain'd to die ?'
 This menace fix'd the warrior to his throne ; 160
 Sullen he sat, and curb'd the rising groan.
 Then Juno call'd (Jove's orders to obey)
 The winged Iris, and the god of day
 ' Go wait the Thunderer's will,' (Saturnia cried,) 165
 ' On yon tall summit of the fountful Ide
 ' There in the Father's awful presence stand,
 ' Receive and execute his dread command '
 She said, and sat The god that gilds the day,
 And various Iris, wing their airy way.
 Swift as the wind, to Ida's hills they came ; 170
 (Fair nurse of fountains, and of savage game ,)
 There sat th' Eternel, he whose nod controls
 The trembling world, and shakes the steady poles.
 Veil'd in a mist of fragrance him they found,
 With clouds of gold and purple circled round 175
 Well-pleas'd the Thunderer saw their earnest care,
 And prompt obedience to the queen of air ,

* This couplet is, as Wakefield observes, so obscure as to be nearly unintelligible The original is, "It would be difficult to save (from death) the race and offspring of all men." Cowper gives,

——— Gods themselves must yield
 Their human offspring to the stroke of fate

Then (while a smile serenes his awful brow)
Commands the goddess of the showery bow :

‘ This ! descend, and what we here ordain 180

‘ Report to yon mad tyrant of the main,
‘ Bid him from fight to his own deeps repair,
‘ Or breathe from slaughter in the fields of air.

‘ If he refuse, then let him timely weigh
‘ Our elder birthright, and superior sway. 185

‘ How shall his rashness stand the dire alarms,
‘ If heaven’s omnipotence descend in arms ?

‘ Strives he with me, by whom his power was given,

‘ And is there equal to the lord of heaven ?’

‘ Th’ Almighty spoke ; the goddess wing’d her flight 190
To sacred Ilion from th’ Idæan height.

Swift as the rattling hail or floecy snows

Drive through the skies, when Boreas fiercely blows ;

So from the clouds descending Iris falls ;

And to blue Neptune thus the goddess calls : 195

‘ Attend the mandate of the sire above,

‘ In me behold the messenger of Jove :

‘ He bids thee from forbidden wars repair

‘ To thy own deeps, or to the fields of air.

‘ This if refus’d, he bids thee timely weigh 200

‘ His elder birthright, and superior sway.

‘ How shall thy rashness stand the dire alarms,

‘ If heaven’s omnipotence descend in arms ?

‘ Striv’st thou with him, by whom all power is given ?

‘ And art thou equal to the lord of heaven ?’ 205

‘ What means the haughty sovereign of the skies ?’

( The king of ocean thus, incens’d, replies )

‘ Rule as he will his portion’d realms on high,

‘ No vassal god, nor of his train, am I.

‘ Three brother deities from Saturn came, 210

‘ And ancient Rhea, earth’s immortal dame

‘ Assign’d by lot, our triple rule we know :

‘ Infernal Pluto sways the shades below ;

‘ O’er the wide clouds, and o’er the starry plain,

‘ Ethereal Jove extends his high domain ; 215

‘ My court beneath the hoary waves I keep,

‘ And hush the roarings of the sacred deep :

‘ Olympus, and this earth, in common lie ;

‘ What claim has here the tyrant of the sky ?

‘ Far in the distant clouds let him control, 220

‘ And awe the younger brothers of the pole ;

‘ There to his children his commands be given.

‘ The trembling, servile, second race of heaven.’

'And must I then,' (said she,) 'O sire of floods!
 'Bear this fierce answer to the king of gods?' 225
 'Correct it yet, and change thy rash intent;
 'A noble mind disdains not to repent.
 'To elder brothers guardian fiends are given,
 'To scourge the wretch insulting them and heaven.
 'Great is the profit,' (thus the god rejoin'd,) 230
 'When ministers are bless'd with prudent mind:
 'Warn'd by thy words, to powerful Jove I yield,
 'And quit, though angry, the contended field.
 'Not but his threats with justice I disclaim,
 'The same our honours, and our birth the same. 235
 'If yet, forgetful of his promise given
 'To Hermes, Pallas, and the queen of heaven,
 'To favour Iliou, that perfidious place,
 'He breaks his faith<sup>b</sup> with half th' ethereal race;
 'Give him to know, unless the Grecian train 240
 'Lay yon proud structures level with the plain,
 'Howe'er th' offence by other gods be pass'd,
 'The wrath of Neptune shall for ever last.'
 Thus speaking, furious from the field he strode,
 And plung'd into the bosom of the flood 245
 The lord of thunders from his lofty height
 Beheld, and thus bespoke the source of light:
 'Behold! the god whose liquid arms are hurl'd
 'Around the globe, whose earthquakes rock the world,
 'Desists at length his rebel-war to wage, 250
 'Seeks his own seas, and trembles at our rage:
 'Else had my wrath, heaven's thrones all shaking round,
 'Burn'd to the bottom of his seas profound;
 'And all the gods that round old Saturn dwell,
 'Had heard the thunders to the deeps of hell. 255
 'Well was the crime, and well the vengeance spar'd,
 'E'en power immense had found such battle hard.
 'Go thou, my son! the trembling Greeks alarm,
 'Shake my broad ægis on thy active arm:
 'Be godlike I Hector thy peculiar care, 260
 'Swell his bold heart, and urge his strength to war:

<sup>a</sup> Cowper's version is,

— And on the elder-born

'Eriannys, with her vengeful sisters, waits.

And he gives this note. "The Furies were supposed the appointed avengers of all injury and irreverence by which the younger might offend the elder. This was one of the fences by which the ancients, always scrupulously attentive to the claims of seniority, guarded it from insult."

<sup>b</sup> That is, breaks his faith, in order to favour Iliou.

' Let Ilion conquer, till the Achaian train
 ' Fly to their ships and Hollespont again :
 ' Then Greece shall breathe from toils.' The godhead said ;
 His will divine the son of Jove obey'd. 265
 Not half so swift the sailing falcon flies,
 That drives a turtle through the liquid skies ;
 As Phœbus, shooting from th' Idaan brow,
 Glides down the mountain to the plain below.
 There Hector seated by the stream he sees, 270
 His sense returning with the coming breeze ;
 Again his pulses beat, his spirits rise ;
 Again his lov'd companions meet his eyes ;
 Jove thinking of his pains, they pass'd away.
 To whom the god who gives the golden day : 275
 ' Why sits great Hector from the field so far,
 ' What grief, what wound, withholds him from the war ?'
 The fainting hero, as the vision bright
 Stood shaming o'er him, half unseal'd his sight :
 ' What bless'd immortal, with commanding breath, 280
 ' Thus wakens Hector from the sleep of death ?
 ' Has fame not told, how, while my trusty sword
 ' Bath'd Greece in slaughter, and her battle gor'd,
 ' The mighty Ajax with a deadly blow
 ' Had almost sunk me to the shades below ? 285
 ' E'en yet, methinks, the gliding ghosts I spy,
 ' And hell's black horrors swim before my eye.'
 To him Apollo : ' Be no more dismay'd ;
 ' See, and be strong ! the Thunderer sends thee aid :
 ' Behold ! thy Phœbus shall his arms employ, 290
 ' Phœbus, propitious still to thee and Troy.
 ' Inspire thy warriors then with manly force,
 ' And to the ships impel thy rapid horse :
 ' E'en I will make thy fiery coursers' way,
 ' And drive the Grecians headlong to the sea.' 295
 Thus to bold Hector spoke the son of Jove,
 And breath'd immortal ardour from above.
 As when the pamper'd steed, with reins unbound,
 Breaks from his stall, and pours along the ground ;
 With ample strokes he rushes to the flood, 300
 To bathe his sides and cool his fiery blood :
 His head, now freed, he tosses to the skies :
 His mane dishevell'd o'er his shoulders flies :
 He snuffs the females in the well-known plain,
 And springs, exulting, to his fields again : 305
 Urg'd by the voice divine, thus Hector flew,
 Full of the god ; and all his hosts pursue.

As when the force of men and dogs combin'd
 Invade the mountain-goat or branching hind ;
 Far from the hunter's rage secure they lie 310
 Close in the rock (not fated yet to die);
 When lo ! a lion shoots across the way !
 They fly : at once the chasers and the prey :
 So Greece, that late in conquering troops pursued,
 And mark'd their progress through the ranks in blood, 315
 Soon as they see the furious chief appear,
 Forget to vanquish, and consent to fear.

Thoas with grief observ'd his dreadful course,
 Thoas, the bravest of th' Ætolian force ;
 Skill'd to direct the javelin's distant flight, 320
 And bold to combat in the standing fight ;
 Nor more in counsels fam'd for solid sense,
 Than winning words and heavenly eloquence.
 ' Gods ! what portent ' (he cried) ' these eyes invades ?
 ' Lo, Hector rises from the Stygian shades ! 325
 ' We saw him, late, by thundering Ajax kill'd ;
 ' What god restores him to the frighted field ;
 ' And not content that half of Greece lie slain,
 ' Pours new destruction on her sons again ?
 ' He comes not, Jove ! without thy powerful will ; 330
 ' Lo ! still he lives, pursues, and conquers still !
 ' Yet hear my counsel, and his worst withstand ;
 ' The Greek's main body to the fleet command :
 ' But let the few whom brisker spirits warm,
 ' Stand the first onset, and provoke the storm : 335
 ' Thus point your arms ; and when such foes appear,
 ' Fierce as he is, let Hector learn to fear.'

The warrior spoke, the listening Greeks obey,
 Thickening their ranks, and form a deep array.
 Each Ajax, Teucer, Merion gave command, 340
 The valiant leader of the Cretan band,
 And Mars-like Meğes : these the chiefs excite,
 Approach the foe, and meet the coming fight.
 Behind, unnumber'd multitudes attend
 To flank the navy, and the shores defend. 345
 Full on the front the pressing Trojans bear,
 And Hector first came towering to the war.
 Phoebus himself the rushing battle led ;
 A veil of clouds involv'd his radiant head :
 High-held before him, Jove's enormous shield 350
 Portentous shone, and shaded all the field :
 Vulcan to Jove th' immortal gift consign'd,
 To scatter hosts, and terrify mankind.

The Greeks expect the shock ; the clamours rise
 From different parts, and mingle in the skies. 355
 Dire was the hiss of darts, by heroes flung,
 And arrows leaping from the bow-string sung ;
 These drink the life of generous warriors slain ;
 Those guiltless fall, and thirst for blood in vain.
 As long as Phœbus bore unmov'd the shield, 360
 Sat doubtful Conquest hovering on the field ;
 But when aloft he shakes it in the skies,
 Shouts in their ears, and lightens in their eyes,
 Deep horror seizes every Grecian breast,
 Their force is humbled, and their fear confess'd. 365
 So flies a herd of oxen, scatter'd wide,
 No swain to guard them, and no day to guide,
 When two fell lions from the mountain come,
 And spread the carnage through the shady gloom.
 Impending Phœbus pours around them fear, 370
 And Troy and Hector thunder in the rear.
 Heaps fall on heaps : the slaughter Hector leads ;
 First, great Arceilas, then Sticheus bleeds ;
 One to the bold Bœotians ever dear,
 And one Menestheus' friend, and fam'd compeer. 375
 Medon and Iasus, Æneas sped ;
 This sprung from Phelus, and tū' Athenians led ;
 But hapless Medon from Oileus came ;
 Tim Ajax honour'd with a brother's name.
 Though born of lawless love : from home expell'd, 380
 A banish'd man, in Phylacô he dwell'd,
 Press'd by the vengeance of an angry wife ;
 Troy ends, at last, his labours and his life.
 Mecystes next, Polydamas o'erthrew ;
 And thee, brave Clonius ! great Agenor slew. 385
 By Paris, Deiochus inglorious dies,
 Pierced through the shoulder as he basely flies.
 Polites' arm laid Echius on the plain ;
 Stretch'd on one heap, the victors spoil the slain.
 The Greeks dismay'd, confus'd, disperse or fall, 390
 Some seek the trench, some skulk behind the wall ;
 While these fly trembling, others pant for breath,
 And o'er the slaughter stalks gigantic death.
 On rush'd bold Hector, gloomy as the night,
 Forbids to plunder, animates the fight, 395
 Points to the fleet : ' For, by the gods, who flies,
 ' Who dares but linger, by this hand he dies ;
 ' No weeping sister his cold eye shall close,
 ' No friendly hand his funeral pyre compose.

- ' Who stops to plunder at this signal hour, 400
 ' The birds shall tear him, and the dogs devour.'
 Furious he said ; the smarting scourge resounds ;
 The coursers fly ; the smoking chariot bounds ;
 The hosts rush on ; loud clamours shake the shore ;
 The horses thunder, earth and ocean roar ! 405
 Apollo, planted at the trench's bound,
 Push'd at the bank ; down sunk th' enormous mound.
 Roll'd in the ditch the heapy ruin lay ;
 A sudden road ! a long and ample way.
 O'er the dread fosse (a late unpervious space) 410
 Now steeds, and men, and cars tumultuous pass.
 The wondering crowds, the downward level trod ;
 Before them flam'd the shield, and march'd the god.
 Then with his hand he shook the mighty wall ;
 And lo ! the turrets nod, the bulwarks fall. 415
 Easy, as when ashore an infant stands.
 And draws imagin'd houses in the sands ;
 The sportive wanton, pleas'd with some new play,
 Sweeps the slight works and fashion'd domes away.
 Thus vanish'd, at thy touch, the towers and walls ; 420
 The toil of thousands in a moment falls.
 The Grecians gaze around with wild despair,
 Confus'd, and weary all the powers with prayer ;
 Exhort their men, with praises, threats, commands ;
 And urge the gods, with voices, eyes, and hands. 425
 Experience'd Nestor chief obeats the skies,
 And weeps his country with a father's eyes :
 ' O Jove ! if ever, on his native shore,
 ' One Greek enrich'd thy shrine with offer'd gore ;
 ' If e'er in hope our country to behold, 430
 ' We paid the fatted firstlings of the fold ;
 ' If e'er thou sign'st our wishes with thy nod
 ' Perform the promise of a gracious god !
 ' This day preserve our navies from the flame,
 ' And save the reliques of the Grecian name.' 435
 Thus pray'd the sage : th' Eternal gave consent,
 And peals of thunder shook the firmament.
 Presumptuous Troy mistook th' accepting sign,
 And catch'd new fury at the voice divine. *
 As, when black tempests mix the seas and skies, 440
 The roaring deeps in watery mountains rise,
 Above the sides of some tall ship ascend.
 Its womb they deluge, and its ribs they rend :
 Thus loudly roaring, and overpowering all,
 Mount the thick Trojans up the Grecian wall ; 445

Legions on legions from each side arise :
 Thick sound the keels ; the storm of arrows flies :
 Fiercely on the ships above, the cars below,
 These wield the mace, and those the javelin throw.

While thus the thunder of the battle rag'd, 450
 And labouring armies round the works engag'd ;
 Still in the tent Patroclus sat, to tend
 The good Eurypylus, his wounded friend.

He sprinkles healing balms, to anguish kind,
 And adds discourse, the medicine of the mind. 455

But when he saw, ascending up the fleet,
 Victorious Troy ; then, starting from his seat,
 With bitter groans his sorrows he express'd ;
 He wrings his hands, he beats his manly breast.

' Though yet thy state require redress,' (he cries.) 460

' Depart I must : what horrors strike my eyes !

' Charged with Achilles' high commands I go,<sup>a</sup>

' A mournful witness of this scene of woe :

' I haste to urge him, by his country's care,

' To rise in arms, and shine again in war. 465

' Perhaps some favouring god his soul may bend :

' The voice is powerful of a faithful friend.'

He spoke ; and, speaking, swifter than the wind
 Sprung from the tent, and left the war behind.

Th' embodied Greeks the fierce attack sustain, 470

But strive, though numerous, to repulse in vain ;

Nor could the Trojans, through that firm array,

Force, to the fleet and tents, th' impervious way.

As when a shipwright, with Palladian art,

Smooths the rough wood, and levels every part : 475

With equal hand he guides his whole design,

By the just rule, and the directing line :

The martial leaders, with like skill and care,

Preserved their line, and equal kept the war.

Brave deeds of arms through all the ranks were tried, 480

And every ship sustain'd an equal tide.

At one proud bark, high-towering o'er the fleet,

Ajax the great and godlike Hector meet : .

For one bright prize the matchless chiefs contend,

Nor this the ships can fire, nor that defend ; 485

One kept the shore, and one the vessel trod ;

That fix'd as fate, thus acted by a god.

<sup>a</sup> This verse startles the reader, and is no translation of the original, which is simply, " But I will hasten to Achilles, that I may incite him to take part in the battle."

The son of Clytius<sup>7</sup> in his daring hand,
 The deck approaching, shakes a flaming brand;
 But pierced by Telamon's huge lance expires;
 Thundering he falls, and drops th' extinguish'd fires. 490
 Great Hector view'd him with a sad survey,
 As stretch'd in dust before the stern he lay.
 'Oh! all of Trojan, all of Lycian race!
 'Stand to your arms, maintain this arduous space. 495
 'Lo! where the son of royal Clytius lies,
 'Ah save his arms, secure his obsequies!
 This said, his eager javelin sought the foe:
 But Ajax shunn'd the meditated blow.
 Not vainly yet the forceful lance was thrown;
 It stretch'd in dust unhappy Lycophron: 500
 An exile long, sustain'd at Ajax' board,
 A faithful servant to a foreign lord;
 In peace, in war, for ever at his side,
 Near his lov'd master, as he liv'd, he died. 505
 From the high poop he tumbles on the sand,
 And lies, a lifeless load, along the land.
 With anguish Ajax views the piercing sight,
 And thus inflames his brother to the fight:
 'Teucer, behold! extended on the shore. 510
 'Our friend, our lov'd companion! now no more!
 'Dear as a parent, with a parent's care
 'To fight our wars, he left his native air.
 'This death deplor'd to Hector's rage we owe;
 'Revenge, revenge it on the cruel foe. 515
 Where are those darts on which the fates attend?
 'And where the bow which Phœbus taught to bend?'
 Impatient Teucer, hastening to his aid,
 Before the chief his ample bow display'd;
 The well-stored quiver on his shoulders hung: 520
 Then hiss'd his arrow, and the bow-string sung.
 Clytus, Pisenor's son, renown'd in fame,
 ('To thee, Polydamas! an honour'd name,)
 Drove through the thickest of th' embattl'd plains
 The startling steeds, and shook his cager reins. 525
 As all on glory ran his ardent mind,
 The pointed death arrests him from behind:
 Through his fair neck the thrilling arrow flies;
 In youth's first bloom reluctantly he dies.
 Hurl'd from the lofty seat, at distance far. 530
 The headlong coursers spurn his empty car;

<sup>7</sup> Calator.

Till sad Polydamas the steeds restrain'd,
 And gave, Astynous, to thy careful hand :
 Then, fir'd to vengeance, rush'd amidst the foe :
 Rage edged his sword, and strengthen'd every blow. 535
 Once more bold Teucer, in his country's cause,
 At Hector's breast a chosen arrow draws :
 And had the weapon found the destin'd way,
 Thy fall, great Trojan ! had renown'd that day.
 But Hector was not doom'd to perish then : 540
 Th' all-wise disposer of the fates of men
 (Imperial Jove) his present death withstands ;
 Nor was such glory due to Teucer's hands.
 At his full stretch as the tough string he drew,
 Struck by an arm unseen, it burst in two : 545
 Down dropp'd the bow : the shaft with brazen head
 Fell innocent, and on the dust lay dead.
 Th' astonish'd archer to great Ajax cries :
 ' Some god prevents our destined enterprise :
 ' Some god, propitious to the Trojan foe, 550
 ' Has, from my arm unfailing, struck the bow,
 ' And broke the nerve my hands had twined with art,
 ' Strong to impel the flight of many a dart.'
 ' Since heaven commands it,' (Ajax made reply,) 555
 ' Dismiss the bow, and lay thy arrows by :
 ' Thy arms no less suffice the lance to wield,
 ' And quit the quiver for the ponderous shield,
 ' In the first ranks indulge thy thirst of fame,
 ' Thy brave example shall the rest inflame. 560
 ' Fierce as they are, by long successes vain,
 ' To force our fleet, or e'en a ship to gain,
 ' Asks toil, and sweat, and blood : their utmost might
 ' Shall find its match—No more ; 'tis ours to fight.'
 Then Teucer laid his faithless bow aside : 565
 The fourfold buckler o'er his shoulder tied ;
 On his brave head a crested helm he placed,
 With nodding horsehair formidably graced ;
 A dart, whose point with brass refulgent shines,
 The warrior wields ; and his great brother joins.
 This Hector saw, and thus express'd his joy : 570
 ' Ye troops of Lycia, Dardanus, and Troy !
 ' Be mindful of yourselves, your ancient fame,
 ' And spread your glory with the navy's flame.
 ' Jove is with us ; I saw his hand, but now,
 ' From the proud archer strike his vaunted bow. 575
 ' Indulgent Jove ! how plain thy favours shine,
 ' When happy nations bear the marks divine !

'How easy then to see the sinking state
 'Of realms accurs'd, deserted, reprobate !
 'Such is the fate of Greece, and such is ours : 580
 'Behold, ye warriors, and exert your powers.
 'Death is the worst ; a fate which all must try ;
 'And for our country 'tis a bliss to die.
 'The gallant man, though slain in fight he be,
 'Yet leaves his nation safe, his children free ; 585
 'Entails a debt on all the grateful state ;
 'His own brave friends shall glory in his fate ;
 'His wife live honour'd, all his race succeed,
 'And late posterity enjoy the deed !'
 This rous'd the soul in every Trojan breast. 590
 The godlike Ajax next his Greeks address'd :
 'How long, ye warriors of the Argive race,
 '(To generous Argos what a dire disgrace !)
 'How long on these cur's'd confines will ye lie,
 'Yet undetermin'd, or to live, or die ? 595
 'What hopes remain, what methods to retire,
 'If once your vessels catch the Trojan fire ?
 'Mark how the flames approach, how near they fall,
 'How Hector calls, and Troy obeys his call !
 'Not to the dance that dreadful voice invites ; 600
 'It calls to death, and all the rage of fights.
 'Tis now no time for wisdom<sup>s</sup> or debates ;
 'To your own hands are trusted all your fates :
 'And better far, in one decisive strife,
 'One day should end our labour, or our life, 605
 'Than keep this hard-got inch of barren sands.
 'Still press'd, and press'd by such inglorious hands.'
 The listening Grecians feel their leader's flame,
 And every kindling bosom pants for fame.
 Then mutual slaughters spread on either side ; 610
 By Hector here the Phocian Schedius died ;
 There, pierced by Ajax, sank Laodamas,
 Chief of the foot, of old Antenor's race.
 Polydamas laid Otus on the sand,
 The fierce commander of th' Æpeian band. 615
 His lance bold Meges at the victor threw ;
 The victor stooping, from the death withdrew,
 (That valied life, O Phoebus ! was thy care,)
 But Cræmus' bosom took the flying spear :

<sup>s</sup> Homer does not say this ; but, "There is no resolution or plan better for us than this, to bring our hands and might into close combat with the enemy."

His corpse fell bleeding on the slippery shore ; 620
 His radiant arms triumphant Meges bore.
 Dolops, the son of Lampus, rushes on,
 Sprung from the race of old Laomedon,
 And fam'd for prowess in a well-fought field ;
 He pierced the centre of his sounding shield : 625
 But Meges Phyleus' ample breast-plate wore,
 (Well known in fight on Selles' winding shore :
 For king Euphetes gave the golden mail,
 Compact, and firm with many a jointed scale,
 Which oft, in cities storm'd, and battles won, 630
 Had saved the father, and now saves the son.
 Full at the Trojan's head he urg'd his lance,
 Where the high plumes above the helmet dance,
 New-tinged with Tyrian dye : in dust below,
 Shorn from the crest, the purple honours glow 635
 Meantime their fight the Spartan king survey'd,
 And stood by Meges' side, a sudden aid,
 Through Dolops' shoulder urg'd his forceful dart,
 Which held its passage through the panting heart,
 And issued at his breast. With thundering sound 640
 The warrior falls extended on the ground.
 In rush the conquering Greeks to spoil the slain ;
 But Hector's voice excites his kindred train ;
 The hero most from Hicetaon sprung,
 Fierce Melanippus, gallant, brave, and young. 645
 Hé (e'er to Troy the Grecians cross'd the main)
 Fed his large oxen on Percote's plain ;
 But when oppress'd, his country claim'd his care.
 Return'd to Ilion, and excell'd in war :
 For this in Priam's court he held his place, 650
 Belov'd no less than Priam's royal race.
 Him Hector singled, as his troops he led,
 And thus inflam'd him, pointing to the dead .
 ' Lo, Melanippus ! lo where Dolops lies ;
 ' And is it thus our royal kinsman dies ? 655
 ' O'ermatch'd he falls ; to two at once a prey,
 ' And lo, they bear the bloody arms away !
 ' Come on—a distant war no longer wage,
 ' But hand to hand thy country's foes engage :
 ' Till Greece at once, and all her glory, end ; 660
 ' Or Ilion from her towery height descend,
 ' Heav'd from the lowest stone ; and bury all
 ' In one sad sepulchre, one common fall.'

* Meges wore the breast-plate of Phyleus his father, to whom it had been given by Euphetes, king of Ephyre, on the river Selleis in Elis.

Hector (thus said) rush'd forward on the foes :
 With equal ardour Melanippus glows . 665
 Then Ajax, thus , ' O Greeks ! respect your fame,
 ' Respect yourselves, and learn an honest shame :
 ' Let mutual reverence mutual warmth inspire,
 ' And catch from breast to breast the noble fire,
 ' On valour's side the odds of combat lie, 670
 ' The brave live glorious, or lamented die ,
 ' The wretch that trembles in the field of fame,
 ' Meets death, and worse than death, eternal shame.'
 His generous sense he not in vain imparts ,
 It sunk, and rooted in the Grecian hearts 675
 They join, they throng, they thicken at his call,
 And flank the navy with a brazen wall ;
 Shields touching shields, in order blaze above,
 And stop the Trojans, though impell'd by Jove.
 The fiery Spartan first, with loud applause, 680
 Warms the bold son of Nestor in his cause.
 ' Is there' (he said) ' in arms a youth like you,
 ' So strong to fight, so active to pursue ?
 ' Why stand you distant, nor attempt a deed ?
 ' Lift the bold lance, and make some Trojan bleed.' 685
 He said and backwards to the lines retir'd ,
 Forth rush'd the youth, with martial fury fir'd,
 Beyond the foremost ranks , his javelin he threw
 And round the black battalions cast his view.
 The troops of Troy recede with sudden fear, 690
 While the swift javelin hiss'd along in air.
 Advancing Melanippus met the dart
 With his bold breast, and felt it in his heart .
 Thundering he falls ; his falling arms resound,
 And his broad buckler rings against the ground. 695
 The victor leaps upon his prostrate prize ,
 Thus on a roe the well breath'd beagle flies,
 And rends his side, fresh-bleeding with the dart
 The distant hunter sent into his heart.
 Observing Hector to the rescue flew , 700
 Bold as he was, Antilochus withdrew .
 So when a savage, ranging o'er the plain,
 Has torn the shepherd's dog, or shepherd swain ;
 While, conscious of the deed, he glares around,
 And hears the gathering multitude resound, 705
 Timely he flies the yet untasted food,
 And gains the friendly shelter of the wood
 So fears the youth ; all Troy with shouts pursue,
 While stones and darts in mingled tempests flew ;

But, enter'd in the Grecian ranks, he turns
His manly breast, and with new fury burns. 710

Now on the fleet the tides of Trojaus drove,
Fierce to fulfil the stern decrees of Jove :
The sire of gods; confirming 'Thetis' prayer,
The Grecian ardour quench'd in deep despair; 715

But lifts to glory Troy's prevailing bands,
Swells all their hearts, and strengthens all their hands
On Ida's top he waits with longing eyes,
To view the navy blazing to the skies ;
Then, nor till then, the scale of war shal. turn, 720

The Trojans fly, and conquer'd Ilium burn.
These fates revolv'd in his almighty mind;
He raises Hector to the work design'd.
Bids him with more than mortal fury glow,
And drives him, like a lightning, on the foe. 725

So Mars, when human crimes for vengeance call,
Shakes his huge javelin, and whole armies fall.
Not with more rage a conflagration rolls,
Wraps the vast mountains, and involves the poles.
He foams with wrath ; beneath his gloomy brow 730
Like fiery meteors his red eye-balls glow :

The radiant helmet on his temple burns,
Waves when he nods, and lightens as he turns :
For Jove his splendour round the chief had thrown,
And cast the blaze of both the hosts on one. 735

Unhappy glories ! for his fate was near,
Due to stern Pallas, and Pelides' spear :
Yet Jove deferr'd the death he was to pay,
And gave what Fate allow'd, the honours of a day !

Now all on fire for fame, his breast, his eyes 740

Burn at each foe, and single o'every prize ;
Still at the closest ranks, the thickest fight,
He points his ardour, and exerts his might,
The Grecian phalanx, moveless as a tower,
On all sides batter'd, yet resists his power : 745

So some tall rock o'erhangs the hoary main,
By winds assail'd, by billows beat in vain ;
Unmov'd it hears, above, the tempest blow
And sees the watery mountains break below.
Girt in surrounding flames, he seems to fall 750

Like fire from Jove, and bursts upon them all ;
Bursts as a wave that from the clouds impends,
And swell'd with tempests on the ship descends ;
White are the decks with foam ; the winds aloud
Howl o'er the masts, and sing through every shroud : 755

Pale, trembling, tir'd, the sailors freeze with fears ;
 And instant death on every wave appears
 So pale the Greeks the eyes of Hector meet,
 The chief so thunders, and so shakes the fleet.

As when a lion rushing from his den,
 Amidst the plain of some wide-water d fen,
 (Where numerous oxen, as at ease they feed,
 At large expatiate o'er the ranker mead,)

Leaps on the herds before the herdsman's eyes :
 The trembling herdsman far to distance flies
 Some lordly bull (the rest dispers'd and fled)

He singles out, arrests, and lays him dead
 Thus from the rage of Jove-like Hector flew
 All Greece in heaps, but one he seiz'd, and slew.
 Mycenean Periphus, a mighty name,

In wisdom great, in arms well-known to fame :
 The minister of stern Eurystheus' ire,
 Against Alcides ; Copreus was his sire :

The son redeem'd the honours of the race,
 A son as generous as the sire was base ,
 O'er all his country's youth conspicuous far

In every virtue, or of peace or war
 But doom'd to Hector's stronger force to yield !
 Against the margin of his ample shield

He struck his hasty foot : his heels upsprung ;
 Supine he fell, his brazen helmet rung
 On the fall'n chief th' invading Trojan press'd,

And plung'd the pointed javelin in his breast.
 His circling friends, who strove to guard too late
 Th' unhappy hero, fled, or shar'd his fate.

Chas'd from the foremost line, the Grecian train
 Now man the next, receding tow'rd the main .

Wedg'd in one body at the tents they stand,
 Wall'd round with sterns, a gloomy, desperate band
 Now manly shame forbids th' inglorious flight ;
 Now fear itself confines them to the fight .

Man courage breathes in man , but Nestor most
 (The sage preserver of the Grecian host)
 Exhorts, adjures, to guard these utmost shores ;
 And by their parents, by themselves, implores .

' O friends ! be men your generous breasts inflame
 ' With mutual honour, and with mutual shame !

' Think of your hopes, your fortunes , all the care
 ' Your wives, your infants, and your parents, share :
 ' Think of each living father's reverend head ;
 ' Think of each ancestor with glory dead ;

' Absent, by me they speak, by me they sue ;
 ' They ask their safety and their fame from you :
 ' The gods their fates on this one action lay,
 ' And all are lost if you desert the day.' 805
 He spoke, and round him breath'd heroic fires ;
 Minerva seconds what the sage inspires.
 The mist of darkness Jove around them threw
 She clear'd, restoring all the war to view :
 A sudden ray shot beaming o'er the plain, 810
 And shew'd the shores, the navy, and the main.
 Hector they saw, and all who fly or fight,
 The scene wide opening to the blaze of light.
 First of the field, great Ajax strikes their eyes,
 His port majestic, and his ample size : 815
 A ponderous mace, with studs of iron crown'd,
 Full twenty cubits long, he swings around.
 Nor fights like others fix'd to certain stands,
 But looks a moving tower above the bands ;
 High on the decks, with vast gigantic stride, 820
 The godlike hero stalks from side to side.
 So when a horseman from the watery mead
 (Skill'd in the manage of the bounding steed)
 Drives four fair coursers, practis'd to obey,
 To some great city through the public way ; 825
 Safe in his art, as side by side they run,
 He shifts his seat, and vaults from one to one ;
 And now to this, and now to that he flies ;
 Admiring numbers follow with their eyes.
 From ship to ship thus Ajax swiftly flew, 830
 No less the wonder of the warring crew.
 As furious, Hector thunder'd threats aloud,
 And rush'd enrag'd before the Trojan crowd ;
 Then swift invades the ships, whose beaky proes
 Lay rank'd contiguous on the bending shores. 835
 So the strong eagle from his airy height,
 Who marks the swans' or cranes' embodied flight,
 Stoops down impetuous, while they light for food,
 And stooping darkens with his wings the flood.
 Jove leads him on with his almighty hand, 840
 And breathes fierce spirits in his following band.
 The warring nations meet, the battle roars,
 Thick beats the combat on the sounding proes.
 Thou would'st have thought, so furious was their fire,
 Nor force could tame them, and no toil could tire ; 845
 As if new vigour from new fights they won,
 And the long battle was but then begun.

Greece, yet unconquer'd, kept alive the war,
 Secure of death, confiding in despair ;
 Troy in proud hopes already view'd the main 850
 Bright with the blaze, and red with heroes slain :
 Like strength is felt from hope, and from despair,
 And each contends, as his were all the war
 'Twas thou, bold Hector ! whose resistless hand
 First seiz'd a ship on that contested strand ; 855
 The same which dead Protesilaus bore,
 The first that touch'd th' unhappy Trojan shore.
 For this in arms the warring nations stood,
 And bath'd their generous breasts with mutual blood.
 No room to poise the lance, or bend the bow ; 860
 But hand to hand, and man to man they grow :
 Wounded, they wound ; and seek each other's hearts
 With faulchions, axes, swords, and shorten'd darts.
 The faulchions ring, shields rattle, axes sound,
 Swords flash in air, or glitter on the ground . 865
 With streaming blood the slippery shores are dyed,
 And slaughter'd heroes swell the dreadful tide.
 Still raging Hector with his ample hand
 Grasps the high stern, and gives his loud command :
 ' Haste, bring the flames ! the toil of ten long years 870
 ' Is finish'd ; and the day desir'd appears !
 ' This happy day with acclamations greet,
 ' Bright with destruction of yon hostile fleet
 ' The coward counsels of a timorous throng
 ' Of reverend dotards, check'd our glory long . 875
 ' Too long Jove lull'd us with lethargic charms,
 ' But now in peals of thunder calls to arms ,
 ' In this great day he crowns our full desires,
 ' Wakes all our force, and seconds all our fires.'
 He spoke. The warriors, at his fierce command, 880
 Pour a new deluge on the Grecian band.
 E'en Ajax paus'd, (so thick the javelins fly,)
 Stepp'd back, and doubted or to live, or die.
 Yet where the oars are placed, he stands to wait
 What chief approaching dares attempt his fate : 885
 E'en to the last his naval charge defends,
 Now shakes his spear, now lifts, and now protends ;
 E'en yet, the Greeks with piercing shouts inspires,
 Amidst attacks, and deaths, and darts, and fires :
 ' O friends ! O heroes ! names for ever dear, 890
 ' Once sons of Mars, and thunderbolts of war !
 ' Ah ! yet be mindful of your old renown,
 ' Your great forefathers' virtues and your own.

'What aids expect you in this utmost strait?
 'What bulwarks rising between you and fate? 895
 'No aids, no bulwarks, your retreat attend,
 No friends to help, no city to defend.
 'This spot is all you have, to lose or keep;
 'There stands the Trojans, and here rolls the deep.
 'Tis hostile ground you tread: your native lands 900
 'Far, far from hence: your fates are in your hands.'
 Raging he spoke; nor farther wastes his breath,
 But turns his javelin to the work of death.
 Whate'er bold Trojan arm'd his daring bands
 Against the sable ships with flaming brands, 905
 'So well the chief his naval<sup>10</sup> weapon sped,
 The luckless warrior at his stern lay dead:
 Full twelve, the boldest, in a moment fell,
 Sent by great Ajax to the shades of hell.

THE ARGUMENT

THE SIXTH BATTLE: THE ACTS AND DEATH OF PATROCLUS.

Patroclus (in pursuance of the request of Nestor in the eleventh book) persuades Achilles to suffer him to go to the assistance of the Greeks with Achilles' troops and armour. He agrees to it, but at the same time charges him to content himself with rescuing the fleet, without farther pursuit of the enemy. The armour, horses, soldiers, and officers of Achilles are described. Achilles offers a libation for the success of his friend, after which Patroclus leads the Myrmidons to battle. The Trojans, at the sight of Patroclus in Achilles' armour, taking him for that hero, are cast into the utmost consternation. he beats them off from the vessels, Hector himself flies, Sarpedon is killed, though Jupiter was averse to his fate. Several other particulars of the battle are described; in the heat of which, Patroclus, neglecting the orders of Achilles, pursues the foe to the walls of Troy, where Apollo repulses and disarms him. Euphorbus wounds him, and Hector kills him:
 which concludes the book.

'So warr'd both armies on th' ensanguin'd shore,
 While the black vessels smok'd with human gore.
 Meantime Patroclus to Achilles flies;
 The streaming tears fall copious from his eyes,

<sup>10</sup> "Naval" is the reading of all the copies. Pope seems to use the word for "employed in defence of the ships." There is no basis for it in the original.

Not faster, trickling to the plains below, 5
 From the tall rock the sable waters flow.
 Divine Pelides, with compassion mov'd,
 Thus spoke, indulgent to his best belov'd :
 ' Patroclus, say, what grief thy bosom bears,
 ' That flows so fast in these unmanly tears ? 10
 ' No girl, no infant whom the mother keeps
 ' From her loved breast, with fonder passion weeps ;
 ' Not more the mother's soul that infant warms,
 ' Clung to her knees, and reaching at her arms,
 ' Than thou hast mine ! Oh tell me to what end 15
 ' Thy melting sorrows thus pursue thy friend ?
 ' Griev'st thou for me, or for my martial band ?
 ' Or come sad tidings from our native land ?
 ' Our fathers live (our first, most tender care,) 20
 ' Thy good Menœtius breathes the vital air,
 ' And hoary Peleus yet extends his days ;
 ' Pleas'd in their age to hear their children's praise.
 ' Or may some meaner cause thy pity claim ?
 ' Perhaps yon relics of the Grecian name,
 ' Doom'd in their ships to sink by fire and sword, 25
 ' And pay the forfeit of their haughty lord ?
 ' Whate'er the cause, reveal thy secret care,
 ' And speak those sorrows which a friend would share.'
 A sigh, that instant, from his bosom broke,
 Another follow'd, and Patroclus spoke : 30
 ' Let Greece at length with pity touch thy breast,
 ' Thyself a Greek ; and, once, of Greeks the best !
 ' Lo ! every chief that might her fate prevent,
 ' Lies pierc'd with wounds, and bleeding in his tent : 35
 ' Eurypylus, Tydides, Atreus' son,
 ' And wise Ulysses, at the navy groan,
 ' More for their country's wounds, than for their own.
 ' Their pain soft arts of pharmacy can ease ;
 ' Thy breast alone no lenitives appease.
 ' May never rage like thine my soul enslave, 40
 ' O great in vain ! unprofitably brave !
 ' Thy country slighted in her last distress,
 ' What friend, what man, from thee shall hope redress ?
 ' No : men unborn, and ages yet behind,
 ' Shall curse that fierce, that unforgiving mind. 45
 ' O man unpitying ! if of man thy race ;
 ' But sure thou spring'st not from a soft embrace,
 ' Nor ever amorous hero caused thy birth,
 ' Nor ever tender goddess brought thee forth.
 ' Some rugged rock's hard entrails gave thee form,
 ' And raging seas produced thee in a storm ;

- ' A soul well-suiting that tempestuous kind,
 ' So rough thy manners, so untam'd thy mind.
 ' If some dire oracle thy breast alarm,
 ' If aught from Jove, or 'Thetis, stop thy arm, 55
 ' Some beam of comfort yet on Greece may shine,
 ' If I but lead the Myrmidonian line :
 ' Clad in thy dreadful arms if I appear,
 ' Proud Troy shall tremble and desert the war :
 ' Without thy person Greece shall win the day, 60
 ' And thy mere image chase her foes away.
 ' Press'd by fresh forces her o'erlabour'd train
 ' Shall quit the ships, and Greece respire again.
 ' Thus, blind to fate ! with supplicating breath,
 ' Thou begg'st his arms, and in his arms thy death. 65
 ' Unfortunately good ! a boding sigh
 ' Thy friend return'd ; and with it, this reply :
 ' Patroclus ! thy Achilles knows no fears ;
 ' Nor words from Jove, nor oracles, he hears ;
 ' Nor aught a mother's caution can suggest ; 70
 ' The tyrant's pride lies rooted in my breast.
 ' My wrongs, my wrongs, my constant thought engage,
 ' Those, my sole oracles, inspire my rage :
 ' I made him tyrant ; gave him power to wrong
 ' E'en me : I felt it ; and shall feel it long. 75
 ' The maid, my black-ey'd maid, he forc'd away,
 ' Due to the toils of many a well-fought day ;
 ' Due to my conquest of her father's reign ;
 ' Due to the votes of all the Grecian train.
 ' From me he forc'd her, me the bold and brave ; 80
 ' Disgrac'd, dishonour'd, like the meanest slave.
 ' But bear we this — The wrongs I grieve are past ;
 ' 'Tis time our fury should relent at last ;
 ' I fix'd its date ; the day I wish'd appears ;
 ' Now Hector to my ships his battle bears, 85
 ' The flames my eyes, the shouts invade my ears.
 ' Go, then, Patroclus ! court fair honour's charms
 ' In Troy's fain'd fields, and in Achilles' arms :
 ' Lead forth my martial Myrmidons to fight,
 ' Go, save the fleets, and conquer in my right. 90
 ' See the thin relics of their baffled band,
 ' At the last edge of yon deserted land !
 ' Behold all lion on their ships descends ;
 ' How the cloud blackens, how the storm impends !
 ' It was not thus, when, at my sight amaz'd, 95
 ' Troy saw and trembled as this helmet blaz'd :
 ' Had not th' injurious king our friendship lost,
 ' Yon ample trench had buried half her host.

' No camps, no bulwarks, now the Trojans fear,
 ' Those are not dreadful, no Achilles there : 100
 ' No longer flames the lance of 'Tydeus' son ;
 ' No more your general calls his heroes on ;
 ' Hector alone I hear, his dreadful breath
 ' Commands your slaughter, or proclaims your death.
 ' Yet now, Patroclus, issue to the plain ; 105
 ' Now save the ships, the rising fires restrain,
 ' And give the Greeks to visit Greece again.
 ' But heed my words, and mark a friend's command,
 ' Who trusts his fame and honours in thy hand,
 ' And from thy deeds expects th' Achaean host 110
 ' Shall render back the beauteous maid he lost :
 ' Rage uncontroll'd through all the hostile crew,
 ' But touch not Hector, Hector is my due.
 ' Though Jove in thunder should command the war,
 ' Be just, consult my glory, and forbear. 115
 ' The fleet once sav'd, desist from farther chase,
 ' Nor lead to Iliou's walls the Grecian race ;
 ' Some adverse god thy rashness may destroy ;
 ' Some god, like Phœbus, ever kind to Troy.
 ' Let Greece, redeem'd from this destructive strait, 120
 ' Do her own work, and leave the rest to fate.
 ' Oh ! would to all th' immortal powers above,
 ' Apollo, Pallas, and almighty Jove !
 ' That not one Trojan might be left alive,
 ' And not a Greek of all the race survive ; 125
 ' Might only we the vast destruction shun,
 ' And only we destroy th' accursed town !'<sup>1</sup>
 Such conference held the chiefs : while, on the strand,
 Great Jove with conquest crown'd the Trojan band.
 Ajax no more the sounding storm sustain'd, 130
 So thick the darts an iron tempest rain'd :
 On his tir'd arm the weighty buckler hung ; *
 His hollow helm with falling javelins rung :
 His breath, in quick short pantings, comes and goes ;
 And painful sweat from all his members flows. 135

<sup>1</sup> Eustathius informs us, that some of the ancients rejected this wish, with which Achilles concludes his answer, on account of its impossibility, and the extravagant ambition that it discovers. But their reasons were not good ; for, in respect of manners, the poet constantly represents his hero, not such as he ought to have been, but such as he was reported, and as to the extravagance of it, it is not greater than Diomed uses, when he declares that, if all renounce the siege, himself and Sthenelus alone will continue it till Troy be taken. Cowper. See B. ix. 65

Spent and o'erpower'd, he barely breathes at most ;
 Yet scarce an army stirs him from his post :
 Dangers on dangers all around him grow,
 And toil to toil, and woe succeeds to woe.

Say, Muses, thron'd above the starry frame, 140
 How first the navy blaz'd with Trojan flame ?

Stern Hector wav'd his sword, and, standing near
 Where furious Ajax plied his ashen spear,
 Full on the lance a stroke so justly sped,
 That the broad faulchion lopp'd its brazen head : 145

His pointless spear the warrior shakes in vain ;
 The brazen head falls sounding on the plain.
 Great Ajax saw, and own'd the Land divine,
 Confessing Jove, and trembling at the sign ;
 Warn'd he retreats. Then swift from all sides pour 150
 The hissing brands ; thick streams the fiery shower ;
 O'er the high stern the curling volumes rise.
 And sheets of rolling smoke involve the skies.

Divine Achilles view'd the rising flames,
 And smote his thigh, and thus aloud exclaims : 155

'Arm, arm, Patroclus ! lo, the blaze aspires !

The glowing ocean reddens with the fires.

Arm, ere our vessels catch the spreading flame ;

Arm, ere the Grecians be no more a name ;

'I haste to bring the troops.' The hero said ; 160

The friend with ardour and with joy obey'd.

He cas'd his limbs in brass ; and first around

His manly legs with silver buckles bound

The claspings greaves : then to his breast applies

The flamy cuirass, of a thousand dyes ; 165

Enblaz'd with studs of gold, his faulchion shone

In the rich belt, as in a starry zone.

Achilles' shield his ample shoulders spread,

Achilles' helmet nodded o'er his head.

Adorn'd in all his terrible array, 170

He flash'd around intolerable day.

Alone, untouch'd, Pelides' javelin stands,

Not to be pois'd but by Pelides' hands :

From Pelion's shady brow the plant-entire

Old Chiron rent, and shap'd it for his sire ; 175

Whose son's great arm alone the weapon wields,

The death of heroes, and the dread of fields.

Then brave Automedon (an honour'd name,

The second to his lord in love and fame,

In peace his friend, and partner of the war) 180

The winged coursers harness'd to the car.

Xanthus and Balius, of immortal breed,
 Sprung from the wind, and like the wind in speed ;
 Whom the wing'd harpy, swift Podarge, bore,
 By Zephyr pregnant on the breezy shore. 185
 Swift Pegasus was added to their side,
 (Once great Hætion's, now Achilles' pride,)
 Who, like in strength, in swiftness, and in grace,
 A mortal courser, match'd th' immortal race.
 Achilles speeds from tent to tent, and warms 190
 His hardy Myrmidons to blood and arms.
 All breathing death, around their chief they stand,
 A grim, terrific, formidable band ;
 Grim as voracious wolves that seek the springs,
 When scalding thirst their burning bowels wrings ; 195
 (When some tall stag, fresh slaughter'd in the wood,
 Has drench'd their wide insatiate throats with blood ;)
 To the black fount they rush, a hideous throng,
 With paunch distended and with lolling tongue ;
 Fire fills their eyes, their black jaws belch the gore, 200
 And, gorged with slaughter, still they thirst for more.
 Like furious rush'd the Myrmidonian crew,
 Such their dread strength, and such their dreadful view.
 High in the midst the great Achilles stands,
 Directs their order, and the war commands. 205
 He, lov'd of Jove, had launch'd for Ilion's shores
 Full fifty vessels, mann'd with fifty oars :
 Five chosen leaders the fierce bands obey,
 Himself' supreme in valour, as in sway.
 First march'd Menestheus, of celestial birth, 210
 Derived from thee, whose waters wash the earth,
 Divine Sperchius ! Jove-descended flood !
 A mortal mother mixing with a god.
 Such was Menestheus, but miscall'd by fame
 The son of Borus, that espous'd the dame. 215
 Eudorus next ; whom Polymele the gay,
 Fam'd in the graceful dance, produc'd to day.
 Her, sly Cyllenius lov'd ; on her would gaze,
 As with swift step she form'd the running maze :
 To her high chamber, from Diana's quire, 220
 The god pursued her, urg'd, and crown'd his fire.
 The son confess'd his father's heavenly race,
 And heir'd his mother's swiftness in the chase.
 Strong Echeclæus, bless'd in all those charms
 That pleas'd a god, succeeded to her arms ; 225
 Not conscious of those loves, long hid from fame,
 With gifts of price he sought and won the dame ;

Her secret offspring to her sire she bare ;<sup>2</sup>
Her sire caress'd him with a parent's care.

Pisander follow'd ; matchless in his art
To wing the spear, or aim the distant dart ;
No hand so sure, of all th' Eneathian line,
Or if a surer, great Patroclus ! thine.

The fourth by Phoenix' grave command was grac'd :
Laertes' valiant offspring led the last.

Soon as Achilles with superior care
Had call'd the chiefs, and order'd all the war,
This stern remembrance to his troops he gave :
' Ye far-fam'd Myrmidons, ye fierce and brave !
' Think with what threats you dar'd the Trojan throng,
' Think what reproach these ears endur'd so long :
' Stern son of Pelus" (thus ye us'd to say,
' While restless, raging, in your ships you lay,)
' Oh nurs'd with gall, unknowing how to yield !
' Whose rage defrauds us of so fan'd a field,
' If that dire fury must for ever burn,
' What make we here ? Return, ye chiefs, return !"
' Such were your words. Now, warriors, grieve no more,
' Lo thero the Trojans ! bathe your swords in gore !
' This day shall give you all your soul demands ;
' Glut all your hearts ! and weary all your hands !'

Thus while he rous'd the fire in every breast,
Close, and more close, the listening cohorts press'd ;
Ranks wedged in ranks, of arms a steely ring
Still grows and spreads and thickens round the king.
As when a circling wall the builder forms,
Of strength defensive against winds and storms,
Compacted stones the thickening work compose,
And round him wide the rising structure grows :
So helm to helm, and crest to crest they throng,
Shield urg'd on shield, and man drove man along :
Thick undistinguish'd plumes, together join'd,
Float in one sea, and wave before the wind.

Far o'er the rest, in glittering pomp appear,
There bold Automedon, Patroclus here ;
Brothers in arms, with equal fury fir'd ;
Two friends, two bodies with one soul inspir'd.

But, mindful of the Gods, Achilles went
To the rich coffer in his shady tent :
There lay on heaps his various garments roll'd,
And costly furs, and carpets stiff with gold ;

(The presents of the silver-footed dame ;)
 From thence he took a bowl of antique frame,
 Which never man had stain'd with ruddy wine,
 Nor rais'd in offerings to the powers divine, 275
 But Peleus' son ; and Peleus' son to none
 Had rais'd in offerings, but to Jove alone.
 This, ting'd with sulphur, sacred first to flame.
 He purg'd ; and wash'd it in the running stream.
 Then cleans'd his hands ; and, fixing for a space 280
 His eyes on heaven, his feet upon the place
 Of sacrifice, the purple draught he pour'd
 Forth in the midst ; and thus the god implor'd :
 ' Oh thou supreme ! high-thron'd all height above !
 ' Oh great Pelusge, Dodonean Jove ! 285
 ' Who, 'midst surrounding frosts, and vapours chill,
 ' Presid'st on bleak Dodona's vocal hill,
 ' (Whose groves the Selli, race austere ! surround,
 ' Their feet unwash'd, their slumbers on the ground ;
 ' Who hear from rustling oaks thy dark decrees ; 290
 ' And catch the fates low-whisper'd in the breeze )
 ' Hear, as of old : Thou gav'st at Thetis' prayer,
 ' Glory to me, and to the Greeks despair :
 ' Lo, to the dangers of the fighting field
 ' The best, the dearest of my friends, I yield : 295
 ' Though still determin'd, to my ships confin'd,
 ' Patroclus gone, I stay but half behind
 ' Oh be his guard thy providential care,
 ' Confirm his heart, and string his arm to war ;
 ' Press'd by his single force, let Hector see 300
 ' His fame in arms not owing all to me.
 ' But when the fleets are sav'd from foes and fire,
 ' Let him with conquest and renown retire ;
 ' Preserve his arms, preserve his social train,
 ' And safe return him to these eyes again !' 305
 Great Jove consents to half the chief's request,
 But heaven's eternal doom denies the rest :
 To free the fleet was granted to his prayer ;
 His safe return the winds dispers'd in air.
 Back to his tent the stern Achilles flies, 310
 And waits the combat with impatient eyes.
 Meanwhile the troops, beneath Patroclus' care,
 Invade the Trojans, and commence the war.
 As wasps, provoked by children in their play,
 Pour from their mansions by the broad highway, 315
 In swarms the guiltless traveller engage,
 Whet all their stings, and call forth all their rage :

All rise in arms, and with a general cry
 Assert their waxen domes, and buzzing progeny.
 Thus from the tents the fervent legion swarms, 320
 So loud their clamours, and so keen their arms ;
 Their rising rage Patroclus' breath inspires,
 Who thus inflames them with heroic fires :
 ' Oh warriors, partners of Achilles' praise !
 ' Be mindful of your deeds in ancient days : 325
 ' Your godlike master let your acts proclaim,
 ' And add new glories to his mighty name.
 ' Think your Achilles sees you fight : be brave,
 ' And humble the proud monarch whom you save.'
 Joyful they heard, and, kindling as he spoke, 330
 Flew to the fleet, involv'd in fire and smoke.
 From shore to shore the doubling shouts resound,
 The hollow ships return a deeper sound.
 The war stood still, and all around them gaz'd,
 When great Achilles' shining armour blaz'd : 335
 Troy saw, and thought the dread Achilles nigh ;
 At once they see, they tremble, and they fly.
 Then first thy spear, divine Patroclus ! flew,
 Where the war raged, and where the tumult grew.
 Close to the stern of that fam'd ship, which bore 340
 Unblest'd Protesilaus to Ilion's shore,
 The great Pæonian, bold Pyræchmes, stood,
 Who led his bands from Axios's winding flood :
 His shoulder-blade receives the fatal wound ;
 The groaning warrior pants upon the ground. 345
 His troops, that see their country's glory slain,
 Fly diverse, scatter'd o'er the distant plain.
 Patroclus' arm forbids the spreading fires,
 And from the half-burn'd ship proud Troy retires.
 Clear'd from the smoke the joyful navy lies, 350
 In heaps on heaps the foe tumultuous flies ;
 Triumphant Greece her rescued decks ascends.
 And loud acclaim the starry region rends.
 So when thick clouds enwrap the mountain's head,
 O'er heaven's expanse like one black ceiling spread : 355
 Sudden the Thunderer, with a flashing ray,
 Bursts through the darkness, and lets down the day :
 The hills shine out, the rocks in prospect rise,
 And streams, and vales, and forests strike the eyes ;
 The smiling scene wide opens to the sight, 360
 And all th' unmeasur'd ether flames with light.

 See B. ii. 1030.

But Troy repuls'd, and scatter'd o'er the plains,
 Forc'd from the navy, yet the fight maintains.
 Now every Greek some hostile hero slew,
 But still the foremost bold Patroclus flew : 365
 As Arcilycus had turn'd him round,
 Sharp in his thigh he felt the piercing wound ;
 The brazen-pointed spear, with vigour thrown,
 The thigh transfix'd, and broke the brittle bone :
 Headlong he fell. Next, Thoas, was thy chance, 370
 Thy breast, unarm'd, received the Spartan lance.<sup>4</sup>
 Phylides' dart, as Amphiclus drew nigh,
 His blow prevented, and transpierc'd his thigh,
 Tore all the brawn, and rent the nerves away ;
 In darkness and in death the warrior lay. 375
 In equal arms two sons of Nestor stand,
 And two bold brothers of the Lycian band :
 By great Antilochus, Antymnius dies,
 Pierced in the flank, lamented youth ! he lies.
 Kind Maris, bleeding in his brother's wound, 380
 Defends the breathless carcass on the ground
 Furious he flies, his murderer to engage,
 But godlike Thrasymed prevents his rage :
 Between his arm and shoulder aims a blow ;
 His arm falls spouting on the dust below : 385
 He sinks, with endless darkness cover'd o'er,
 And vents his soul, effus'd with gushing gore.
 Slain by two brothers, thus two brothers bleed,
 Sarpedon's friends, Amisodarus' seed ;<sup>5</sup>
 Amisodarus, who, by Furies led, 390
 The bane of man, abhorr'd Chimæra bred.
 Skill'd in the dart in vain, his sons expire,
 And pay the forfeit of their guilty sire.
 Stopp'd in the tumult Cleobulus lies,
 Beneath Oileus' arm, a living prize ; 395
 A living prize not long the Trojan stood :
 The thirsty faulchion drank his reeking blood ;
 Plung'd in his throat the smoking weapon lies :
 Black death, and fate unpitying, seal his eyes.
 Amid the ranks, with mutual thirst of fame, 400
 Ilycon the brave, and fierce Peneleus came ;
 In vain their javelins at each other flew ;
 Now, met in arms, their eager swords they drew :
 On the plumed crest of his Boeotian foe
 The daring Ilycon aim'd a noble blow ; 405

<sup>4</sup> The lance of Menelaus.    <sup>5</sup> Meges, son of Phylcus.    <sup>6</sup> Amisodarus was king of Caria ; Bellerophon married his daughter.

The sword broke short ; but his, Peneleus sped
Full on the juncture of the neck and head :
The head, divided by a stroke so just,
Hung by the skin ; the body sunk to dust.

O'ertaken Acamas by Merion bleeds, 410
Pierc'd through the shoulders as he mounts his steeds :
Back from the car he tumbles to the ground ;
His swimming eyes eternal shades surround.

Next Erymas was doom'd his fate to feel :
His open'd mouth receiv'd the Cretan steel ; 415
Beneath the brain the point a passage tore,
Crash'd the thin bones, and ground the teeth in gore.
His mouth, his eyes, his nostrils, pour a flood ;
He sobs his soul out in the gush of blood.

As when the flocks neglected by the swain 420
(Or kids, or lambs) lie scatter'd o'er the plain,
A troop of wolves th' unguarded charge survey,
And rend the trembling, unresisting prey :
Thus on the foe the Greeks impetuous came :
Troy fled, unmindful of her former fame. 425

But still at Hector godlike Ajax aim'd,
Still, pointed at his breast, his javelin flam'd :
The Trojan chief, experienc'd in the field,
O'er his broad shoulders spread the massy shield,
Observ'd the storm of darts the Grecians pour, 430
And on his buckler caught the ringing shower.
He sees for Greece the scale of conquest rise,
Yet stops, and turns, and saves his lov'd allies.

As when the hand of Jove a tempest forms,
And rolls the clouds to blacken heaven with storms, 435
Dark o'er the fields th' ascending vapour flies,
And shades the sun, and blots the golden skies :
So from the ships, along the dusky plain,
Dire Fright and Terror drove the Trojan train.
E'en Hector fled ; through heaps of disarray 440

The fiery coursers forc'd their lord away :
While far behind his Trojans fall confus'd,
Wedg'd in the trench, in one vast carnage bruis'd.
Chariots on chariots roll ; the clashing spokes
Shock ; while the maddening steeds break short their yokes. 445

In vain they labour up the steepy mound ;
Their charioteers lie foaming on the ground.
Fierce on the rear, with shouts, Patroclus flies ;
Tumultuous clamour fills the fields and skies ;
Thick drifts of dust involve their rapid flight ; 450
Clouds rise on clouds, and heaven is snatch'd from sight.

Th' affrighted steeds, their dying lords cast down,
 Scour o'er the fields, and stretch to reach the town.
 Loud o'er the rout was heard the victor's cry,
 Where the war bleeds, and where the thickest die ; 455
 Where horse, and arms, and chariots, lie o'erthrown,
 And bleeding heroes under axles grown.
 No stop, no check, the steeds of P'eleus knew ;
 - From bank to bank th' immortal coursers flew.
 High-bounding o'er the fosse : the whirling car 460
 Smokes through the ranks, o'ertakes the flying war,
 And thunders after Hector ; Hector flies,
 Patroclus shakes his lance ; but fate denies.
 Not with less noise, with less impetuous force,
 The tide of Trojans urge their desperate course, 465
 Than when in autumn Jove his fury pours,
 And earth is laden with incessant showers ;
 (When guilty mortals break th' eternal laws,
 Or judges, bribed, betray the righteous cause ;)
 From their deep beds he bids the rivers rise, 470
 And opens all the floodgates of the skies :
 Th' impetuous torrents from their hills obey.
 Whole fields are drown'd, and mountains swept away ;
 Loud roars the deluge till it meets the main ;
 And trembling man sees all his labours vain. 475
 And now the chief (the foremost troops repell'd)
 Back to the ships his destin'd progress held,
 Bore down half Troy in his resistless way.
 And forc'd the routed ranks to stand the day.<sup>7</sup>
 Between the space where silver Simois flows, 480
 Where lay the fleets, and where the rampires rose,
 All grim with dust and blood, Patroclus stands,
 And turns the slaughter on the conquering bands.
 First Pronoüs died beneath his fiery dart,
 Which pierc'd below t'le shield his valiant heart. 485
 Thestor was next ; who saw the chief appear,
 And fell the victim of his coward fear :
 Shrunk up he sat, with wild and haggard eye,
 Nor stood to combat, nor had force to fly :
 Patroclus mark'd him as he shunn'd the war, 490
 And with unmanly trembling shook the car,
 And dropp'd the flowing reins. Him 'twixt the jaws
 The javelin sticks, and from the chariot draws.

<sup>7</sup> This is not clear. The original signifies that Patroclus cut off a portion of the Trojans from the rest, and drove them back towards the Grecian vessels, instead of allowing them to shelter themselves in the town.

As on a rock that overhangs the main,
 An angler, studious of the line and cane, 495
 Some mighty fish draws panting on the shore ;
 Not with less ease the barbed javelin bore
 The gaping dastard ; as the spear was shook,
 He fell, and life his heartless breast forsook.

Next on Eryalus he flies ; a stone, 500
 Large as a rock, was by his fury thrown :
 Full on his crown the ponderous fragment flew,
 And burst the helm, and cleft the head in two :
 Prone to the ground the breathless warrior fell,
 And death involv'd him with the shades of hell. 505

Then low in dust Epaltes, Echius, lie ;
 Iphicas, Evippus, Polymelus, die ;
 Amphoterus and Erymas succeed ;
 And last Tlepolemus and Pyres bleed
 Where'er he moves, the growing slaughters spread 510
 In heaps on heaps ; a monument of dead.

When now Sarpedon his brave friends beheld
 Grovelling in dust, and gasping on the field,
 With this reproach his flying host he warns ;
 ' Oh stain to honour ! oh disgrace to arms ! 515
 ' Forsake, inglorious, the contended plain ;
 ' This hand, unaided, shall the war sustain ;
 ' The task be mine, this hero's strength to try,
 ' Who mows whole troops, and makes an army fly.'

He spake ; and speaking, leaps from off the car ; 520
 Patroclus lights, and sternly waits the war.

As when two vultures on the mountain's height
 Stoop with resounding pinions to the fight ;
 They cuff, they tear, they raise a screaming cry ;
 The desert echoes, and the rocks reply : 525
 The warriors thus, oppos'd in arms, engage
 With equal clamours, and with equal rage.

Jove view'd the combat, whose event foreseen,
 He thus bespoke his sister and his queen :
 ' The hour draws on ; the destinies ordain 530
 ' My godlike son shall press the Phrygian plain :
 ' Already on the verge of death he stands,
 ' His life is ow'd to fierce Patroclus' hands.
 ' What passions in a parent's breast debate !
 ' Say, shall I snatch him from impending fate, 535
 ' And send him safe to Lycia, distant far
 ' From all the dangers and the toils of war ?
 ' Or to his doom my bravest offspring yield,
 ' And fatten with celestial blood the field ?'

Then thus the goddess with the radiant eyes : 540
 ' What words are these ? O sovereign of the skies !
 ' Short is the date prescrib'd to mortal man ;
 ' Shall Jove, for one, extend the narrow span,
 ' Whose bounds were fix'd before his race began ?
 ' How many sons of gods, foredoom'd to death, 545
 ' Before proud Ilion must resign their breath !
 ' Were thine exempt, debate would rise above,
 ' And murmuring powers condemn their partial Jove.
 ' Give the bold chief a glorious fate in fight ;
 ' And when th' ascending soul has wing'd her flight, 550
 ' Let Sleep and Death convey, by thy command,
 ' The breathless body to his native land.
 ' His friends and people, to his future praise,
 ' A marble tomb and pyramid shall raise,
 ' And lasting honours to his ashes give ; 555
 ' His fame ('tis all the dead can have) shall live.'
 She said ; the cloud-compeller, overcome,
 Assents to fate, and ratifies the doom.
 Then, touch'd with grief, the weeping heavens distill'd
 A shower of blood o'er all the fatal field ; 560
 The god, his eyes averting from the plain,
 Laments his son, predestin'd to be slain,
 Far from the Lycian shores, his happy native reign.
 Now met in arms, the combatants appear,
 Each heav'd the shield, and pois'd the lifted spear ; 565
 From strong Patroclus' hand the javelin fled,
 And pass'd the groin of valiant Thrasymed ;
 The nerves umbrac'd no more his bulk sustain ;
 He falls, and falling bites the bloody plain.
 Two sounding darts the Lycian leader threw ; 570
 The first aloof with erring fury flew,
 The next transpierc'd Achilles' mortal steed,
 The generous Pegasus, of Theban breed,
 Fix'd in the shoulder-joint ; he reel'd around,
 Roll'd in the bloody dust, and paw'd the slippery ground. 575
 His sudden fall th' entangled harness broke ;
 Each axle crackled, and the chariot shook :
 When bold Automedon, to disengage
 The starting coursers, and restrain their rage,
 Divides the traces with his sword, and freed 580
 Th' encumber'd chariot from the dying steed :
 The rest move on, obedient to the rein ;
 The car rolls slowly o'er the dusty plain.
 The towering chiefs to fiercer fight advance,
 And first Sarpedon whirl'd his mighty lance, 585

Which o'er the warrior's shoulder took its course,
 And spent in empty air its dying force.
 Not so Patroclus' never-erring dart ;
 Aim'd at his breast, it pierced the mortal part,
 Where the strong fibres bind the solid heart. 590
 Then, as the mountain oak, or poplar tall,
 Or pine, (fit mast for some great admiral,)
 Nods to the axe, till with a groaning sound
 It sinks, and spreads its honours on the ground ;
 Thus fell the king ; and, laid on earth supine, 595
 Before his chariot stretch'd his form divine :
 He grasp'd the dust distain'd with streaming gore,
 And, pale in death, lay groaning on the shore.
 So lies a bull beneath the lion's paws,
 While the grim savage grinds with foaming jaws 600
 The trembling limbs, and sucks the smoking blood ;
 Deep groans, and hollow roars, rebellow through the wood.
 Then to the leader of the Lycian band
 The dying chief address'd his last command :
 ' Glaucus, be bold ; thy task be first to dare 605
 ' The glorious dangers of destructive war,
 ' To lead my troops, to combat at their head,
 ' Incite the living, and supply the dead.
 ' Tell them, I charged them with my latest breath
 ' Not unreveng'd to bear Sarpedon's death. 610
 ' What grief, what shame, must Glaucus undergo,
 ' If those spoil'd arms adorn a Grecian foe !
 ' Then as a friend, and as a warrior, fight ;
 ' Defend my body, conquer in my right ;
 ' That, taught by great examples, all may try 615
 ' Like thee to vanquish, or like me to die.'
 He ceas'd ; the fates suppress'd his labouring breath,
 And his eyes darken'd with the shades of death.
 Th' insulting victor with disdain bestrode
 The prostrate prince, and on his bosom trod ; 620
 Then drew the weapon from his panting heart,
 The reeking fibres clinging to the dart ;
 From the wide wound gush'd out a stream of blood,
 And the soul issued in the purple flood.
 His flying steeds the Myrmidons detain, 625
 Unguided now, their mighty master slain.
 All-impotent of aid, transfix'd with grief,
 Unhappy Glaucus heard the dying chief.
 His painful arm, yet useless with the smart
 Inflicted late by Teucer's deadly dart, 630
 Supported on his better hand he stay'd ;
 To Phœbus then ('twas all he could) he pray'd :

' All-seeing monarch ! whether Lycia's coast,
 ' Or sacred Ithon, thy bright presence boast,
 ' Powerful alike to ease the wretch's smart ; 635
 ' O hear me ! god of every healing art !
 ' Lo ! stiff with clotted blood, and pierc'd with pain,
 ' That thrills my arm, and shoots through every vein :
 ' I stand unable to sustain the spear,
 ' And sigh, at distance from the glorious war. 640
 ' Low in the dust is great Sarpedon laid,
 ' Nor Jove vouchsaf'd his hapless offspring aid.
 ' But thou, O god of health ! thy succour lend.
 ' To guard the reliques of my slaughter'd friend.
 ' For thou, though distant, canst restore my might, 645
 ' To head my Lycians, and support the fight.'

Apollo heard ; and, suppliant as he stood,
 His heavenly hand restrain'd the flux of blood ;
 He drew the dolours from the wounded part,
 And breath'd a spirit in his rising heart. 650
 Renew'd by art divine, the hero stands,
 And owns th' assistance of immortal hands.
 First to the fight his native troops he warms,
 Then loudly calls on Troy's vindictive arms ;
 With ample strides he stalks from place to place, 655
 Now fires Agenor, now Polydamas ;
 Æneas next, and Hector he accosts ;
 Inflaming thus the rage of all their hosts :

' What thoughts, regardless chief ! thy breast employ,
 ' Oh too forgetful of the friends of Troy ! 660
 ' Those generous friends, who, from their country far,
 ' Breathe their brave souls out in another's war.
 ' See ! where in dust the great Sarpedon lies,
 ' In action valiant, and in council wise,
 ' Who guarded right, and kept his people free ; 665
 ' To all his Lycians lost, and lost to thee !
 ' Stretch'd by Patroclus' arm on yonder plains ;
 ' Oh save from hostile rage his lov'd remains !
 ' Ah ! let not Greece his conquer'd trophies boast,
 ' Nor on his corse revenge her heroes lost.' 670

He spoke : each leader in his grief partook ;
 Troy, at the loss, through all her legions shook ;
 Transfix'd with deep regret, they view o'erthrown
 At once his country's pillar, and their own ;
 A chief, who led to Troy's beleagu'rd wall 675
 A host of heroes, and outshin'd them all.
 Fir'd, they rush on ; first Hector seeks the foes,
 And with superior vengeance greatly glows.

But o'er the head the fierce Patroclus stands,
 And, rousing Ajax, rous'd the listening bands : 680
 ' Heroes, be men ! be what you were before ;
 ' Or weigh the great occasion, and be more.
 ' The chief who taught our lofty walls to yield,
 ' Lies pale in death, extended on the field :
 ' To guard his body, Troy in numbers flies ; 685
 ' 'Tis half the glory to maintain our prize.
 ' Haste, strip his arms, the slaughter round him spread,
 ' And send the living Lycians to the dead.'
 The heroes kindle at his fierce command ;
 The martial squadrons close on either hand. 690
 Here Troy and Lycia charge with loud alarms,
 Thessalia there and Greece oppose their arms.
 With horrid shouts they circle round the slain ;
 The clash of armour rings o'er all the plain.
 Great Jove, to swell the horrors of the fight, 695
 O'er the fierce armies pours pernicious night,
 And round his son confounds the warring hosts,
 His fate ennobling with a crowd of ghosts
 Now Greece gives way, and great Epigeus falls ;
 Agacleus' son, from Budium's lofty walls : 700
 Who, chas'd for murder thence, a suppliant came
 To Peleus and the silver-footed dame ;
 Now sent to Troy, Achilles' arms to aid,
 He pays the vengeance to his kinsman's shade *
 Soon as his luckless hand had touch'd the dead, 705
 A rock's large fragment thunder'd on his head ;
 Hurl'd by Hectorcan force, it cleft in twain
 His shatter'd helm, and stretch'd him o'er the slain.
 Fierce to the van of fight Patroclus came ;
 And, like an eagle darting at his game, 710
 Sprung on the Trojan and the Lycian band :
 What grief<sup>o</sup> thy heart, what fury urg'd thy hand,
 Oh generous Greek ! when with full vigour thrown
 At Sthenelaus flew the weighty stone,
 Which sunk him to the dead : when Troy, too near 715
 That arm, drew back ; and Hector learn'd to fear.
 Far as an able hand a lance can throw,
 Or at the lists, or at the fighting foe,
 So far the Trojans from their lines retir'd ;
 Till Glaucus, turning, all the rest inspir'd. 720

* He atones, by his own death for that which he had inflicted on his kinsman, and for which he had been chased from Budium.

Then Bathycleüs fell beneath his rage,
 The only hope of Chalcon's trembling age :
 Wide o'er the land was stretch'd his large domain,
 With stately seats and riches bless'd in vain.
 Him, bold with youth, and eager to pursue 725
 The flying Lycians, Glaucus met, and slew ;
 Pierced through the bosom with a sudden wound,
 He fell, and, falling, made the fields resound.
 Th' Achaians sorrow for their hero slain ;
 With conquering shouts the Trojans shake the plain, 730
 And crowd to spoil the dead : the Greeks oppose :
 An iron circle round the carcass grows
 Then brave Laogonus resign'd his breath,
 Despatch'd by Merion to the shades of death :
 On Ida's holy hill he made abode, 735
 The priest of Jove, and honour'd like his god.
 Between the jaw and ear the javelin went :
 The soul, exhaling, issued at the vent.
 His spear Æneas at the victor threw,
 Who, stooping forward, from the death withdrew ; 740
 The lance hiss'd harmless o'er his covering shield,
 And trembling struck, and rooted in the field ;
 There yet scarce spent, it quivers on the plain,
 Sent by the great Æneas' arm in vain.
 ' Swift as thou art,' (tho raging hero cries,) 745
 ' And skill'd in dancing to dispute the prize,
 ' My spear, the destin'd passage had it found,
 ' Had fix'd thy active vigour to the ground.'
 ' Oh valiant leader of the Dardan host !'
 (Insulted Merion thus retorts the boast ;) 750
 ' Strong as you are, 'tis mortal force you trust,
 ' An arm as strong may stretch thee in the dust.
 ' And if to this my lance thy fate be given,
 ' Vain are thy vaunts ; success is still from heaven :
 ' This, instant, sends thee down to Pluto's coast : 755
 ' Mine is the glory, his thy parting ghost.'
 ' O friend !' (Menætiüs' son this answer gave)
 ' With words to combat ill befits the brave :
 ' Not empty boasts the sons of Troy repel,
 ' Your swords must plunge them to the shades of hell. 760
 ' To speak, be seems the council : but to dare
 ' In glorious action, is the task of war.'
 This said, Patroclus to the battle flies ;
 Great Merion follows, and new shouts arise .
 Shields, helmets rattle, as the warriors close ; 765
 And thick and heavy sounds the storm of blows.

As through the shrilling vale, or mountain ground,
 The labours of the woodman's axe resound ;
 Blows following blows are heard re-echoing wide,
 While crackling forests fall on every side : 770
 Thus echoed all the fields with loud alarms,
 So fell the warriors, and so rung their arms.

Now great Sarpedon on the sandy shore,
 His heavenly form defac'd with dust and gore,
 And stuck with darts by warring heroes shed, 775
 Lies undistinguish'd from the vulgar dead.
 His long-disputed corse the chiefs enclose,
 On every side the busy combat grows ;
 Thick as beneath some shepherd's thatch'd abode,
 (The pails high foaming with a milky flood,) 780
 The buzzing flies, a persevering train,
 Incessant swarm, and chas'd return again.

Jove view'd the combat with a stern survey,
 And eyes that flash'd intolerable day ;
 Fix'd on the field his sight, his breast debates 785
 The vengeance due, and meditates the fates :
 Whether to urge their prompt effect, and call
 The force of Hector to Patroclus' fall,
 This instant see his short-liv'd trophies won,
 And stretch him breathless on his slaughter'd son ; 790
 Or yet, with many a soul's untimely flight,
 Augment the fame and horror of the fight.
 To crown Achilles' valiant friend with praise
 At length he dooms : and that his last of days
 Shall set in glory ; bids him drive the foe ; 795
 Nor unattended see the shades below.

Then Hector's mind he fills with dire dismay ;
 He mounts his car, and calls his hosts away ;
 Sunk with Troy's heavy fates, he sees decline
 The scales of Jove, and pants with awe divine. 800

Then, nor before, the hardy Lycians fled,
 And left their monarch with the common dead :
 Around, in heaps on heaps, a dreadful wall
 Of carnage rises, as the heroes fall.
 (So Jove decreed !) At length the Greeks obtain 805
 The prize contested, and despoil the slain.
 The radiant arms are by Patroclus borne,
 Patroclus' ships the glorious spoils adorn.

Then thus to Phœbus in the realms above,
 Spoke from his throne the cloud-compelling Jove : 810
 ' Descend, my Phœbus ! on the Phrygian plain,
 ' And from the fight convey Sarpedon slain :

' Then bathe his body in the crystal flood,
 ' With dust dishonour'd, and deform'd with blood ;
 ' O'er all his limbs ambrosial odours shed, 815
 ' And with celestial robes adorn the dead.
 ' Those rites discharg'd, his sacred corse bequeath
 ' To the soft arms of silent Sleep and Death :
 ' They to his friends the mournful charge shall bear
 ' His friends a tomb and pyramid shall rear ; 820
 ' What honours mortals after death receive,
 ' Those unavailing honours we may give.'

Apollo bows, and from mount Ida's height,
 Swift to the field precipitates his flight ;
 Thence from the war the breathless hero bore, 825
 Veil'd in a cloud to silver Simois' shore ;
 There bath'd his honourable wounds, and dress'd
 His manly members in th' immortal vest :
 And with perfumes of sweet ambrosial dews,
 Restores his freshness, and his form renews. 830
 Then Sleep and Death, two twins of winged race,
 Of matchless swiftness, but of silent pace,
 Receiv'd Sarpedon at the god's command,
 And in a moment reach'd the Lycian land ;
 The corse amidst his weeping friends they laid, 835
 Where endless honours wait the sacred shade.

Meanwhile Patroclus pours along the plains,
 With foaming coursers, and with loosen'd reins :
 Fierce on the Trojan and the Lycian crew,
 Ah blind to fate ! thy headlong fury flew : 840
 Against what fate and powerful Jove ordain,
 Vain was thy friend's command, thy courage vain.
 For he, the god, whose counsels uncontroll'd
 Dismay the mighty, and confound the bold ;
 'The god who gives, resumes, and orders all, 845
 He urg'd thee on, and urg'd thee on to fall.

Who first, brave hero ! by that arm was slain,
 Who last beneath thy vengeance press'd the plain,
 When heaven itself thy fatal fury led, 850
 And call'd to fill the number of the dead ?
 Adrestus first ; Autonoüs then succeeds ;
 Echeclus follows ; next young Megas bleeds ;
 Epistor, Menalippus, bite the ground :
 The slaughter Elasus and Mulius crown'd :
 Then sunk Pylartes to eternal night ; 855
 The rest, dispersing, trust their fates to flight.

Now Troy had stoop'd beneath his matchless power
 But flaming Pheobus kept the sacred tower.

Thrice at the battlements Patroclus struck,
His blazing ægis thrice Apollo shook : 860
He tried the fourth ; when, bursting from the cloud,
A more than mortal voice was heard aloud :

‘ Patroclus ! cease ; this heaven-defended wall
‘ Defies thy lance, not fated yet to fall ;
‘ Thy friend, thy greater far, it shall withstand, 865
‘ Troy shall not stoop, e’en to Achilles’ hand.’

So spoke the god who darts celestial fires :
The Greek obeys him, and with awe retires :
While Hector, checking at the Scæan gates
His panting coursers, in his breast debates, 870
Or in the field his forces to employ,
Or draw the troops within the walls of Troy.

Thus while he thought, beside him Phœbus stood,
In Asius’ shape, who reign’d by Sangar’s flood :
(Thy brother, Hecuba ! from Dymas sprung, 875
A valiant warrior, haughty, bold and young :)
Thus he accosts him : ‘ What a shameful sight !

‘ Gods ! is it Hector that forbears the fight ?
‘ Were thine my vigour, this successful spear
‘ Should soon convince thee of so false a fear. 880
‘ Turn thee, ah turn thee to the field of fame,
‘ And in Patroclus’ blood efface thy shame.
‘ Perhaps Apollo shall thy arms succeed,
‘ And heaven ordains him by thy lance to bleed.’

So spoke th’ inspiring god : then took his flight, 885
And plung’d amidst the tumult of the fight.

He bids Cebrión drive the rapid car ;
The lash resounds, the coursers rush to war :
The god the Grecians’ sinking souls depress’d,
And pour’d swift spirits through each Trojan breast. 890

Patroclus lights,<sup>a</sup> impatient for the fight ;
A spear his left, a stone employs his right :
With all his nerves he drives it at the foe ;
Pointed above, and rough and gross below :
The falling ruin crush’d Cebrión’s head, 895

The lawless offspring of king Priam’s bed ;
His front, brows, eyes, one undistinguish’d wound ;
The bursting balls drop sightless to the ground.
The charioteer, while yet he held the rein,
Struck from the car, falls headlong on the plain. 900

To the dark shades the soul unwilling glides,
While the proud victor thus his fall derides :

' Good heavens ! what active feats yon artist shews !
 ' What skilful divers are our Phrygian foes !
 ' Mark with what ease they sink into the sand ! 905
 ' Pity, that all their practice is by land !'

Then rushing sudden on his prostrate prize,
 To spoil the carcass fierce Patroclus flies :
 Swift as a lion, terrible and bold,
 That sweeps the fields, depopulates the fold ; 910
 Pierc'd through the dauntless heart, then tumbles slain ;
 And from his fatal courage finds his bane.

At once bold Hector, leaping from his car,
 Defends the body, and provokes the war.
 Thus for some slaughter'd hind, with equal rage, 915
 Two lordly rulers of the wood engage ;
 Stung with fierce hunger each the prey invades,
 And echoing roars rebellow through the shades.

Stern Hector fastens on the warrior's head,
 And by the foot Patroclus drags the dead ; 920
 While all around, confusion, rage, and fright
 Mix the contending hosts in mortal fight.

So, pent by hills, the wild winds roar aloud
 In the deep bosom of some gloomy wood ;
 Leaves, arms, and trees, aloft in air are blown, 925
 The broad oaks crackle, and the Sylvans' groan ;
 This way and that the rattling thicket bends,
 And the whole forest in one crash descends.

Not with less noise, with less tumultuous rage,
 In dreadful shock the mingled hosts engage. 930

Darts shower'd on darts now round the carcass ring ;
 Now flights of arrows bounding from the string :
 Stones follow stones ; some clatter on the fields,
 Some, hard and heavy, shake the sounding shields.
 ' But where the rising whirlwind clouds the plains, 935
 Sunk in soft dust the mighty chief remains,
 And, stretch'd in death, forgets the guiding reins !

Now, flaming from the zenith, Sol had driven
 His fervid orb through half the vault of heaven ;
 While on each host with equal tempest fell 940
 The showering darts, and numbers sunk to hell.
 But when his evening wheels o'erhung the main,
 Glad conquest rested on the Grecian train.

Then, from amidst the tumult and alarms,
 They draw the conquer'd corse and radiant arms. 945

<sup>9</sup> Sylvan deities. Pope uses the word in the same way elsewhere :

' Her private orchards, wall'd on every side,
 To lawless Sylvans all access denied.

Then rash Patroclus with new fury glows,
And, breathing slaughter, pours amid the foes.
Thrice on the press like Mars himself he flew,
And thrice three heroes at each onset slew.

• There ends thy glory ! there the fates untwine 950
The last black remnant of so bright a line ;
Apollo dreadful stops thy middle way ;
Death calls, and heaven allows no longer day !

For lo ! the god in dusky clouds enshrin'd,
Approaching, dealt a staggering blow behind. 955
The weighty shock his neck and shoulders feel ;

His eyes flash sparkles, his stunn'd senses reel
In giddy darkness ; far to distance flung,
His bounding helmet on the champaign rung.
Achilles' plume is stain'd with dust and gore, 960
That plume which never stoop'd to earth before ;

Long us'd, untouch'd, in fighting fields to shine,
And shade the temples of the man divine.
Jove dooms it now on Hector's helm to nod ;
Not long—for fate pursues him, and the god. 965

His spear in shivers falls : his ample shield
Drops from his arm : his baldrick strews the field :
The corslet his astonish'd breast forsakes ;
Loose is each joint ; each nerve with horror shakes,
Stupid he stares, and all-assistless stands : 970
Such is the force of more than mortal hands !

A Dardan youth there was, well known to fame,
From Panthus sprung, Euphorbus was his name ;
Fam'd for the manage of the foaming horse,
Skill'd in the dart, and matchless in the course : 975
Full twenty knights he tumbled from the car,
While yet he learn'd his rudiments of war.

His venturous spear first drew the hero's gore ;
He struck, he wounded, but he durst no more ;
Nor, though disarm'd, Patroclus' fury stood, 980
But swift withdrew the long-protended wood,
And turn'd him short, and herded in the crowd.

Thus by an arm divine, and mortal spear,
Wounded at once Patroclus yields to fear,
Retires for succour to his social train, 985
And flies the fate which heaven decreed, in vain.

Stern Hector, as the bleeding chief he views,
Breaks through the ranks, and his retreat pursues :
The lance arrests him with a mortal wound ;
He falls, earth thunders, and his arms resound. 990

With him all Greece was sunk ; that moment all
 Her yet surviving heroes seem'd to fall.
 So, scorch'd with heat, along the desert shore,
 The roaring lion meets a bristly boar,
 Fast by the sprung ; they both dispute the flood, 995
 With flaming eyes and jaws besmear'd with blood ;
 At length the sovereign savage wins the strife,
 And the torn boar resigns his thirst and life.
 Patroclus thus, so many chiefs o'erthrown,
 So many lives offus'd, expires his own. 1000
 As dying now at Hector's feet he lies,
 He sternly views him, and triumphing cries :
 ' Lie there, Patroclus ! and with thee the joy,
 ' Thy pride once promis'd, of subverting Troy ;
 ' The fancied scenes of Ilium wrapp'd in flames, 1005
 ' And thy soft pleasures serv'd with captive dames !
 ' Unthinking man ! I fought those towers to free,
 ' And guard that beauteous race from lords like thee
 ' But thou a prey to vultures shalt be made ;
 ' Thy own Achilles cannot lend thee aid , 1010
 ' Though much at parting that great chief might say,
 ' And much enjoin thee, this important day :
 " Return not, my brave friend," (perhaps he said,)
 " Without the bloody arms of Hector dead."
 ' He spokc, Patroclus march'd, and thus he sped.' 1015
 Supine, and wildly gazing on the skies,
 With faint expiring breath, the chief replies .
 ' Vain boaster ! cease, and know the powers divine
 ' Jove's and Apollo's is this deed, not thine ;
 ' To heaven is ow'd whate'er your own you call, 1020
 ' And heaven itself disarm'd no ere my fall.
 ' Had twenty mortals, each thy match in might,
 ' Oppos'd me fairly, they had sunk in fight :
 ' By fate and Phœbus was I first o'erthrown,
 ' Euphorbus next ; the third mean part thy own. 1025
 ' But thou, imperious ! hear my latest breath ;
 The gods inspire it, and it sounds thy death !
 ' Insulting man, thou shalt be soon as I ;
 ' Black fate hangs o'er thee, and thy hour draws nigh ,
 ' E'en now on life's last verge I see thee stand. 1030
 ' I see thee fall, and by Achilles' hand.'
 He faints ; the soul unwilling wings her way,
 (The beauteous body left a load of clay,)
 Flits to the lone, uncomfortable coast ;
 A naked, wandering, melancholy ghost ! 1035

Then Hector pausing, as his eyes he fed
 On the pale carcass, thus address'd the dead :
 ' From whence this boding speech, the stern decree
 ' Of death denounced, or why denounced to me ?
 ' Why not as well Achilles' fate be given 1040
 ' To Hector's lance ? who knows the will of heaven ?'
 Pensive he said : then, pressing as he lay
 His breathless bosom, tore the lance away,
 And upwards cast the corse : the recking spear
 He shakes, and charges the bold charioteer. 1045
 But swift Automedon with loosen'd reins,
 Rapt in the chariot o'er the distant plains,
 Far from his rage th' immortal coursers drove ;
 Th' immortal coursers were the gift of Jove.

BOOK XVII.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE SEVENTH BATTLE, FOR THE BODY OF PATROCLUS.—THE ACTS OF MENELAUS.

Menelaus, upon the death of Patroclus, defends his body from the enemy. Euphorbus, who attempts it, is slain. Hector advancing, Menelaus retires ; but soon returns with Ajax, and drives him off. This Glaucus objects to Hector as a flight, who thereupon puts on the armour he had won from Patroclus, and renews the battle. The Greeks give way, till Ajax rallies them. Æneas sustains the Trojans. Æneas and Hector attempt the chariot of Achilles, which is borne off by Automedon. The horses of Achilles deplore the loss of Patroclus : Jupiter covers his body with a thick darkness : the noble prayer of Ajax on that occasion. Menelaus sends Antilochus to Achilles, with the news of Patroclus's death. then returns to the fight, where, though attacked with the utmost fury, he and Meriones, assisted by the Ajaxes, bear off the body to the ships.

The time is the evening of the eight-and-twentieth day. The scene lies in the fields before Troy.

ON the cold earth divine Patroclus spread,
 Lies pierced with wounds among the vulgar dead.
 Great Menelaus, touch'd with generous woe,
 Springs to the front, and guards him from the foe :
 Thus, round her new-calf'n young the heifer moves, 5
 Out of her throes, and first-born of her loves ;
 And anxious (helpless as he lies, and bare)
 Turns and re-turns her, with a mother's care.

Oppos'd to each that near the carcass came,
 His broad shield glimmers, and his lances flame. 10
 The son of Panthus, skill'd the dart to send,
 Eyes the dead hero, and insults the friend :
 ' This hand, Atrides, laid Patroclus low ;
 ' Warrior ! desist, nor tempt an equal blow.
 ' To me the spoils my prowess won, resign ; 15
 ' Depart with life, and leave the glory mine.'
 • The Trojan thus : the Spartan monarch burn'd
 With generous anguish, and in scorn return'd :
 ' Laugh'st thou not, Jove ! from thy superior throne,
 ' When mortals boast of prowess not their own ? 20
 ' Not thus the lion glories in his might,
 ' Nor panther braves his spotted foe in fight ;
 ' Nor thus the boar (those terrors of the plain) ;
 ' Man only vaunts his force, and vaunts in vain.
 ' But far the vainest of the boastful kind 25
 ' These sons of Panthus vent their haughty mind.
 ' Yet 'twas but late, beneath my conquering steel
 ' This boaster's brother, Hyperenor, fell :
 ' Against our arm, which rashly he defied,
 ' Vain was his vigour, and as vain his pride. 30
 ' These eyes beheld him on the dust expire,
 ' No more to cheer his spouse, or glad his sire.
 ' Presumptuous youth ! like his shall be thy doom,
 ' Go, wait thy brother to the Stygian gloom ;
 ' Or, while thou may'st, avoid the threaten'd fate ; 35
 ' Fools stay to feel it, and are wise too late.'
 Unmov'd, Euphorbus thus : ' That action known,
 ' Come, for my brother's blood repay thy own.
 ' His weeping father claims thy destin'd head,
 ' And spouse, a widow in her bridal bed. 40
 ' On these thy conquer'd spoils I shall bestow,
 ' To soothe a consort's and a parent's woe.
 ' No longer then defer the glorious strife,
 ' Let heaven decide our fortune, fame, and life.'
 Swift as the word the missile lance he flings, 45
 The well-aim'd weapon on the buckler rings,
 But, blunted by the brass, innoxious falls :
 On Jove, the father, great Atrides calls ;
 Nor flies the javelin from his arm in vain ;
 It pierced his throat, and bent him to the plain ; 50
 Wide through the neck appears the grisly wound,
 Prone sinks the warrior, and his arms resound.
 The shining circlets of his golden hair,
 Which e'en the Graces might be proud to wear,

Instarr'd with gems and gold, bestrew the shore,
With dust dishonour'd, and deform'd with gore. 55

As the young olive, in some sylvan scene,
Crown'd by fresh fountains with eternal green.
Lifts the gay head, in snowy flowerets fair,
And plays and dances to the gentle air; 60

When lo! a whirlwind from high heaven invades
The tender plant, and withers all its shades;
It lies uprooted from its genial bed,
A lovely ruin now defaced and dead.

Thus young, thus beautiful, Euphorbus lay, 65
While the fierce Spartan tore his arms away.

Proud of his deed, and glorious in the prize,
Affrighted Troy the towering victor flies;
Flies, as before some mountain lion's ire
The village curs and trembling swains retire; 70

When o'er the slaughter'd bull they hear him roar,
And see his jaws distil with smoking gore;
All pale with fear, at distance scatter'd round,
They shout incessant, and the vales resound.

Meanwhile Apollo view'd with envious eyes, 75
And urg'd great Hector to dispute the prize:<sup>1</sup>
(In Montes' shape, beneath whose martial care
The rough Ciconians learn'd the trade of war:)

'Forbear,' he cried, 'with fruitless speed to chase
'Achilles' coursers, of ethereal race; 80

'They stoop not, these, to mortal man's command,
'Or stoop to none but great Achilles' hand.

'Too long amus'd with a pursuit so vain,
'Turn, and behold the brave Euphorbus slain! 85

'By Sparta slain; for ever now suppress'd
'The fire which burn'd in that undaunted breast!'

Thus having spoke, Apollo wing'd his flight,
And mix'd with mortals in the toils of fight:

His words infix'd unutterable care
Deep in great Hector's soul: through all the war 90

He darts his anxious eye: and instant view'd
The breathless hero in his blood imbrued,

(Forth welling from the wound, as prone he lay,)
And in the victor's hand the shining prey.

Sheath'd in bright arms, through cleaving ranks he flies, 95
And sends his voice in thunder to the skies:

<sup>1</sup> That is, the body of Patroclus; to contend for which, Apollo recalls Hector from the pursuit of the steeds of Achilles.

Fierce as a flood of flame by Vulcan sent,
 It flew, and fir'd the nations as it went.
 Atrides from the voice the storm divin'd,
 And thus explor'd his own unconquer'd mind : 100
 ' Then shall I quit Patroclus on the plain,
 ' Slain in my cause, and for my honour slain ;
 ' Desert the arms, the relics of my friend ?
 ' Or singly Hector and his troops attend ?
 * Sure, where such partial favour heaven bestow'd, 105
 ' To brave the hero were to brave the god :
 ' Forgive me, Greece, if once I quit the field ;
 ' 'Tis not to Hector, but to heaven, I yield.
 ' Yet, nor the god nor heaven should give me fear,
 ' Did but the voice of Ajax reach my ear : 110
 ' Still would we turn, still battle on the plains,
 ' And give Achilles all that yet remains
 ' Of his and our Patroclus.' This, no more,
 The time allow'd : Troy thicken'd on the shore ;
 A sable scene ! The terrors Hector led ; 115
 Slow he recedes, and sighing quits the dead.
 So from the fold th' unwilling lion parts,
 Forced by loud clamours, and a storm of darts ;
 He flies indeed, but threatens as he flies,
 With heart indignant and retorted eyes. 120
 Now, enter'd in the Spartan ranks, he turn'd
 His manly breast, and with new fury burn'd :
 O'er all the black battalions sent his view,
 And through the cloud the godlike Ajax knew ;
 Where labouring on the left the warrior stood, 125
 All grim in arms, and cover'd o'er with blood ;
 There breathing courage, where the god of day
 Had sunk each heart with terror and dismay.
 To him the king : ' Oh ! Ajax, oh my friend !
 ' Haste, and Patroclus' lov'd remains defend : 130
 ' The body to Achilles to restore,
 ' Demands our care ; alas ! we can no more !
 ' For naked now, despoil'd of arms, he lies ;
 ' And Hector glories in the dazzling prize.'
 He said, and touch'd his heart. The raging pair 135
 Pierce the thick battle, and provoke the war.
 Already had stern Hector seiz'd his head,<sup>2</sup>
 And doom'd to Trojan dogs th' unhappy dead ;

<sup>2</sup> Homer takes care, so long before-hand, to lessen the horror that may be conceived from the cruelty that Achilles will exercise upon the body of Hector. That cruelty will be only the punishment of this which Hector

But soon as Ajax rear'd his tower-like shield,
 Sprung to his car, and measur'd back the field. 140
 His train to Troy the radiant armour bear,
 To stand a trophy of his fame in war.

Meanwhile great Ajax (his broad shield display'd)
 Guards the dead hero with the dreadful shade;
 And now before, and now behind he stood : 145
 Thus, in the centre of some gloomy wood,
 With many a step the lioness surrounds
 Her tawny young, beset by men and hounds ;
 Elate her heart, and rousing all her powers,
 Dark o'er the fiery balls each hanging eye-brow lowers. 150
 Fast by his side the generous Spartan glows
 With great revenge, and feeds his inward woes.

But Glaucus, leader of the Lycian aids,
 On Hector frowning, thus his flight upbraids :
 ' Where now in Hector shall we Hector find ? 155
 ' A manly form, without a manly mind !
 ' Is this, O chief ! a hero's boasted fame ?
 ' How vain, without the merit, is the name !
 ' Since battle is renounc'd, thy thoughts employ
 ' What other methods may preserve thy Troy : 160
 ' 'Tis time to try if Ilion's state can stand
 ' By thee alone, nor ask a foreign hand ;
 ' Mean, empty boast ! but shall the Lycians stake
 ' Their lives for you ? those Lycians you forsake ?
 ' What from thy thankless arms can we expect ? 165
 ' Thy friend Sarpedon proves thy base neglect :
 ' Say, shall our slaughter'd bodies guard your walls,
 ' While unreveng'd the great Sarpedon falls ?
 ' E'en where he died for Troy, you left him there,
 ' A feast for dogs, and all the fowls of air. 170
 ' On my command if any Lycian wait,
 ' Hence let him march, and give up Troy to fate.
 ' Did such a spirit as the gods impart
 ' Impel one Trojan hand, or Trojan heart,
 ' (Such as should burn in every soul that draws 175
 ' The sword for glory, and his country's cause,)
 ' E'en yet our mutual arms we might employ,
 ' And drag yon carcass to the walls of Troy.
 ' Oh ! were Patroclus ours, we might obtain
 ' Sarpedon's arms, and honour'd corse, again ! 180

he exercises upon the body of Patroclus ; he drags him, he designs to cut off his head, and to leave his body upon the ramparts, exposed to dogs and birds of prey. EUSTATHIUS. Pope.

'Greece with Achilles' friend should be repaid,
 'And thus due honours purchas'd to his shade.
 'But words are vain. Let Ajax once appear,
 'And Hector trembles and recedes with fear;
 'Thou dar'st not meet the terrors of his eye; \ 185
 'And lo, already thou prepar'st to fly.'

The Trojan chief with fix'd resentment ey'd
 The Lycian leader, and sedate replied :

'Say, is it just (my friend) that Hector's ear
 'From such a warrior such a speech should hear? 190
 'I deem'd thee once the wisest of thy kind,
 'But ill this insult suits a prudent mind.
 'I shun great Ajax? I desert my train?
 'Tis mine to prove the rash assertion vain;
 'I joy to mingle where the battle bleeds, 195
 'And hear the thunder of the sounding steeds.
 'But Jove's high will is ever uncontroll'd,
 'The strong he withers, and confounds the bold :
 'Now crowns with fame the mighty man, and now
 'Strikes the fresh garland from the victor's brow! 200
 'Come, through you squadrons let us hew the way,
 'And thou be witness if I fear to-day;
 'If yet a Greek the sight of Hector dread,
 'Or yet their hero dare defend the dead.'

Then, turning to the martial hosts, he cries, 205
 'Ye Trojans, Dardans, Lycians, and allies!
 'Be men (my friends) in action as in name,
 'And yet be mindful of your ancient fame.
 'Hector in proud Achilles' arms shall shine,
 'Torn from his friend, by right of conquest mine.' 210

He strode along the field as thus he said;
 (The sable plumage nodded o'er his head :)
 Swift through the spacious plain he sent a look;
 One instant saw, one instant overtook
 The distant band, that on the sandy shore 215
 The radiant spoils to sacred Ilion bore.
 There his own mail unbraced the field bestrow'd;
 His train to Troy convey'd the massy load.
 Now blazing in th' immortal arms he stands,
 The work and present of celestial hands; 220
 By aged Peleus to Achilles given,
 As first to Peleus by the court of Heaven:
 His father's arms not long Achilles wears,
 Forbid by fate to reach his father's years.

Him, proud in triumph, glittering from afar,
 The god whose thunder rends the troubled air

Beheld with pity ! as apart he sat,
And, conscious, look'd through all the scene of fate.

He shook the sacred honours of his head ;
Olympus trembled, and the godhead said : 230

' Ah, wretched man ! unmindful of thy end !

' At moment's glory, and what fates attend !

' In heavenly panoply, divinely bright

' Thou stand'st, and armies tremble at thy sight,
' As at Achilles' self ! beneath thy dart 235

' Lies slain the great Achilles' dearer part :

' Thou from the mighty dead those arms hast torn,

' Which once the greatest of mankind had worn.

' Yet live ! I give thee one illustrious day, •

' A blaze of glory ere thou sad'st away. 240

' For ah ! no more Andromache shall come,

' With joyful tears to welcome Hector home ;

' No more officious, with endearing charms,

' From thy tir'd limbs unbrace Pelides' arms !

Then with his sable brow he gave the nod, 245

That seals his word ; the sanction of the god.

The stubborn arms (by Jove's command dispos'd)

Conform'd spontaneous, and around him clos'd :

Fill'd with the god, enlarged his members grew,
Through all his veins a sudden vigour flew : 250

The blood in brisker tides began to roll,

And Mars himself came rushing on his soul.

Exhorting loud through all the field he strode, •

And look'd, and mov'd, Achilles, or a god.

Now Mesthles, Glaucus, Medon he inspires, 255

Now Phorcys, Chromius, and Hippothoüs fires ;

The great Thersilochus like fury found,

Asteropæus kindled at the sound,

And Ennomus, in augury renown'd.

' Hear, all ye hosts, and hear unnumber'd bands 260

' Of neighbouring nations, or of distant lands !

' 'Twas not for state we summon'd you so far,

' To boast our numbers, and the pomp of war ;

' Ye came to fight ; a valiant foe to chase, •

' To save our present and our future race. 265

' For this, our wealth, our products, you enjoy,

' And glean the relics of exhausted Troy.

' Now, then, to conquer or to die prepare,

' To die or conquer are the terms of war.

' Whatever hand shall win Patroclus slain, 270

' Whoe'er shall drag him to the Trojan train,

' With Hector's self shall equal honours claim ;

' With Hector part the spoil, and share the fame.'

Fir'd by his words, the troops dismiss their fears,
 They join, they thicken, they pretend their spears ; 275
 Full on the Greeks they drive in firm array,
 And each from Ajax hopes the glorious prey :
 Vain hope ! what numbers shall the field o'erspread,
 What victims perish round the mighty dead !

Great Ajax mark'd the growing storm from far, 280
 And thus bespoke his brother of the war :
 ' Our fatal day, alas ! is come, my friend,
 ' And all our wars and glories at an end !
 ' 'Tis not this corse alone we guard in vain,
 ' Condemn'd to vultures on the Trojan plain ; 285
 ' We too must yield ; the same sad fate must fall
 ' On thee, on me, perhaps (my friend) on all.
 ' See what a tempest direful Hector spreads,
 ' And lo ! it bursts, it thunders on our heads !
 ' Call on our Greeks, if any hear the call, 290
 ' The bravest Greeks : this hour demands them all.'

The warrior rais'd his voice, and wide around
 The field re-echoed the distressful sound :
 ' Oh chiefs ! oh princes ! to whose hand is given
 ' The rule of men ; whose glory is from heaven ! 295
 ' Whom with due honours both Atrides grace :
 ' Ye guides and guardians of our Argive race !
 ' All, whom this well-known voice shall reach from far,
 ' All, whom I see not through this cloud of war,
 ' Come all ! let generous rage your arms employ, 300
 ' And save Patroclus from the dogs of 'Troy.'

Oilean Ajax first the voice obey'd,
 Swift was his pace and ready was his aid ;
 Next him Idomeneus, more slow with age,
 And Merion, burning with a hero's rage. 305
 The long-succeeding numbers who can name ?
 But all were Greeks, and eager all for fame.
 Fierce to the charge great Hector led the throng ;
 Whole Troy, embodied, rush'd with shouts along.
 Thus, when a mountain billow foams and raves, 310
 Where some swollen river disembogues his waves,
 Full in the mouth is stopp'd the rushing tide,
 The boiling ocean works from side to side,
 The river trembles to his utmost shore,
 And distant rocks rebellow to the roar. 315

Nor less resolv'd, the firm Achaian band
 With brazen shields in horrid circle stand :
 Jove, pouring darkness o'er the mingled fight,
 Conceals the warriors' shining helms in night :

To him the chief, for whom the hosts contend, 320
 Had liv'd not hateful, for he liv'd a friend :
 Dead he protects him with superior care,
 Nor dooms his carcass to the birds of air.
 The first attack the Grecians scarce sustain,
 Repuls'd, they yield ; the Trojans seize the slain : 325
 Then fierce they rally, to revenge led on
 By the swift rage of Ajax Telamon :
 (Ajax, to Pelcus' son the second name,
 In graceful stature next, and next in fame.)
 With headlong force the foremost ranks he tore : 330
 So through the thicket bursts the mountain boar,
 And rudely scatters, far to distance round,
 The frighted hunter and the baying hound.
 The son of Lethus, brave Pelasgus' heir,<sup>4</sup>
 Hippothous, dragg'd the carcass through the war ; 335
 The sinewy ancles bor'd, the feet he bound
 With thongs, inserted through the double wound ;
 Inevitable fate o'ertakes the dead ;
 Doom'd by great Ajax' vengeful lance to bleed ;
 It cleft the helmet's brazen cheeks in twain ; 340
 The shatter'd crest and horsehair strew the plain :
 With nerves relax'd he tumbles to the ground,
 The brain comes gushing through the ghastly wound :
 He drops Patroclus' foot, and, o'er him spread,
 Now lies a sad companion of the dead : 345
 Far from Larissa lies, his native air,
 And ill requites his parent's tender care.
 Lamented youth ! in life's first bloom he fell,
 Sent by great Ajax to the shades of hell.
 Once more at Ajax Hector's javelin flies ; 350
 The Grecian marking as it cut the skies,
 Shunn'd the descending death, which, hissing on,
 Stretch'd in the dust the great Iphitus' son,
 Schedius the brave, of all the Phocian kind
 The boldest warrior, and the noblest mind : 355
 In little Panope, for strength renown'd,
 He held his seat, and rul'd the realms around.
 Plung'd in his throat, the weapon drank his blood,
 And, deep transpiercing, through the shoulder stood ;
 In clanging arms the hero fell, and all 360
 The fields resounded with his weighty fall.
 Phorceys, as slain Hippothous he defends,
 The Telamonian lance his belly rends ;

<sup>4</sup> The original is, " the illustrious son of Pelasgic Lethus."

The hollow armour burst before the stroke,
 And through the wound the rushing entrails broke. 365
 In strong convulsions panting on the sands
 He lies, and grasps the dust with dying hands.
 Struck at the sight, recede the Trojan train :
 The shouting Argives strip the heroes slain.
 And now had Troy, by Greece compell'd to yield, 370
 Fled to her ramparts, and resign'd the field ;
 Greece, in her native fortitude elate,
 With Jove averse, had turn'd the scale of fate ;
 But Phœbus urg'd Æneas to the fight ;
 He seem'd like aged Periphas to sight : 375
 (A herald in Anchises' love grown old,
 Rever'd for prudence, and, with prudence, bold.)
 Thus he : ' What methods yet, oh chief ! remain,
 ' To save your Troy, though heaven its fall ordain ?
 ' There have been heroes, who, by virtuous care, 380
 ' By valour, numbers, and by arts of war,
 ' Have forc'd the powers to spare a sinking state,
 ' And gain'd at length the glorious odds of fate.
 ' But you, when fortune smiles, when Jove declares
 ' His partial favour, and assists your wars, 385
 ' Your shameful efforts 'gainst yourselves employ,
 ' And force th' unwilling god to ruin Troy.'
 Æneas, through the form assumed, describes
 The power conceal'd, and thus to Hector cries :
 ' Oh lasting shame ! to our own fears a prey, 390
 ' We seek our ramparts, and desert the day.
 ' A god (nor is he less) my bosom warms,
 ' And tells me Jove asserts the Trojan arms.'
 He spoke, and foremost to the combat flew ;
 The bold example all his hosts pursue. 395
 Then first Leocritus beneath him bled,
 In vain beloved by valiant Lycomedes ;
 Who view'd his fall, and, grieving at the chance,
 Swift to revenge it, sent his angry lance :
 The whirling lance, with vigorous force address'd, 400
 Descends, and pants in Apisaon's breast :
 From rich Pæonia's vales the warrior came ;
 Next thee, Asteropeus ! in place and fame,
 Asteropeus with grief beheld thè slain,
 And rush'd to combat, but he rush'd in vain : 405
 Indissolubly firm, around the dead,
 Rank within rank, on buckler buckler spread,
 And hemm'd with bristled spears, the Grecians stood ;
 A brazen bulwark, and an iron wood.

Great Ajax eyes them with incessant care,
And in an orb contracts the crowded war,
Close in their ranks commands to fight or fall,
And stands the centre and the soul of all :
Fix'd on the spot, they war, and wounded, wound ;
A sanguine torrent steeps the rocking ground ;
On heaps the Greeks, on heaps the Trojans bled,
And, thickening round them, rise the hills of dead. 415

Greece, in close order and collected might,
Yet suffers least, and sways the wavering fight ;
Fierce as conflicting fires, the combat burns,
And now it rises, now it sinks, by turns. 420

In one thick darkness all the fight was lost :
The sun, the moon, and all th' ethereal host,
Seem'd as extinct : day ravish'd from their eyes,
And all heaven's splendours blotted from the skies. 425

Such o'er Patroclus' body hung the night,
The rest in sunshine fought, and open light :
Unclouded there, th' aërial azure spread,
No vapour rested on the mountain's head,
The golden sun pour'd forth a stronger ray,
And all the broad expansion flam'd with day. 430

Dispers'd around the plain, by fits they fight,
And here, and there, their scatter'd arrows light :
But death and darkness o'er the carcass spread,
There burn'd the war, and there the mighty bled. 435

Meanwhile the sons of Nestor, in the rear,
(Their fellows routed,) toss the distant spear,
And skirmish wide : so Nestor gave command,
When from the ships he sent the Pylian band. 440

The youthful brothers thus for fame contend,
Nor knew the fortune of Achilles' friend ;
In thought they view'd him still, with martial joy,
Glorious in arms, and dealing deaths to Troy.

But round the corse the heroes pant for breath,
And thick and heavy grows the work of death : 445
O'erlabour'd now, with dust, and sweat, and gore,
Their knees, their legs, their feet, are cover'd o'er ;
Drops follow drops, the clouds on clouds arise,
And carnage clogs their hands, and darkness fills their eyes.

As when a slaughter'd bull's yet-reeking hide, 450
Strain'd with full force, and tugg'd from side to side,
The brawny curriers stretch ; and labour o'er
Th' extended surface, drunk with fat and gore ;
So tugging round the corse both armies stood ;
The mangled body bath'd in sweat and blood : 455

While Greeks and Ilions equal strength employ,
 Now to the ships to force it, now to Troy.
 Not Pallas' self, her breast when fury warms,
 Nor he whose anger sets the world in arms,
 Could blame this scene ; such rage, such horror, reign'd ; 465
 Such Jove to honour the great dead ordain'd.

Achilles in his ships at distance lay,
 Nor knew the fatal fortune of the day ;
 He, yet unconscious of Patroclus' fall,
 In dust extended under Ilion's wall. 465
 Expects him glorious from the conquer'd plain,
 And for his wish'd return prepares in vain ;
 Though well he knew, to make proud Ilion bend,
 Was more than heaven had destin'd to his friend,
 Perhaps to him : this Thetis had reveal'd ; 470
 The rest, in pity to her son, conceal'd.

Still rag'd the conflict round the hero dead,
 And heaps on heaps by mutual wounds they bled.
 ' Curs'd be the man ' (e'en private Greeks would say)
 ' Who dares desert this well-disputed day ! 475
 ' First may the cleaving earth before our eyes
 ' Gape wide, and drink our blood for sacrifice !
 ' First perish all, ere haughty Troy shall boast
 ' We lost Patroclus, and our glory lost.'

Thus they. While with one voice the Trojan said, 480
 ' Grant this day, Jove ! or heap us on the dead !'

Then clash their sounding arms ; the clangors rise,
 And shake the brazen concave of the skies.

Meantime, at distance from the scene of blood,
 The pensive steeds of great Achilles stood ; 485
 Their godlike master slain before their eyes,
 They wept, and shar'd in human miseries.

In vain Automedon now shakes the rein,
 Now plies the lash, and soothes and threats in vain ;
 Nor to the fight, nor Hellespont they go ; 490
 Restive they stood, and obstinate in woe :
 Still as a tombstone, never to be mov'd,

On some good man, or woman unprov'd,
 Lays its eternal weight ; or fix'd as stands
 A marble courser by the sculptor's hands, 495
 Plac'd on the hero's grave. Along their face

The big round drops cours'd down with silent pace,
 Conglobing on the dust. Their manes, that late
 Circled their arched necks, and wav'd in state,
 Trail'd on the dust beneath the yoke were spread, 500
 And prone to earth was hung their languid head :

Nor Jove disdain'd to cast a pitying look,
 While thus relenting to the steeds he spoke :
 ' Unhappy coursers of immortal strain !
 ' Exempt from age, and deathless now in vain ; 505
 ' Did we your race on mortal man bestow,
 ' Only, alas ! to share in mortal woe ?
 ' For ah ! what is there, of inferior birth,
 ' That breathes or creeps upon the dust of earth ;
 ' What wretched creature of what wretched kind, 510
 ' Than man more weak, calamitous, and blind ?
 ' A miserable race ! but cease to mourn :
 ' For not by you shall Priam's son be borne
 ' High on the splendid car : one glorious prize
 ' He rashly boasts ; the rest our will denies. 515
 ' Ourself will swiftness to your nerves impart.
 ' Ourself with rising spirits swell your heart.
 ' Automedon your rapid flight shall bear
 ' Safe to the navy through the storm of war.
 ' For yet 'tis given to Troy, to ravage o'er 520
 ' The field, and spread her slaughters to the shore ;
 ' The sun shall see her conquer, till his fall
 ' With sacred darkness shades the face of all.'
 He said ; and breathing in th' immortal horse
 Excessive spirit, urg'd them to the course ; 525
 From their high manes they shake the dust, and bear
 The kindling chariot through the parted war.
 So flies a vulture through the clamorous train
 Of geese, that scream, and scatter round the plain.
 From danger now with swiftest speed they flew, 530
 And now to conquest with like speed pursue ;
 Solo in the seat the charioteer remains,
 Now plies the javelin, now directs the reins :
 Him brave Alcimedon beheld distress'd,
 Approach'd the chariot, and the chief address'd : 535
 ' What god provokes thee, rashly thus to dare,
 ' Alone, unaided, in the thickest war ?
 ' Alas ! thy friend is slain, and Hector wields
 ' Achilles' arms triumphant in the fields.'
 ' In happy time, (the charioteer replies,) 540
 ' The bold Alcimedon now greets my eyes ;
 ' No Greek like him the heavenly steeds restrains,
 ' Or holds their fury in suspended reins :
 ' Patroclus, while he liv'd, their rage could tame,
 ' But now Patroclus is an empty name ! 545
 ' To thee I yield the seat, to thee resign
 ' The ruling charge : the task of fight be mine.'

He said. Alcimedon, with active heat,
 Snatches the reins, and vaults into the seat.
 His friend descends. The chief of Troy descried, 550
 And call'd Æneas fighting near his side :
 ' Lo, to my sight beyond our hope restor'd,
 ' Achilles' car, deserted of its lord !
 ' The glorious steeds our ready arms invite,
 ' Scarce their weak drivers guide them through the fight : 555
 ' Can such opponents stand, when we assail ?
 ' Unite thy force, my friend, and we prevail.'
 The son of Venus to the counsel yields :
 Then o'er their backs they spread their solid shields ;
 With brass refulgent the broad surface shin'd, 560
 And thick bull-hides the spacious concave lin'd.
 Them Chronius follows, Aretus succeeds,
 Each hopes the conquest of the lofty steeds ;
 In vain, brave youths, with glorious hopes ye burn,
 In vain advance ! not fated to return. 565
 Unmov'd, Automedon attends the fight,
 Implores th' Eternal, and collects his might.
 Then, turning to his friend, with dauntless mind :
 ' Oh keep the foaming coursers close behind !
 ' Full on my shoulders let their nostrils blow, 570
 ' For hard the fight, determin'd is the foe ;
 ' 'Tis Hector comes ; and when he seeks the prize,
 ' War knows no mean : he wins it, or he dies.'
 Then through the field he sends his voice aloud,
 And calls th' Ajaces from the warring crowd, 575
 With great Atrides. ' Hither turn,' (he said,)
 ' Turn where distress demands immediate aid ;
 ' The dead, encircled by his friends, forego,
 ' And save the living from a fiercer foe.
 ' Unhelp'd we stand, unequal to engage 580
 ' The force of Hector and Æneas' rage :
 ' Yet mighty as they are, my force to prove
 ' Is only mine ; th' event belongs to Jove.'
 He spoke, and high the sounding javelin flung,
 Which pass'd the shield of Aretus the young ; 585
 It pierced his belt, emboss'd with curious art ;
 Then in the lower belly stuck the dart.
 As when a ponderous axe, descending full,
 Cleaves the broad forehead of some brawny bull ;
 Struck 'twixt the horns, he springs with many a bound, 590
 Then tumbling rolls enormous on the ground :
 Thus fell the youth ; the air his soul receiv'd,
 And the spear trembled as his entrails heav'd.

Now at Automedon the Trojan foe
 Discharged his lance ; the meditated blow, 595 '
 Stooping, he shunn'd ; the javelin idly fled,
 And hiss'd innoxious o'er the hero's head :
 Deep rooted in the ground, the forceful spear
 In long vibrations spent its fury there.
 With clashing faulchions now the chiefs had clos'd, 600
 But each brave Ajax heard, and interpos'd ;
 Nor longer Hector with his Trojans stood,
 But left their slain companion in his blood :
 His arms Automedon divests, and cries,
 ' Accept, Patroclus, this mean sacrifice. 605
 ' Thus have I sooth'd my griefs, and thus have paid,
 ' Poor as it is, some offering to thy shade.'
 So looks the lion o'er a mangled boar,
 All grim with rage, and horrible with gore :
 High on the chariot at one bound he sprung, 610
 And o'er his seat the bloody trophies hung.
 And now Minerva, from the realms of air,
 Descends impetuous, and renews the war ;
 For, pleas'd at length the Grecian arms to aid,
 The lord of thunders sent the blue-eyed maid. 615
 As when high Jove, denouncing future woe,
 O'er the dark clouds extends his purple bow ;
 (In sign of tempests from the troubled air,
 Or, from the rage of man, destructive war ;)
 The drooping cattle dread th' impending skies, 620
 And from his half-till'd field the labourer flies.
 In such a form the goddess round her drew
 A livid cloud, and to the battle flew.
 Assuming Phoenix' shape, on earth she falls,
 And in his well-known voice to Sparta calls : 625
 ' And lies Achilles' friend, belov'd by all,
 ' A prey to dogs beneath the Trojan wall ?
 ' What shame to Greece for future times to tell,
 ' To thee the greatest, in whose cause he fell !'
 ' O chief, oh father !' (Atreus' son replies) 630
 ' O full of days ! by long experience wise !
 ' What more desires my soul, than here, unmov'd,
 ' To guard the body of the man I lov'd ?
 ' Ah would Minerva send me strength to rear
 ' This wearied arm, and ward the storm of war ! 635
 ' But Hector, like the rage of fire, we dread,
 ' And Jove's own glories blaze around his head.'
 Pleas'd to be first of all the powers address'd
 She breathes new vigour in her hero's breast,

And fills with keen revenge, with fell despite, 640
 Desire of blood, and rage, and lust of fight.
 So burns the vengeful hornet, (soul all o'er,)
 Repuls'd in vain, and thirsty still of gore ;
 (Bold son of air and heat,) on angry wings
 Untam'd, untir'd, he turns, attacks, and stings : 645
 Fir'd with like ardour fierce Atrides flew,
 And sent his soul with every lance he threw.

There stood a Trojan, not unknown to fame,
 Eëtion's son, and Podes was his name ;
 With riches honour'd, and with courage bless'd, 650
 By Hector lov'd, his comrade, and his guest ;
 Through his broad belt the spear a passage found,
 And, ponderous as he falls, his arms resound.
 Sudden at Hector's side Apollo stood,
 Like Phænops, Asius' son, appear'd the god : 655
 (Asius the great, who held his wealthy reign
 In fair Abydos, by the rolling main.)

' Oh prince,' (he cried,) ' oh foremost once in fame !
 ' What Grecian now shall tremble at thy name ?
 ' Dost thou at length to Melelaüs yield ? 660
 ' A chief, once thought no terror of the field !
 ' Yet singly, now, the long-disputed prize
 ' He bears victorious, while our army flies.
 ' By the same arm illustrious Podes bled,
 ' The friend of Hector, unreveng'd, is dead !' 665
 This heard, o'er Hector spreads a cloud of woe,
 Rage lifts his lance, and drives him on the foe.

But now th' Eternal shook his sable shield,
 That shaded Ide, and all the subject field,
 Beneath its ample verge. A rolling cloud 670
 Involv'd the mount, the thunder roar'd aloud :
 Th' affrighted hills from their foundations nod,
 And blaze beneath the lightnings of the god :
 At one regard of his all-seeing eye,
 The vanquish'd triumph, and the victors fly. 675

Then trembled Greece : the flight Peneleus led ;
 For, as the brave Bæotian turn'd his head
 To face the foe, Polydamas drew near,
 And raz'd his shoulder with a shorten'd spear :
 By Hector wounded, Leitus quits the plain, 680
 Pierc'd through the wrist ; and, raging with the pain,
 Grasps his once formidable lance in vain.

As Hector followed, Idomen address'd
 The flaming javelin to his manly breast ;
 The brittle point before his corslet yields ; 685
 Ere long Troy with clamour fills the fields :

High on his chariot as the Cretan stood,
 The son of Priam whirl'd the missive wood :
 But, erring from its aim, th' impetuous spear
 Struck to the dust the squire and charioteer 690
 Of martial Merion : Coeranus his name,
 Who left fair Lyctus for the fields of fame.
 On foot bold Merion fought ; and now, laid low,
 Had graced the triumphs of his Trojan foe ;
 But the brave squire the ready coursers brought, 695
 And with his life his master's safety bought.
 Between his cheek and ear the weapon went,
 The teeth it shatter'd, and the tongue it rent.
 Prone from the seat he tumbles to the plain ;
 His dying hand forgets the falling rein : 700
 This Merion reaches, bending from the car,
 And urges to desert the hopeless war ;
 Idomeneus consents ; the lash applies ;
 And the swift chariot to the navy flies.
 Nor Ajax less the will of heaven descried, 705
 And conquest shifting to the Trojan side,
 Turn'd by the hand of Jove. Then thus begun,
 To Atreus' seed, the godlike Telamon :
 ' Alas ! who sees not Jove's almighty hand
 ' Transfers the glory to the Trojan band ! 710
 ' Whether the weak or strong discharge the dart,
 ' He guides each arrow to a Grecian heart :
 ' Not so our spears : incessant though they rain,
 ' He suffers every lance to fall in vain.
 ' Deserted of the god, yet let us try 715
 ' What human strength and prudence can supply ;
 ' If yet this honour'd corse, in triumph borne,
 ' May glad the fleets that hope not our return,
 ' Who tremble yet, scarce rescued from their fates,
 ' And still hear Hector thundering at their gates. 720
 ' Some hero too must be despatch'd to bear
 ' The mournful message to Pelides' ear ;
 ' For sure he knows not, distant on the shore,
 ' His friend, his lov'd Patroclus, is no more.
 ' But such a chief I spy not through the host : 725
 ' The men, the steeds, the armies, all are lost
 ' In general darkness : Lord of earth and air !
 ' Oh king ! oh father ! hear my humble prayer :
 ' Dispel this cloud, the light of heaven restore ;
 ' Give me to see, and Ajax asks no more : 730
 ' If Greece must perish, we thy will obey
 But let us perish in the face of day !'

With tears the hero spoke, and at his prayer
 The god relenting, clear'd the clouded air ;
 Forth burst the sun with all-enlightening ray ; 735
 The blaze of armour flash'd against the day.
 ' Now, now, Atrides ! cast around thy sight,
 ' If yet Antilochus survives the fight,
 ' Let him to great Achilles' ear convey
 ' The fatal news.' Atrides hastes away. 740
 So turns the lion from the nightly fold,
 Though high in courage, and with hunger bold,
 Long gall'd by herdsmen, and long vex'd by hounds,
 Stiff with fatigue, and fretted sore with wounds ;
 The darts fly round him from a hundred hands, 745
 And the red terrors of the blazing brands :
 Till late, reluctant, at the dawn of day
 Sour he departs, and quits th' untasted prey.
 So mov'd Atrides from his dangerous place,
 With weary limbs, but with unwilling pace ; 750
 The foe, he fear'd, might yet Patroclus gain,
 And much admonish'd, much adjur'd his train :
 ' Oh, guard these relics to your charge consign'd,
 ' And bear the merits of the dead in mind ;
 ' How skill'd he was in each obliging art ; 755
 ' The mildest manners, and the gentlest heart :
 ' He was, alas ! but fate decreed his end,
 ' In death a hero, as in life a friend !'
 So parts the chief, from rank to rank he flew,
 And round on all sides sent his piercing view. 760
 As the bold bird, endued with sharpest eye
 Of all that wing the mid ærial sky,
 The sacred eagle, from his walks above
 Looks down, and sees the distant thicket move ;
 Then stoops, and sousing on the quivering hare, 765
 Snatches his life amid the clouds of air :
 Not with less quickness his exerted sight
 Pass'd this and that way, through the ranks of fight,
 Till on the left the chief he sought, he found,
 Cheering his men, and spreading deaths around. 770
 To him the king : ' Belov'd of Jove ! draw near,
 ' For sadder tidings never touch'd thy ear.
 ' Thy eyes have witness'd what a fatal turn !
 How Iliön triumphs, and th' Achaians mourn.
 ' This is not all : Patroclus, on the shore 775
 ' Now pale and dead, shall succour Greece no more.
 ' Fly to the fleet, this instant fly, and tell
 ' The sad Achilles how his lov'd one fell :

'He too may haste the naked corse to gain ;
'The arms are Hector's, who despoil'd the slain.' 780

The youthful warrior heard with silent woe,
From his fair eyes the tears began to flow ;
Big with the mighty grief, he strove to say
What sorrow dictates, but no word found way.
To brave Laodocus his arms he flung. 785

Who, near him wheeling, drove his steeds along ;
Then ran, the mournful message to impart,
With tearful eyes, and with dejected heart.
Swift fled the youth : nor Menelaüs stands
(Though sore distress'd) to aid the Pylian bands ; 790
But bids bold Thrasymede those troops sustain ;
Himself returns to his Patroclus slain.

'Gone is Antilochus,' (the hero said,)
'But hope not, warriors, for Achilles' aid :
'Though fierce his rage, unbounded be his woe, 795
'Unarm'd he fights not with the Trojan foe.

'Tis in our hands alone our hopes remain,
'Tis our own vigour must the dead regain ;
'And save ourselves, while with impetuous hate
'Troy pours along, and this way rolls our fate.' 800

'Tis well,' (said Ajax ;) 'be it then thy care,
'With Merion's aid, the weighty corse to rear ;
'Myself and my bold brother will sustain
'The shock of Hector and his charging train : 805

'Nor fear we armies, fighting side by side ;
'What Troy can dare, we have already tried,
'Have tried it, and have stood.' The hero said :
High from the ground the warriors heave the dead.

A general clamour rises at the sight :
Loud shout the Trojans, and renew the fight ; 810

Not fiercer rush along the gloomy wood,
With rage insatiate, and with thirst of blood,
Voracious hounds, that many a length before
Their furious hunters, drive the wounded boar ;
But if the savage turns his glaring eye, 815

They howl aloof, and round the forest fly.
Thus on retreating Greece the Trojans pour,
Wave their thick faulchions, and their javelins shower :
But, Ajax turning, to their fears they yield,
All pale they tremble, and forsake the field. 820

While thus aloft the hero's corse they bear,
Behind them rages all the storm of war ;
Confusion, tumult, horror, o'er the throng,
Of men, steeds, chariots, urged the rout :

THE ILIAD.

Less fierce the winds with rising flames conspire, 825
To whelm some city under waves of fire ;
Now sink in gloomy clouds the proud abodes ;
Now crack the blazing temples of the gods ;
The rumbling torrent through the ruin rolls,
And sheets of smoke mount heavy to the poles. 830
The heroes sweat beneath their honour'd load :
As when two mules, along the rugged road,
From the steep mountain with exerted strength
Drag some vast beam, or mast's unwieldy length ;
Inly they groan, big drops of sweat distil, 835
Th' enormous timber lumbering down the hill :
So these : Behind, the bulk of Ajax stands,
And breaks the torrent of the rushing bands.
Thus when a river, swell'd with sudden rains,
Spreads his broad waters o'er the level plains, 840
Some interposing hill the stream divides,
And breaks its force, and turns the winding tides.
Still close they follow, close the rear engage ;
Æneas storms, and Hector foams with rage :
While Greece a heavy thick retreat maintains, 845
Wedged in one body, like a flight of cranes,
That shriek incessant while the falcon, hung
High on pois'd pinions, threatens their callow young.
So from the Trojan chiefs the Grecians fly,
Such the wild terror, and the mingled cry ; 850
Within, without the trench, and all the way,
Strew'd in bright heaps, their arms and armour lay ;
Such horror Jove impress'd ! yet still proceeds
The work of death, and still the battle bleeds.

BOOK XVIII.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE GRIEF OF ACHILLES, AND NEW ARMOUR MADE HIM BY VULCAN.

The news of the death of Patroclus is brought to Achilles by Antilochus. Thetis hearing his lamentations, comes with all her sea-nymphs to comfort him. The speeches of the mother and son on this occasion. Iris appears to Achilles by the command of Juno, and orders him to show himself at the head of the intrenchments. The sight of him turns the fortune of the day, and the body of Patroclus is carried off by the Greeks. The Trojans call a council, where Hector and Polydamas disagree in their opinions ; but the advice of the former prevails, to remain encamped in the field. The grief of Achilles over the body of Patroclus.

Thetis goes to the palace of Vulcan, to obtain new arms for her son. The description of the wonderful works of Vulcan ; and, lastly, that noble one of the shield of Achilles.

The latter part of the nine-and-twentieth day, and the night ensuing, take up this book. The scene is at Achilles's tent on the sea-shore, from whence it changes to the palace of Vulcan.

Thus like the rage of fire the combat burns,
And now it rises, now it sinks, by turns.
Meanwhile, where Hellespont's broad waters flow,
Stood Nestor's son, the messenger of woe,

There sat Achilles, shaded by his sails, 5
On hoisted yards extended to the gales ;
Pensive he sat ; for all that fate design'd
Rose in sad prospect to his boding mind.

Thus to his soul he said : ' Ah what constrains
' The Greeks, late victors, now to quit the plains ? 10
' Is this the day, which heaven so long ago
' Ordain'd, to sink me with the weight of woe,
' (So Thetis warn'd,) when, by a Trojan hand,
' The bravest of the Myrmidonian band
' Should lose the light ? Fulfill'd is that decree ? 15
' Fall'n is the warrior, and Patroclus he ?
' In vain I charged him soon to quit the plain,
' And warn'd to shun Hectorean force in vain !

Thus while he thinks, Antilochus appears,
And tells the melancholy tale with tears : 20
Sad tidings, son of Peleus ! thou must hear ;
' And wretched I, th' unwilling messenger !
' Dead is Patroclus ! for his corse they fight ;
' His naked corse : his arms are Hector's right.'

A sudden horror shot through all the chief, 25
And wrapt his senses in the cloud of grief ;
Cast on the ground, with furious hand he spread
The scorching ashes o'er his graceful head ;
His purple garments, and his golden hairs, .
Those he deforms with dust, and these he tears : 30
On the hard soil his groaning breast he threw,
And roll'd and grovell'd, as to earth he grew.
The virgin captives, with disorder'd charms,
(Won by his own, or by Patroclus' arms.)

Rush'd from the tents with cries ; and, gathering round, 35
Beat their white breasts, and fainted on the ground :
While Nestor's son sustains a manlier part,
And mourns the warrior with a warrior's heart ;

Hangs on his arms, amidst his frantic woe,
And oft prevents the meditated blow. 40

Far in the deep abysses of the main,
With hoary Nercus, and the watery train,
The mother-goddess from her crystal throne
Heard his loud cries, and answered groan for groan.
The circling Nercids with their mistress weep, 45

And all the sea-green sisters of the deep.
Thalia, Glaucē, (every watery name,)
Nesæa mild, and silver Spio came :
Cymothoë and Cymodoco were nigh, 50
And the blue languish of soft Alia's eye
Their locks Actæa and Limnoria rear,
Then Proto, Doris, Panope appear,
Thoa, Pherusa, Doto, Melita ;

Agave gentle, and Amphithoë gay ;
Next Callianira, Callianassa shew 55
Their sister looks ; Dexamene the slow,
And swift Dynamene, now cut the tides :
Iæra now the verdant wave divides :
Nemertes with Apseudes lifts the head,
Bright Galatea quits her pearly bed ;
These Orythia, Clymene, attend,

Mæra, Amphinome, the train extend,
And black Janira, and Janasea fair,
And Amatheia with her amber hair.
All these, and all that deep in ocean held 65
Their sacred seats, the glimmering grotto fill'd ;
Each beat her ivory breast with silent woe,
Till Thetis' sorrows thus began to flow :
'Hear me, and judge, ye sisters of the main !
'How just a cause has Thetis to complain ! 70
'How wretched, were I mortal, were my fate !
'How more than wretched in th' immortal state !
'Sprung from my bed a godlike hero came,
'The bravest far that ever bore the name ;
'Like some fair olive, by my careful hand 75
'He grew, he flourish'd, and adorn'd the land.
'To Troy I sent him ; but the fates ordain
'He never, never must return again.
'So short a space the light of heaven to view,
'So short, alas ! and fill'd with anguish too. 80
'Hear how his sorrows echo through the shore !
'I cannot ease them, but I must deplore ;
'I go at least to bear a tender part,
'And mourn my lov'd one with a mother's heart.'

- She said, and left the caverns of the main. 85
 All bathed in tears, the melancholy train
 Attend her way. Wide-opening part the tides,
 While the long pomp the silver wave divides,
 Approaching now, they touch'd the Trojan land;
 Then, two by two, ascended up the strand. 90
 Th' immortal mother, standing close beside
 Her mournful offspring, to his sighs replied;
 Along the coast their mingled clamours ran,
 And thus the silver-footed dame began:
 'Why mourns my son? thy late-preferr'd request 95
 'The god has granted, and the Greeks distress'd:
 'Why mourns my son? thy anguish let me share,
 'Reveal the cause, and trust a parent's care.'
 He, deeply groaning, 'To this cureless grief
 'Not e'en the Thunderer's favour brings relief. 100
 'Patroclus—Ah! say, goddess, can I boast
 'A pleasure now? Revenge itself is lost;
 'Patroclus, lov'd of all my martial train,
 'Beyond mankind, beyond myself, is slain!
 'Lost are those arms the gods themselves bestow'd 105
 'On Peleus; Hector bears the glorious load.
 'Curs'd be that day, when all the powers above
 'Thy charms submitted to a mortal love:
 'Oh hadst thou still, a sister of the main,
 'Pursued the pleasures of the watery reign; 110
 'And happier Peleus, less ambitious, led
 'A mortal beauty to his equal bed!
 'Ere the sad fruit of thy unhappy womb
 'Had caused such sorrows past, and woes to come.
 'For soon, alas! that wretched offspring slain, 115
 'New woes, now sorrows, shall create again.
 'Tis not in fate th' alternate now to give;
 'Patroclus dead, Achilles hates to live.
 'Let me revenge it on proud Hector's heart,
 'Let his last spirit smoke upon my dart; 120
 'On these conditions will I breathe: till then,
 'I blush to walk among the race of men.'
 A flood of tears, at this, the goddess shed:
 'Ah then, I see thee dying, see thee dead!
 'When Hector falls, thou diest.'—'Let Hector die, 125
 'And let me fall!' (Achilles made reply.)
 'Far lies Patroclus from his native plain;
 'He fell, and, falling, wish'd my aid in vain.
 'Ah then, since from this miserable day
 'I cast all hope of my return away;

' Since, unrevenged, a hundred ghosts demand
 ' The fate of Hector from Achilles' hand ;
 ' Since here, for brutal courage far renown'd,
 ' I live an idle burden to the ground ;
 ' (Others in council fam'd for nobler skill, 135
 ' More useful to preserve than I to kill ;)
 ' Let me—But oh ! ye gracious powers above !
 ' Wrath and revenge from men and gods remove :
 ' Far, far too dear to every mortal breast,
 ' Sweet to the soul, as honey to the taste ; 140
 ' Gathering like vapours of a noxious kind
 ' From fiery blood, and darkening all the mind.
 ' Me Agamemnon urg'd to deadly hate ;
 ' 'Tis past—I quell it ; I resign to fate.
 ' Yes—I will meet the murderer of my friend, 145
 ' Or (if the gods ordain it) meet my end.
 ' The stroke of fate the bravest cannot shun :
 ' The great Alcides, Jove's unequall'd son,
 ' To Juno's hate at length resign'd his breath,
 ' And sunk the victim of all-conquering death. 150
 ' So shall Achilles fall ! stretch'd pale and dead,
 ' No more the Grecian hope, or Trojan dread !
 ' Let me, this instant, rush into the fields,
 ' And reap what glory life's short harvest yields.
 ' Shall I not force some widow'd dame to tear, 155
 ' With frantic hands, her long dishevell'd hair ?
 ' Shall I not force her breast to heave with sighs,
 ' And the soft tears to trickle from her eyes ?
 ' Yes, I shall give the fair those mournful charms—
 ' In vain you hold me—Hence ! my arms, my arms ! 160
 ' Soon shall the sanguine torrent spread so wide,
 ' That all shall know Achilles swells the tide.'
 ' My son,' (cœrulean Thetis made reply,
 To fate submitting with a secret sigh,)
 ' The host to succour and thy friends to save, 165
 ' Is worthy thee ; the duty of the brave.
 ' But canst thou, naked, issue to the plains ?
 ' Thy radiant arms the Trojan foe detains.
 ' Insulting Hector bears the spoils on high,
 ' But vainly glories, for his fate is nigh. 170
 ' Yet, yet, awhile, thy generous ardour stay,
 ' Assured I meet thee at the dawn of day,
 ' Charged with refulgent arms, (a glorious load,)
 ' Vulcanian arms, the labour of a god.'
 Then turning to the daughters of the main,
 The goddess thus dismiss'd her azure train : 175

' Ye sister Nereids ! to your deeps descend ;
 ' Haste, and our father's sacred seat attend ;
 ' I go to find the architect divine,
 ' Where vast Olympus' starry summits shine : 180
 ' So tell our hoary sire.' This charge she gave :
 The sea-green sisters plunge beneath the wave :
 Thetis once more ascends the blest abodes,
 And treads the brazen threshold of the gods.
 And now the Greeks, from furious Hector's force, 185
 Urge to broad Hellespont their headlong course :
 Nor yet their chiefs Patroclus' body bore
 Safe through the tempest, to the tented shore.
 The horse, the foot, with equal fury join'd,
 Pour'd on the rear, and thunder'd close behind ; 190
 As if like a flame through fields of ripen'd corn,
 The rage of Hector o'er the ranks was borne.
 Thrice the slain hero by the foot he drew :
 Thrice to the skies the Trojan clamours flow
 As oft th' Ajaces his assault sustain ; 195
 But check'd, he turns ; repuls'd, attacks again.
 With fiercer shouts his lingering troops he fires,
 Nor yields a step, nor from his post retires :
 So watchful shepherds strive to force, in vain,
 The hungry lion from a carcass slain. 200
 Even yet, Patroclus had he borne away,
 And all the glories of th' extended day ;
 Had not high Juno, from the realms of air,
 Secret despatch'd her trusty messenger,
 The various goddess of the showery bow, 205
 ' Shot in a whirlwind to the shore below ;
 To great Achilles at his ships she came,
 And thus began the many-coloured dame :
 ' Rise, son of Peleus ! rise, divinely brave !
 ' Assist the combat, and Patroclus save : 210
 ' For him the slaughter to the fleet they spread,
 ' And lay with mutual wounds around the dead.
 ' To drag him back to Troy the foe contends ;
 ' Nor with his death the rage of Hector ends ;
 ' A prey to dogs he dooms the corse to lie, 215
 ' And marks the place to fix his head on high.
 ' Rise, and prevent (if yet you think of fame)
 ' Thy friend's disgrace ; thy own eternal shame !'
 ' Who sends thee, goddess ! from th' ethereal skies ?'
 Achilles thus : and Iris thus replies : 220
 ' I come, Pelides, from the queen of Jove,
 ' Th' immortal empress of the realms above ;

' Unknown to him who sits remote on high,
 ' Unknown to all the synod of the sky.'
 ' Thou com'st in vain,' he cries, (with fury warm'd,) 225
 ' Arms I have none, and can I fight unarm'd?
 ' Unwilling as I am, of force I stay,
 ' Till Thetis bring me at the dawn of day
 ' Vulcanian arms: what other can I wield,
 ' Except the mighty Telamonian shield? 230
 ' That, in my friend's defence, has Ajax spread,
 ' While his strong lance around him heaps the dead:
 ' The gallant chief defends Menœtius' son,
 ' And does what his Achilles should have done.'
 ' Thy want of arms' (said Iris) 'well we know;
 ' But, though unarm'd, yet, clad in terrors, go! 235
 ' Let but Achilles o'er yon trench appear,
 ' Proud Troy shall tremble, and consent to fear;
 ' Greece from one glance of that tremendous eye
 ' Shall take new courage, and disdain to fly.' 240
 She spoke, and past in air. The hero rose:
 Her ægis Pallas o'er his shoulder throws:
 Around his brows a golden clou'd she spread;
 A stream of glory flam'd above his head.
 As when from some beleaguer'd town arise 245
 The smokes, high curling to the shaded skies;
 (Seen from some island, o'er the main afar,
 When men distress'd hang out the sign of war:)
 Soon as the sun in-ocean hides his rays,
 Thick on the hills the flaming beacons blaze; 250
 With long-projected beams the seas are bright,
 And heaven's high arch reflects the ruddy light:
 So from Achilles' head the splendours rise,
 Reflecting blaze on blaze, against the skies.
 Forth march'd the chief, and, distant from the crowd, 255
 High on the rampart rais'd his voice aloud;
 With her own shout Minerva swells the sound;
 Troy starts astonish'd, and the shores rebound.
 As the loud trumpet's brazen mouth from far
 With shrilling clangour sounds th' alarm of war, 260
 Struck from the walls, the echoes float on high,
 And the round bulwarks and thick towers reply;
 So high his brazen voice the hero rear'd:
 Hosts drop their arms, and trembled as they heard;
 And back the chariots roll, and coursers bound, 265
 And steeds and men lie mingled on the ground.
 Aghast they see the living-lightnings play,
 And turn their eye-balls from the flashing ray.

Thrice from the trench his dreadful voice he rais'd :
 And thrice they fled, confounded and amaz'd. 270
 Twelve in the tumult wedged, untimely rush'd
 On their own spears, by their own chariots crush'd ;
 While, shielded from the darts, the Greeks obtain
 The long-contented carcass of the slain.
 A lofty bier the breathless warrior bears : 275
 Around, his sad companions melt in tears.
 But chief Achilles, bending down his head,
 Pours unavailing sorrows o'er the dead,
 Whom late, triumphant with his steeds and car,
 He sent refulgent to the field of war : 280
 (Unhappy change ! ) now senseless, pale, he found,
 Stretch'd forth, and gash'd with many a gaping wound.
 Meantime, unwearied with his heavenly way,
 In ocean's waves th' unwilling light of day
 Quench'd his red orb, at Juno's high command,<sup>1</sup> 285
 And from their labours eas'd th' Achaian band.
 The frightened Trojans (panting from the war,
 Their steeds unharnes'd from the weary car)
 A sudden council call'd : each chief appear'd
 In haste, and standing ; for to sit they fear'd. 290
 'Twas now no season for prolong'd debate ;
 They saw Achilles, and in him their fate.
 Silent they stood : Polydamas at last,
 Skill'd to discern the future by the past,
 The son of Panthus, thus express'd his fears : 295
 (The friend of Hector, and of equal years :
 The self-same night to both a being gave,
 One wise in council, one in action brave :)
 ' In free debate, my friends, your sentence speak :
 ' For me, I move, before the morning break, 300
 ' To raise our camp : too dangerous here our post,
 Far from Troy walls, and on a naked coast.
 I deem'd not Greece so dreadful, while engaged
 In mutual feuds her king and hero raged ;
 Then, while we hop'd our armies might prevail, 305
 We boldly camp'd beside a thousand sail.
 ' I dread Pelides now : his rage of mind
 ' Not long continues to the shores confin'd,

<sup>1</sup> The sun is said to set with reluctance, because his setting-time was not yet come. Jupiter had promised Hector that he should prevail till the sun should go down, and sacred darkness cover all ; Juno therefore, impatient to arrest the victor's progress, and having no other means of doing it, shortens the time allotted him. Cowper.

'Nor to the fields, where long in equal fray
 'Contending nations won and lost the day ; 310
 'For Troy, for Troy, shall henceforth be the strife,
 'And the hard contest, not for fame, but life.
 'Haste then to Ilion, while the favouring night .
 'Detains those terrors, keeps that arm from fight ;
 'If but the morrow's sun behold us here, 315
 'That arm, those terrors, we shall feel, not fear ;
 'And hearts that now disdain, shall leap with joy,
 'If heaven permits them then to enter Troy.
 'Let not my fatal prophecy be true,
 'Nor what I tremble but to think, ensue. 320
 'Whatever be our fate, yet let us try
 'What force of thought and reason can supply ;
 'Let us on counsel for our guard depend ;
 'The town, her gates and bulwarks shall defend.
 'When morning dawns, our well-appointed powers 325
 'Array'd in arms, shall line the lofty towers.
 'Let the fierce hero then, when fury calls,
 'Vent his mad vengeance on our rocky walls,
 'Or fetch a thousand circles round the plain,
 'Till his spent coursers seek the fleet again : 330
 'So may his rage be tir'd, and labour'd down ;
 'And dogs shall tear him ere he sack the town.'
 'Return ?' (said Hector, fir'd with stern disdain,)
 'What ! coop whole armies in our walls again ?
 'Was't not enough, ye valiant warriors say, 335
 'Nine years imprison'd in those towers ye lay ?
 'Wide o'er the world was Ilion fam'd of old
 'For brass exhaustless, and for mines of gold ;
 'But while inglorious in her walls we stay'd,
 'Sunk were her treasures, and her stores decay'd ; 340
 'The Phrygians now her scatter'd spoils enjoy,
 'And proud Mæonia wastes the fruits of Troy.
 'Great Jove at length my arms to conquest calls,
 'And shuts the Grecians in their wooden walls :
 'Dar'st thou dispirit whom the gods incite ? 345
 'Flies any Trojan ? I shall stop his flight.
 'To better counsel then attention lend ;
 'Take due refreshment, and the watch attend.
 'If there be one whose riches cost him care,
 'Forth let him bring them for the troops to share ; 350
 'Tis better generously bestow'd on those,
 'Than left the plunder of our country's foes.
 'Soon as the morn the purple orient warms,
 'Fierce on yon navy will we pour our arms.

' If great Achilles rise in all his might, 355
 ' His be the danger : I shall stand the fight.
 ' Honour, ye gods ! or let me gain, or give ;
 ' And live he glorious, whosoe'er shall live !
 ' Mars is our common lord, alike to all :
 ' And oft the victor triumphs, but to fall.' 360

The shouting host in loud applauses join'd :
 So Pallas robb'd the many of their mind ;
 To their own sense condemn'd, and left to choose
 The worst advice, the better to refuse.

• While the long night extends her sable reign, 365
 Around Patroclus mourn'd the Grecian train.

Stern in superior grief Pelides stood ;
 Those slaughtering arms, so used to bathe in blood,
 Now clasp his clay-cold limbs : then, gushing, start
 The tears, and sighs burst from his swelling heart. 370

The lion thus, with dreadful anguish stung,
 Roars through the desert, and demands his young ;
 When the grim savage, to his rifled den
 Too late returning, snuffs the track of men,

And o'er the vales and o'er the forest bounds ; 375
 His clamorous grief the bellowing wood resounds.

So grieves Achilles ; and impetuous vents
 To all his Myrmidons, his loud laments :

' In what vain promise, gods ! did I engage, 380
 ' When, to console Menœtius' feeble age,

' I vow'd his much-lov'd offspring to restore,
 ' Charged with rich spoils, to fair Opuntia's shore ?

' But mighty Jove cuts short, with just disdain,
 ' The long, long views of poor designing man !

' One fate the warrior and the friend shall strike, 385
 ' And Troy's black sands must drink our blood alike :

' Me, too, a wretched mother shall deplore,
 ' An aged father never see me more !

' Yet, my Patroclus ! yet a space I stay, 390
 ' Then swift pursue thee on the darksome way.

' Ere thy dear relics in the grave are laid,
 ' Shall Hector's head be offer'd to thy shade ;

' That, with his arms, shall hang before thy shrine ;
 ' And twelve, the noblest of the Trojan line,

' Sacred to vengeance, by this hand expire, 395
 ' Their lives effus'd around thy flaming pyre.

• Thus let me lie till then ! thus, closely press'd,
 ' Bathe thy cold face, and sob upon thy breast !

' While Trojan captives here thy mourners stay,
 ' Weep all the night, and murmur all the day, 400

' Spoils of my arms, and thine ; when, wasting wide,
' Our swords kept time, and conquer'd side by side.'

He spoke, and bid the sad attendants round
Cleanse the pale corse, and wash each honour'd wound.

A massy cauldron of stupendous frame 405

They brought, and placed it o'er the rising flame ;

Then heap the lighted wood ; the flame divides

Beneath the vase, and climbs around the sides.

In its wide womb they pour the rushing stream ;

The boiling water bubbles to the brim. 410

The body then they bathe with pious toil,

Embalm the wounds, anoint the limbs with oil ;

High on a bed of state 'extended laid,

And decent cover'd with a linen shade ;

Last o'er the dead the milk-white veil they threw ; 415

That done, their sorrows and their sighs renew.

Meanwhile to Juno, in the realms above,

(His wife and sister) spoke almighty Jove :

' At last thy will prevails : great Pelcus' son

' Rises in arms : such grace thy Greeks have won. 420

' Say, (for I know not), is their race divine,

' And thou the mother of that martial line ?'

' What words are these ?' (th' imperial dame replies,

While anger flash'd from her majestic eyes ;)

' Succour like this a mortal arm might lend, 425

' And such success mere human wit attend :

' And shall not I, the second power above,

' Heaven's queen, and consort of the thundering Jove,

' Say, shall not I one nation's fate command,

' Not wreak my vengeance on one guilty land ?' 430

So they. Meanwhile the silver-footed dame

Reach'd the Vulcanian dome, eternal frame !

High-eminent amid the works divine,

Where heaven's far-beaming brazen mansions shine.

There the lame architect the goddess found, 435

Obscure in smoke, his forges flaming round,

While bathed in sweat from fire to fire he flew,

And, puffing loud, the roaring bellows blew.

That day no common task his labour claim'd :

Full twenty tripods for his hall he fram'd, 440

That, placed on living wheels of massy gold,

(Wondrous to tell !) instinct with spirit roll'd

From place to place, around the blest abodes,

Self-mov'd, obedient to the beck of gods :

For their fair handles now, o'erwrought with flowers, 445

In moulds prepar'd, the glowing ore he pours.

Just, as responsive to his thought, the frame
 Stood prompt to move, the azure goddess came :
 Charis, his spouse, a grace divinely fair,
 (With purple fillets round her braided hair.) 450
 Observed her entering ; her soft hand she press'd,
 And, smiling, thus the watery queen address'd :
 ' What, goddess ! this unusual favour draws ?
 ' All hail, and welcome ! whatsoe'er the cause :
 ' Till now a stranger, in a happy hour 455
 ' Approach, and taste the dainties of the bower.'
 High on a throne, with stars of silver graced,
 And various artifice, the queen she placed ;
 A footstool at her feet : then, calling, said,
 ' Vulcan, draw near, 'tis Thetis asks your aid.' 460
 ' Thetis,' (replied the god,) ' our powers may claim
 ' An ever-dear, an ever-honour'd name !
 ' When my proud mother hurl'd me from the sky,
 ' (My awkward form, it seems, displeas'd her eye,)
 ' She, and Eurynome, my griefs redress'd, 465
 ' And soft receiv'd me on their silver breast.
 ' E'en then, these arts employ'd my infant thought ;
 ' Chains, bracelets, pendants, all their toys I wrought.
 ' Nine years kept secret in the dark abode,
 ' Secure I lay, conceal'd from man and god : 470
 ' Deep in a cavern'd rock my days were led ;
 ' The rushing ocean murmur'd o'er my head.
 ' Now since her presence glads our mansion, say,
 ' For such desert what service can I pay ?
 ' Vouchsafe, O Thetis ! at our board to share
 ' The genial rites, and hospitable fare ;
 ' While I the labours of the forge forego,
 ' And bid the roaring bellows cease to blow.'
 Then from his anvil the lame artist rose ;
 Wide with distorted legs oblique he goes, 480
 And stills the bellows, and (in order laid)
 Locks in their chests his instruments of trade :
 Then with a sponge the sooty workman dress'd
 His brawny arms imbrown'd, and hairy breast.
 With his huge sceptre grac'd, and red attire, 485
 Came halting forth the sovereign of the fire :
 The monarch's steps two female forms uphold,
 That mov'd, and breath'd, in animated gold ;
 To whom was voice, and sense, and science given
 Of works divine : (such wonders are in heaven !) 490
 On these supported, with unequal gait,
 He reach'd the throne where pensive Thetis sat ;

There placed beside her on the shining frame,
He thus address'd the silver-footed dame :

'Thee, welcome goddess ! what occasion calls
(So long a stranger) to these honour'd walls ?
'Tis thine, fair Thetis, the command to lay,
'And Vulcan's joy and duty to obey.'

To whom the mournful mother thus replies :
(The crystal drops stood trembling in her eyes ;)

'Oh Vulcan ! say, was ever breast divine
'So pierc'd with sorrows, so o'erwhelm'd as mine ?
'Of all the goddesses, did Jove prepare
'For Thetis only such a weight of care ?
'I, only I, of all the watery race,

'By force subjected to a man's embrace,
'Who, sinking now with age and sorrow, pays
'The mighty fine impos'd on length of days.
'Sprung from my bed, a godlike hero came,
'The bravest sure that ever bore the name ;

'Like some fair plant, beneath my careful hand.
'He grew, he flourish'd, and he grac'd the land :
'To Troy I sent him ; but his native shore
'Never, ah never, shall receive him more !
'E'en while he lives, he wastes with secret woe,

'Nor I, a goddess, can retard the blow !
'Robb'd of the prize the Grecian suffrage gave,
'The king of nations forc'd his royal slave :
'For this he griev'd ; and, till the Greeks oppress'd
'Requir'd his arm, he sorrow'd unredress'd.

'Large gifts they promise, and their elders send ;
'In vain—he arms not, but permits his friend
'His arms, his steeds, his forces, to employ ;
'He marches, combats, almost conquers Troy :
'Then slain by Phœbus, (Hector had the name,)

'At once resigns his armour, life, and fame.
'But thou, in pity, by my prayer be won ;
'Grace with immortal arms this short-liv'd son,
'And to the field in martial pomp restore,
'To shine with glory, till he shines no more !'

To her the artist-god : 'Thy griefs resign,
'Secure, what Vulcan can, is ever thine.
'O could I hide him from the fates as well,
'Or with these hands the cruel stroke repel,
'As I shall forge most envied arms, the gaze
'Of wondering ages, and the world's amaze !'

Thus having said, the father of the fires
To the black labours of his forge retires.

Soon as he bade them blow, the bellows turn'd
 Their iron mouths, and, where the furnace burn'd, 540
 Resounding breathed : at once the blast expires,
 And twenty forges catch at once the fires ;
 Just as the god directs, now loud, now low,
 They raise a tempest, or they gently blow.
 In hissing flames huge silver bars are roll'd, 545
 And stubborn brass, and tin, and solid gold :
 Before, deep fix'd, th' eternal anvils stand ;
 The ponderous hammer loads his better hand,
 His left with tongs turns the vex'd metal round ;
 And thick strong strokes the doubling vaults rebound. 550
 Then first he form'd th' immense and solid shield ;
 Rich various artifice emblaz'd the field ;
 Its utmost verge a threefold circle bound ;
 A silver chain<sup>2</sup> suspends the massy round :
 Five ample plates the broad expanse compose, 555
 And godlike labours on the surface rose.
 There shone th' image of the master-mind :
 There earth, there heaven, there ocean, he design'd ;
 Th' unwearied sun, the moon completely round ;
 The starry lights that heaven's high convex crown'd ; 560
 The Pleiads, Hyads, with the northern team ;
 And great Orion's more refulgent beam ;
 To which, around the axle of the sky,
 The Bear revolving points his golden eye ;
 Still shines exalted on th' ethereal plain, 565
 Nor bathes his blazing forehead in the main.
 Two cities radiant on the shield appear,
 The image one of peace, and one of war.
 Here sacred pomp and genial feast delight,
 And solemn dance, and Hymeneal rite ; 570
 Along the street the new-made brides are led,
 With torches flaming, to the nuptial bed ;
 The youthful dancers in a circle bound
 To the soft flute, and cittern's silver sound :
 Through the fair streets, the matrons in a row 575
 Stand in their porches, and enjoy the show.
 There, in the Forum swarm a numerous train ;
 The subject of debate, a townsman slain :
 One pleads the fine discharg'd, which one denied,
 And bade the public and the laws decide : 580

<sup>2</sup> "Chain" is not the proper word for the original. Cowper's version is better :

And loop'd it with a silver brace behind.

The witness is produced on either hand ;
 For this, or that, the partial people stand :
 Th' appointed heralds still the noisy bands,
 And form a ring, with sceptres in their hands ;
 On seats of stone, within the sacred place, 585
 The reverend elders nodded o'er the case ;
 Alternate, each th' attending sceptre took,
 And, rising solemn, each his sentence spoke.
 Two golden talents lay amidst, in sight,
 The prize of him who best adjudged the right. 590
 Another part (a prospect differing far)
 Glow'd with refulgent arms, and horrid war.
 Two mighty hosts a leaguer'd town embrace,
 And one would pillage, one would burn, the place.
 Meantime the townsmen, arm'd with silent care, 595
 A secret ambush on the foe prepare :
 Their wives, their children, and the watchful band
 Of trembling parents, on the turrets stand.
 They march, by Pallas and by Mars made bold,
 Gold were the gods, their radiant garments gold, 600
 And gold their armour ; these the squadron led,
 August, divine, superior by the head !
 A place for ambush fit they found, and stood
 Cover'd with shields, beside a silver flood.
 Two spies at distance lurk, and watchful seem 605
 If sheep or oxen seek the winding stream.
 Soon the white flocks proceeded o'er the plains,
 And steers slow-moving, and two shepherd swains ;
 Behind them, piping on their reeds, they go,
 Nor fear an ambush, nor suspect a foe. 610
 In arms the glittering squadron rising round,
 Rush sudden ; hills of slaughter heap the ground :
 Whole flocks and herds lie bleeding on the plains,
 And, all amidst them, dead, the shepherd swains !
 The bellowing oxen the besiegers hear ; 615
 They rise, take horse, approach, and meet the war ;
 They fight, they fall, beside the silver flood ;
 The waving silver seem'd to blush with blood.
 There tumult, there contention, stood confess'd ;
 One rear'd a dagger at a captive's breast, 620
 One held a living foe, that freshly bled
 With new-made wounds ; another dragg'd a dead ;
 Now here, now there, the carcasses they tore :
 Fate stalk'd amidst them, grim with human gore.
 And the whole war came off, and met the eye ; 625
 And each bold figure seem'd to live, or die.

A field deep furrow'd next the god design'd,
 The third time labour'd by the sweating hind;
 The shining shares full many ploughmen guide,
 And turn their crooked yokes on every side. 630
 Still as at either end they wheel around,
 The master meets them with his goblet crown'd;
 The hearty draught rewards, renews their toil;
 Then back the turning ploughshares cleave the soil:
 Behind, the rising earth in ridges roll'd, 635
 And sable look'd, though form'd of molten gold.
 — Another field rose high with waving grain;
 With bended sickles stand the reaper-train.
 Here stretch'd in ranks the levell'd swaths are found,
 Sheaves, heap'd on sheaves, here thicken up the ground. 640
 With sweeping stroke the mowers strew the lands;
 The gatherers follow, and collect in bands;
 And last the children, in whose arms are borne
 (Too short to gripe them) the brown sheaves of corn.
 The rustic monarch of the field describes, 645
 With silent glee, the heaps around him rise.
 A ready banquet on the turf is laid,
 Beneath an ample oak's expanded shade.
 The victim ox the sturdy youth prepare;
 The reaper's due repast, the women's care. 650
 Next ripe, in yellow gold, a vineyard shines,
 Bent with the ponderous harvest of its vines;
 A deeper dye the dangling clusters shew,
 And, curl'd on silver props, in order glow:
 A darker metal mix'd, intrench'd the place; 655
 And pales of glittering tin th' enclosure grace.
 To this, one pathway gently winding leads,
 Where march a train with baskets on their heads,
 (Fair maids and blooming youths,) that smiling bear
 The purple product of th' autumnal year. 660
 To these a youth awakes the warbling strings,
 Whose tender lay the fate of Linus<sup>3</sup> sings;
 In measured dance behind him move the train,
 Tune soft the voice, and answer to the strain.
 Here, herds of oxen march, erect and bold, 665
 Rear high their horns, and seem to low in gold,

<sup>3</sup> Linus, called the father of Greek poetry, is said to have been the son of Apollo, and to have died a violent death; in consequence of which, it was customary among many of the Greeks, and especially among the Argives and Boeotians, to bewail his death annually, in order to propitiate Apollo.

And speed to meadows, on whose sounding shores
 A rapid torrent through the rushes roars :
 Four golden herdsmen as their guardians stand,
 And nine sour dogs complete the rustic band. 670
 Two lions rushing from the wood appear'd ;
 And seized a bull, the master of the herd ;
 He roar'd : in vain the dogs, the men, withstood ;
 They tore his flesh, and drank the sable blood.
 *The dogs (oft cheer'd in vain) desert the prey, 675
 Dread the grim terrors, and at distance bay.
 Next this, the eye the art of Vulcan leads
 Deep through fair forests, and a length of meads ;
 And stalls, and folds, and scatter'd cots between ;
 And fleecy flocks, that whiten all the scene. 680
 A figured dance succeeds : such once was seen
 In lofty Gnossus, for the Cretan queen,<sup>4</sup>
 Form'd by Dædalean art : A comely band
 Of youths and maidens, bounding hand in hand ;
 The maids in soft cymars of linen dress'd ; 685
 The youths all graceful in the glossy vest ;
 Of those the locks with flowery wreaths inroll'd,
 Of these the sides adorn'd with swords of gold,
 That, glittering gay, from silver belts depend.
 Now all at once they rise, at once descend, 690
 With well-taught feet : now shape, in oblique ways,
 Confus'dly regular, the moving maze :
 Now forth at once, too swift for sight, they spring,
 And undistinguish'd blend the flying ring :
 So whirls a wheel, in giddy circle toss'd, 695
 And, rapid as it runs, the single spokes are lost.
 The gazing multitudes admire around ;
 Two active tumblers in the centre bound ;
 Now high, now low, their pliant limbs they bend,
 And general songs the sprightly revel end. 700
 Thus the broad shield complete the artist crown'd
 With his last hand, and pour'd the ocean round :
 In living silver seem'd the waves to roll,
 And beat the buckler's verge, and bound the whole.
 This done, whate'er a warrior's use requires 705
 He forged ; the cuirass that outshines the fires,
 The greaves of ductile tin, the helm impress'd
 With various sculpture, and the golden crest.
 At Thetis' feet the finish'd labour lay ;
 She, as a falcon, cuts th' aerial way, 710
 Swift from Olympus' snowy summit flies,
 And bears the blazing present through the skies.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE RECONCILIATION OF ACHILLES AND AGAMEMNON.

Thetis brings to her son the armour made by Vulcan. She preserves the body of his friend from corruption, and commands him to assemble the army, to declare his resentment at an end. Agamemnon and Achilles are solemnly reconciled : the speeches, presents, and ceremonies on that occasion. Achilles is with great difficulty persuaded to refrain from the battle till the troops have refreshed themselves, by the advice of Ulysses. The presents are conveyed to the tent of Achilles : where Briseis laments over the body of Patroclus. The hero obstinately refuses all repast, and gives himself up to lamentations for his friend. Minerva descends to strengthen him, by the order of Jupiter. He arms for the fight ; his appearance described. He addresses himself to his horses, and reproaches them with the death of Patroclus. One of them is miraculously endued with voice, and inspired to prophesy his fate ; but the hero, not astonished by that prodigy, rushes with fury to the combat.

The thirtieth day. The scene is on the sea-shore.

Soon as Aurora heaved her orient head
 Above the waves that blushed with early red,
 (With new-born day to gladden mortal sight,
 And gild the courts of heaven with sacred light,)
 Th' immortal arms the goddess-mother bears 5
 Swift to her son : her son she finds in tears,
 Stretch'd o'er Patroclus' corse, while all the rest
 Their sovereign's sorrows in their own express'd.
 A ray divine her heavenly presence shed,
 And thus, his hand soft touching, Thetis said : 10
 ' Suppress, my son, this rage of grief, and know
 ' It was not man, but heaven, that gave the blow :
 ' Behold what arms by Vulcan are bestow'd,
 ' Arms worthy thee, or fit to grace a god.'
 Then drops the radiant burden on the ground ; 15
 Clang the strong arms, and ring the shores around ;
 Back shrink the Myrmidons with dread surprise,
 And from the broad effulgence turn their eyes.
 Ummov'd, the hero kindles at the show,
 And feels with rage divine his bosom glow ; 20
 From his fierce eye-balls living flames expire,
 And flash incessant like a stream of fire :

- He turns the radiant gift, and feeds his mind
 On all th' immortal artist had design'd.
 'Goddess,' (he cried,) 'these glorious arms that shine      25
 'With matchless art, confess the hand divine.
 'Now to the bloody battle let me bend :
 'But ah! the relics of my slaughter'd friend !
 'In those wide wounds through which his spirit fled,
 'Shall flies, and worms obscene, pollute the dead ?'      30
 'That unavailing care be laid aside ;'
 (The azure goddess to her son replied ;)
 'Whole years untouch'd, uninjur'd shall remain,
 'Fresh as in life, the carcass of the slain.
 'But go, Achilles, (as affairs require,)      35
 'Before the Grecian peers renounce thine ire :
 'Then uncontroll'd in boundless war engage,
 'And heav'n with strength supply the mighty rage !'
 Then in the nostrils of the slain she pour'd
 Nectarous drops, and rich ambrosia shower'd      40
 O'er all the corse : the flies forbid their prey,
 Untouch'd it rests, and sacred from decay.
 Achilles to the strand obedient went ;
 The shores resounded with the voice he sent.
 The heroes heard, and all the naval train      45
 That tend the ships, or guide them o'er the main,
 Alarm'd, transported, at the well-known sound,
 Frequent and full, the great assembly crown'd ;
 Studious to see that terror of the plain,
 Long lost to battle, shine in arms again.      50
 Tydides and Ulysses first appear,
 Lame with their wounds, and leaning on the spear :
 These on the sacred seats of council placed,
 The king of men, Atrides, came the last :
 He too sore wounded by Agenor's son.      55
 Achilles, (rising in the midst,) begun :
 'Oh monarch ! better far had been the fate
 'Of thee, of me, of all the Grecian state,
 'If (ere the day when by mad passion sway'd,
 'Rash we contended for the black-eyed maid)      60
 'Preventing Dian had despatch'd her dart,
 'And shot the shining mischief to the heart !
 'Then many a hero had not press'd the shore,
 'Nor Troy's glad fields been fatten'd with our gore :
 'Long, long shall Greece the woes we caus'd bewail,      65
 'And sad posterity repeat the tale.
 'But this, no more the subject of debate,
 'Is past, forgotten, and resign'd to fate :

'Why should, alas! a mortal man, as I,
 'Burn with a fury that can never die? 70
 Here then my anger ends: let war succeed,
 'And e'en as Greece hath bled, let Ilion bleed.
 'Now call the hosts, and try, if in our sight,
 'Troy yet shall dare to camp a second night?
 'I doom their mightiest, when this arm he knows,
 'Shall scape with transport, and with joy repose.'
 He said; his finish'd wrath with loud acclaim
 The Greeks accept, and shout Pelides' name.
 When thus, not rising from his lofty throne,
 In state unmov'd, the king of men begun: 80
 'Hear me, ye sons of Greece! with silence hear!
 'And grant your monarch an impartial ear:
 'Awhile your loud untimely joy suspend,
 'And let your rash injurious clamours end: *
 'Unruly murmurs, or ill tim'd applause, 85
 'Wrong the best speaker, and the justest cause.
 'Nor charge on me, ye Greeks, the dire debate;
 'Know, angry Jove, and all-compelling Fate,
 'With fell Erinnyes, urged my wrath that day
 'When from Achilles' arms I forced the prey. 90
 'What then could I, against the will of heaven?
 'Not by myself, but vengeful Até driven;
 'She, Jove's dread daughter, fated to infest
 'The race of mortals, enter'd in my breast.
 'Not on the ground that haughty Fury treads, 95
 'But prints her lofty footsteps on the heads
 'Of mighty men; inflicting as she goes
 'Long-fest'ring wounds, inextricable woes!
 'Of old, she stalk'd amidst the bright abodes;
 'And Jove himself, the sire of men and gods, 100
 'The world's great ruler, felt her venom'd dart;
 'Deceiv'd by Juno's wiles and female art.
 'For when Alcmena's nine long months were run,
 'And Jove expected his immortal son,
 To gods and goddesses th' unruly joy 105
 He shew'd, and vaunted of his matchless boy:
 'From us," (he said,) "this day an infant springs,
 'Fated to rule, and born a king of kings."
 Saturnia ask'd an oath, to vouch the truth,
 And fix dominion on the favour'd youth. 110
 The Thunderer, unsuspecting of the fraud,
 Pronounced those solemn words that bind a god.
 The joyful goddess, from Olympus' height,
 Swift to Achaian Argos bent her flight;

- ' Scarce seven moons gone, lay Sthenelus's wife ; 115
 ' She push'd her lingering infant into life :<sup>1</sup>
 ' Her charms Almena's coming labours stay,
 ' And stop the babe just issuing to the day.
 ' Then bids Saturnius bear his oath in mind :
 ' " A youth," (said she,) " of Jove's immortal kind 120
 ' " Is this day born : from Sthenelus he springs,
 ' " And claims thy promise to be king of kings."
 ' Grief seiz'd the Thunderer, by his oath engaged ;
 ' Stung to the soul, he sorrow'd and he raged.
 ' From his ambrosial head, where perch'd she sat, 125
 ' He snatch'd the fury-goddess of debate,
 ' The dread, th' irrevocable oath he swore,
 ' Th' immortal seats should ne'er behold her more ;
 ' And whirl'd her headlong down, for ever driven
 ' From bright Olympus and the starry heaven ; 130
 ' Thence on the nether world the Fury fell ;
 ' Ordain'd with man's contentious race to dwell.
 ' Full oft the god his son's hard toils becoan'd,
 ' Curs'd the dire Fury, and in secret groan'd.
 ' E'en thus, like Jove himself, was I misled, 135
 ' While raging Hector heap'd our camps with dead.
 ' What can the errors of my rage atone ?
 ' My martial troops, my treasures, are thy own :
 ' This instant from the navy shall be sent
 ' Whate'er Ulysses promised at thy tent ; 140
 ' But thou ! appeas'd, propitious to our prayer,
 ' Resume thy arms, and shine again in war.'
 ' O king of nations ! whose superior sway,'
 (Returns Achilles,) ' all our hosts obey !
 ' To keep or send the presents be thy care ; 145
 ' To us, 'tis equal : all we ask is war.
 ' While yet we talk, or but an instant shun
 ' The fight, our glorious work remains undone.
 ' Let every Greek who sees my spear confound
 ' The Trojan ranks, and deal destruction round, 150
 ' With emulation, what I act, survey,
 ' And learn from thence the business of the day.'
 The son of Peleus thus : and thus replies
 The great in councils, Ithacus the wise :
 ' Though, godlike, thou art by no toils oppress'd, 155
 ' At least our armies claim repast and rest :
 ' Long and laborious must the combat be,
 ' When by the gods inspir'd, and led by thee

<sup>1</sup> Eurystheus.

' Strength is deriv'd from spirits and from blood,
 ' And those augment by generous wine and food ; 160
 ' What boastful son of war, without that stay,
 ' Can last a hero through a single day ?
 ' Courage may prompt ; but, ebbing out his strength,
 ' Mere unsupported man must yield at length ;
 ' Shrunk with dry famine, and with toils declin'd, 165
 ' The drooping body will desert the mind :
 ' But built anew, with strength-conferring fare,
 ' With limbs and soul untam'd, he tires a war.
 ' Dismiss the people then, and give command,
 ' With strong repast to hearten every band ; 170
 ' But let the presents to Achilles made,
 ' In full assembly of all Greece be laid.
 ' The king of men shall rise in public sight,
 ' And solemn swear. (observant of the rite,) 175
 ' That, spotless as she came, the maid removes,
 ' Pure from his arms, and guiltless of his loves.
 ' That done, a sumptuous banquet shall be made,
 ' And the full price of injur'd honour paid.
 ' Stretch not henceforth, O prince ! thy sovereign might,
 ' Beyond the bounds of reason and of right ; 180
 ' 'Tis the chief praise that e'er to kings belong'd,
 ' To right with justice whom with power they wrong'd.'
 To him the monarch : ' Just is thy decree,
 ' Thy words give joy, and wisdom breathes in thee.
 ' Each due atonement gladly I prepare ; 185
 ' And, heaven regard me, as I justly swear !
 ' Here then awhile let Greece assembled stay,
 ' Nor great Achilles grudge this short delay ;
 ' Till from the fleet our presents be convey'd,
 ' And, Jove attesting, the firm compact made. 190
 ' A train of noble youth the charge shall bear ;
 ' These to select, Ulysses, be thy care ;
 ' In order rank'd let all our gifts appear,
 ' And the fair train of captives close the rear :
 ' Talthybius shall the victim boar convey, 195
 ' Sacred to Jove, and yon bright orb of day.'
 ' For this ' (the stern Æacides replies)
 ' Some less important season may suffice,
 ' When the stern fury of the war is o'er,
 ' And wrath extinguish'd burns my breast no more. 200
 ' By Hector slain, their faces to the sky,
 ' All grim with gaping wounds our heroes lie :
 ' Those call to war ! and, might my voice incite,
 ' Now, now this instant, should commence the fight.

' Then, when the day's complete, let generous bowls, 205
 ' And copious banquets, glad your weary souls.
 ' Let not my palate know the taste of food,
 ' Till my insatiate rage be cloy'd with blood :
 ' Pale lies my friend, with wounds disfigur'd o'er,
 ' And his cold feet are pointed to the door. 210
 ' Revenge is all my soul ! no meaner care,
 ' Interest, or thought, has room to harbour there ;
 ' Destruction be my feast, and mortal wounds,
 ' And scenes of blood, and agonizing sounds.
 ' O first of Greeks !' (Ulysses thus rejoin'd,) 215
 ' The best and bravest of the warrior-kind !
 ' Thy praise it is in dreadful camps to shine,
 ' But old experience and calm wisdom, mine.
 ' Then hear my counsel, and to reason yield ;
 ' The bravest soon are satiate of the field ; 220
 ' Though vast the heaps that strew the crimson plain,
 ' The bloody harvest brings but little gain :
 ' The scale of conquest ever wavering lies,
 ' Great Jove but turns it, and the victor dies !
 ' The great, the bold, by thousands daily fall, 225
 ' And endless were the grief to weep for all.
 ' Eternal sorrows what avails to shed ?
 ' Greece honours not with solemn fasts the dead :
 ' Enough, when death demands the brave, to pay
 ' The tribute of a melancholy day. 230
 ' One chief with patience to the grave resign'd,
 ' Our care devolves on others left behind.
 ' Let generous food supplies of strength produce,
 ' Let rising spirits flow from sprightly juice,
 ' Let their warm heads with scenes of battle glow, 235
 ' And pour new furies on the feebler foe.
 ' Yet a short interval, and none shall dare
 ' Expect a second summons to the war ;
 ' Who waits for that, the dire effect shall find,
 ' If trembling in the ships he lags behind. 240
 ' Embodied, to the battle let us bend,
 ' And all at once on haughty Troy descend.'
 And now the delegates Ulysses sent,
 To bear the presents from the royal tent.
 The sons of Nestor, Phyleus' valiant heir, 245
 Thoas and Merion, thunderbolts of war,
 With Lycomedes of Creiontian strain,
 And Melanippus, form'd the chosen train.

<sup>2</sup> That is, of the family of Creon, who was his father or grandfather.

Swift as the word was given, the youths obey'd ;
 Twice ten bright vases in the midst they laid ; 251
 A row of six fair tripods then succeeds ;
 And twice the number of high-bounding steeds ;
 Seven captives next a lovely line compose ;
 The eighth Briscis, like the blooming rose,
 Clos'd the bright band : great Ithacus before, 255
 First of the train, the golden talents bore :
 The rest in public view the chiefs dispose,
 A splendid scene ! Then Agamemnon rose :
 The boar Talthybius held : the Grecian lord
 Drew the broad cutlass sheath'd beside his sword ; 260
 The stubborn bristles from the victim's brow
 He crops,<sup>3</sup> and, offering, meditates his vow.
 His hands uplifted to th'attesting skies,
 On heaven's broad marble roof were fix'd his eyes ;
 The solemn words a deep attention draw, 265
 And Greece around sat thrill'd with sacred awe.
 ' Witness, thou first ! thou greatest power above ;
 ' All-good, all-wise, and all-surveying Jove !
 ' And mother earth, and heaven's revolving light,
 ' And ye, fell furies of the realms of night, 270
 ' Who rule the dead, and horrid woes prepare
 ' For perjur'd kings, and all who falsely swear !
 ' The black-ey'd maid inviolate removes,
 ' Pure and unconscious of my manly loves.
 ' If this be false, heaven all its vengeance shed, 275
 ' And levell'd thunder strike my guilty head !'
 With that, his weapon deep inflicts the wound :
 The bleeding savage tumbles to the ground :
 The sacred herald rolls the victim slain
 (A feast for fish) into the foaming main.<sup>4</sup> 280
 Then thus Achilles : ' Hear, ye Greeks ! and know
 ' Whate'er we feel, 'tis Jove inflicts the woe :
 ' Not else Atrides could our rage inflame,
 ' Nor from my arms, unwilling, force the dame.
 ' 'Twas Jove's high will alone, o'er-ruling all, 285
 ' That doom'd our strife, and doom'd the Greeks to fall.
 ' Go then, ye chiefs ! indulge the genial rite ;
 ' Achilles waits ye, and expects the fight.'
 The speedy council at his word adjourn'd ;
 To their black vessels all the Greeks return'd : 290
 Achilles sought his tent. His train before
 March'd onward, bending with the gifts they bore.

<sup>3</sup> See B. iii. 342.<sup>4</sup> It was not lawful to eat the flesh of the victims that were sacrificed in confirmation of oaths ; such were victims of malefaction. Pope.

Those in the tents the squires industrious spread ;
 The foaming coursers to the stalls they led.
 To their new seats the female captives move : 295
 Briseis, radiant as the queen of love,
 Slow as she pass'd, beheld with sad survey
 Where, gash'd with cruel wounds, Patroclus lay.
 Prone on the body fell the heavenly fair,
 Beat her sad breast, and tore her golden hair ; 300
 All-beautiful in grief, her humid eyes,
 Shining with tears, she lifts, and thus she cries :
 ' Ah youth ! for ever dear, for ever kind,'
 ' Once tender friend of my distracted mind
 ' I left thee fresh in life, in beauty gay ; 305
 ' Now find thee cold, 'inanimated clay !
 ' What woes my wretched race of life attend !
 ' Sorrows on sorrows, never deemed to end !
 ' The first lov'd consort of my virgin bed
 ' Before these eyes in fatal battle bled ' 310
 ' My three brave brothers in one mournful day
 ' All trod the dark irremediable way :
 ' Thy friendly arm uprear'd me from the plain,
 ' And dried my sorrows for a husband slain ;
 ' Achilles' care you promis'd I should prove, 315
 ' The first, the dearest partner of his love ;
 ' That rites divine should ratify the band.
 ' And make me empress in his native land.
 ' Accept these grateful tears ! for thee they flow
 ' For thee, that ever felt another's woe !' 320
 Her sister captives echoed groan for groan.
 Nor mourn'd Patroclus' fortunes, but their own.
 The leaders press'd the chief on every side ;
 Unmov'd he heard them, and with sighs denied :
 ' If yet Achilles have a friend, whose care 325
 ' Is bent to please him, this request forbear :
 ' Till yonder sun descend, ah, let me pay
 ' To grief and anguish one abstemious day.'
 He spoke, and from the warriors turn'd his face :
 Yet still the brother-kings of Atreus' race, 330
 Nestor, Idomeneus, Ulysses sage,
 And Phoenix, strive to calm his grief and rage :

* The poet misses no opportunity of celebrating the gentle manners of Patroclus, of which his kind treatment of this female captive, the promises he made her, and the pleasing prospects he set before her, are the clearest, and, recorded as they are by herself, the most indisputable evidence. Cowper.    * To take refreshment.    † At Lyrnessus ; see B. ii. 842.

His rage they calm not, nor his grief control
He groans, he raves, he sorrows from his soul.

'Thou too, Patroclus!' (thus his heart he vents,) 333

Hast spread th' inviting banquet in our tents,
Thy sweet society, thy winning care,

'Oft stay'd Achilles, rushing to the war.

'But now, alas! to death's cold arms resign'd,

'What banquet but revenge can glad my mind? 340

'What greater sorrow could afflict my breast,

'What more, if hony Pelus were deceas'd?

'Who now, perhaps, in Phthia dreads to hear

'His son's sad fate and drops a tender tear

'What more should Neoptolemus the brave 345

(My only offspring) sink into the grave?

It yet that offspring lives (I distant far,

'Of all glorious, wage a buteful war)

I cannot thus this cruel stroke attend;

But I and Achilles but might spare his friend 350

'I hop'd Patroclus might survive to rear

'My tender orphan with a parent's care,

'The Scyros'ish conduct him 'er the main,

'And end his eyes with his paternal reign,

'The petty palace, and the large domain 355

'For Pelus breathes no more the vital air,

'Or drags a wretched life of age and care,

But till the news of my sad fate invades

'The hastening soul, and sinks him to the shades'

Sighing he said his grief the heroes join'd, 360

Each stole a tear, for what he left behind.

'Their mingled grief the site of heaven survey'd,

And thus, with pity, to his blue-ey'd maid

'Is then Achilles now no more thy care,

'And dost thou thus desert the great in war? 365

'Lo, where yon sails their canvas wings extend,

'All-comfortless he sits, and wails his friend

'Ere thirst and want his forces have oppress'd,

'Haste and infuse ambrosia in his breast'

He spoke, and sudden at the word of Jove . 370

Shot the descending goddess from above.

So swift through ether the shrill Harpy springs,*

The wide air floating to her ample wings.

To great Achilles she her flight address'd,

And pour'd divine ambrosia in his breast, 375

* Where Achilles had left his son, when he sailed for Troy

* The original says that she descended in the shape of a Harpy

- With nectar sweet, (refection of the gods !)
 Then, swift ascending, sought the bright abodes.
 Now issued from the ships the warrior train,
 And like a deluge pour'd upon the plain.
 As when the piercing blasts of Boreas blow, 380
 And scatter o'er the fields the driving snow ;
 From dusky clouds the fleecy winter flies,
 Whose dazzling lustre whitens all the skies :
 So helms succeeding helms, so shields from shields
 Catch the quick beams, and brighten all the fields ; 385
 Broad glittering breast-plates, spears with pointed rays,
 Mix in one stream, reflecting blaze on blaze :
 Thick beats the centre as the coursers bound,
 With splendour flame the skies, and laugh the fields around.
 Full in the midst, high-towering o'er the rest, 390
 His limbs in arms divine Achilles dress'd ;
 Arms which the father of the fire bestow'd,
 Forg'd on th' eternal anvils of the god.
 Grief and revenge his furious heart inspire,
 His glowing eye-balls roll with living fire ; 395
 He grinds his teeth, and furious with delay
 O'erlooks th' embattled host, and hopes the bloody day.
 The silver cuishes first his thighs infold ;
 Then o'er his breast was braced the hollow gold :
 The brazen sword a various baldric tied, 400
 That, starr'd with gems, hung glittering at his side ;
 And, like the moon, the broad refulgent shield
 Blaz'd with long rays, and gleam'd athwart the field.
 So to night-wandering sailors, pale with fears,
 Wide o'er the watery waste a light appears, 405
 Which on the far-seen mountain blazing high,
 Streams from some lonely watch-tower to the sky :
 With mournful eyes they gaze and gaze again ;
 Loud howls the storm, and drives them o'er the main.
 Next, his high head the helmet grac'd ; behind 410
 The sweepy crest hung floating in the wind :
 Like the red star, that from his flaming hair
 Shakes down diseases, pestilence, and war ;
 So stream'd the golden honours from his head,
 Trembled the sparkling plumes, and the loose glories shed. 415
 The chief beholds himself with wondering eyes ;
 His arms he poises, and his motions tries ;
 Buoy'd by some inward force, he seems to swim,
 And feels a pinion lifting every limb.
 And now he shakes his great paternal spear, 420
 Ponderous and huge ! which not a Greek could rear :

From Pelion's cloudy top an ash entire
 Old Chiron fell'd, and shap'd it for his sire ;
 A spear which stern Achilles only wields,
 The death of heroes, and the dread of fields. 425

Automedon and Alcimus prepare
 Th' immortal coursers and the radiant car ;
 (The silver traces sweeping at their side ;)
 Their fiery mouths resplendent bridles tied ;
 The ivory-studded reins, return'd behind, 430
 Wav'd o'er their backs, and to the chariot join'd.

The charioteer then whirl'd the lash around,
 And swift ascended at one active bound.
 All bright in heavenly arms, above his squire
 Achilles mounts, and sets the field on fire ; 435

Not brighter Phœbus in th' ethereal way
 Flames from his chariot, and restores the day.
 High o'er the host, all terrible he stands,
 And thunders to his steeds these dread commands :
 ' Xanthus and Bælus ! of Podarges' strain, 440

' (Unless ye boast that heavenly race in vain.)
 ' Be swift, be mindful of the load ye bear,
 ' And learn to make your master more your care :
 ' Through falling squadrons bear my slaughtering sword,
 ' Nor, as ye left Patroclus, leave your lord.' 445

The generous Xanthus, as the words he said,
 Seem'd sensible of woe, and droop'd his head :
 Trembling he stood before the golden wain,
 And bow'd to dust the honours of his mane ;
 When, strange to tell ! (so Juno will'd) he broke 450
 Eternal silence, and portentous spoke :

' Achilles ! yes ! this day at least we bear
 ' Thy rage in safety through the files of war :
 ' But come it will, the fatal time must come,
 ' Not ours the fault, but God decrees thy doom. 455

' Not through our crime, or slowness in the course,
 ' Fell thy Patroclus, but by heavenly force :
 ' The bright far-shooting god who gilds the day
 ' (Confess'd we saw him) tore his arms away :
 ' No : could our swiftness o'er the winds prevail, 460
 ' Or beat the pinions of the western gale,
 ' All were in vain : the fates thy death demand,
 ' Due to a mortal and immortal hand.'

' Then ceas'd for ever, by the Furies tied.
 His fateful voice. Th' intrepid chief replied 465
 With unabated rage : ' So let it be !
 ' Portents and prodigies are lost on me

I know my fates : to die, to see no more .
 ' My much-loved parents, and my native shore—
 ' Enough : when heaven ordains, I sink in night ;
 ' Now perish Troy !' He said, and rush'd to fight.

BOOK XX.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE BATTLE OF THE GODS, AND THE ACTS OF ACHILLES.

Jupiter, upon Achilles' return to the battle, calls a council of the gods, and permits them to assist either party. The terrors of the combat described when the deities are engaged. Apollo encourages Æneas to meet Achilles. After a long conversation, these two heroes encounter ; but Æneas is preserved by the assistance of Neptune. Achilles falls upon the rest of the Trojans, and is upon the point of killing Hector, but Apollo conveys him away in a cloud. Achilles pursues the Trojans with a great slaughter.
 The same day continues. The scene is in the field before Troy.

Thus round Pelides breathing war and blood,
 Greece, sheath'd in arms, beside her vessels stood ;
 While, near impending from a neighbouring height,
 Troy's black battalions wait the shock of fight.
 Then Jove to Themis gives command, to call 5
 The gods to council in the starry hall :
 Swift o'er Olympus' hundred hills she flies,
 And summons all the senate of the skies.
 These, shining on, in long procession come
 To Jove's eternal adamant dome 10
 Not one was absent, not a rural power
 That haunts the verdant gloom, or rosy bower ;
 Each fair-hair'd Dryad of the shady wood,
 Each azure sister of the silver flood ;
 All but old Ocean, hoary sire ! who keeps 15
 His ancient seat beneath the sacred deeps.
 On marble thrones with lucid columns crown'd
 (The work of Vulcan) sat the powers around.
 E'en he, whose trident sways the watery reign,
 Heard the loud summons, and forsook the main, 20
 Assum'd his throne amid the bright abodes.
 And question'd thus the sire of men and gods :

'What moves the god who heaven and earth commands,
 'And grasps the thunder in his awful hands,
 'Thus to convene the whole ethereal state? 25
 'Is Greece and Troy the subject in debate?
 'Already met, the lowering hosts appear,
 'And death stands ardent on the edge of war.'
 ' 'Tis true,' (the cloud-compelling power replies,) 30
 'This day we call the council of the skies
 'In care of human race; e'en Jove's own eye
 'Sees with regret unhappy mortals die.
 'Far on Olympus' top in secret state
 'Ourself will sit, and see the hand of fate
 'Work out our will. Celestial powers! descend, 35
 'And, as your minds direct, your succour lend
 'To either host. Troy soon must lie o'erthrown,
 'If uncontroll'd Achilles fights alone:
 'Their troops but lately durst not meet his eyes;
 'What can they now, if in his rage he rise? 40
 'Assist them, gods! or Ilion's sacred wall
 'May fall this day, though fate forbids the fall.'<sup>1</sup>
 He said, and fir'd their heavenly breasts with rage:
 On adverse parts the warring gods engage.
 Heaven's awful queen; and he whose azure round 45
 Girds the vast globe; the maid in arms renown'd;
 Hermes, of profitable arts the sire,
 And Vulcan, the black sovereign of the fire:
 These to the fleet repair with instant flight;
 The vessels tremble as the gods alight. 50
 In aid of Troy, Latona, Phœbus came,
 Mars fiery-helm'd, the laughter-loving dame,
 Xanthus, whose streams in golden currents flow,
 And the chaste huntress of the silver bow.
 Ere yet the gods their various aid employ, 55
 Each Argive bosom swell'd with manly joy,
 While great Achilles (terror of the plain)
 Long lost to battle, shone in arms again.
 Dreadful he stood in front of all his host;
 Pale Troy beheld, and seem'd already lost; 60
 Her bravest heroes pant with inward fear,
 And trembling see another god of war.
 But when the powers descending swell'd the fight,
 Then tumult rose; fierce rage and pale affright
 Varied each face; then discord sounds alarms, 65
 Earth echoes, and the nations rush to arms.

<sup>1</sup> That is, though it be contrary to the expected course of things; as men are said to die before their appointed day.

Now through the trembling shores Minerva calls,
 And now she thunders from the Grecian walls.
 Mars, hovering o'er his Troy, his terror shrouds
 In gloomy tempests, and a night of clouds : 70
 Now through each Trojan heart he fury pours
 With voice divine from Ilion's topmost towers ;
 Now shouts to Simois, from her beauteous hill ;
 The mountain shook, the rapid stream stood still.
 Above, the sire of gods his thunder rolls, 75
 And peals on peals redoubled rend the poles.
 Beneath, stern Neptune shakes the solid ground ;
 The forests wave, the mountains nod around ;
 Through all their summits tremble Ida's woods,
 And from their sources boil her hundred floods. 80
 Troy's turrets totter on the rocking plain ;
 And the toss'd navies beat the heaving main.
 Deep in the dismal regions of the dead,
 Th' infernal monarch rear'd his horrid head,
 Leap'd from his throne, lest Neptune's arm should lay 85
 His dark dominions open to the day,
 And pour in light on Pluto's drear abodes,
 Abhorr'd by men, and dreadful e'en to gods.
 Such war th' immortals wage : such horrors rend
 The world's vast concave, when the gods contend. 90
 First silver-shafted Phœbus took the plain
 Against blue Neptune, monarch of the main :
 The god of arms his giant bulk display'd,
 Oppos'd to Pallas, war's triumphant maid.
 Against Latona march'd the son of May ;<sup>2</sup> 95
 The quiver'd Dian, sister of the Day.
 (Her golden arrows sounding at her side,)
 Saturnia, majesty of heaven, defied.
 With fiery Vulcan last in battle stands
 The sacred flood that rolls on golden sands ; 100
 Xanthus his name, with those of heavenly birth,
 But call'd Scamander by the sons of earth. "
 While thus the gods in various league engage,
 Achilles glow'd with more than mortal rage :
 Hector he sought ; in search of Hector turn'd 105
 His eyes around, for Hector only burn'd ;
 And burst like lightning through the ranks, and vow'd
 To glut the god of battles with his blood.
 Æneas was the first who dar'd to stay ;
 Apollo wedg'd him in the warrior's way, 110

<sup>2</sup> Mercury, son of Maia.

But swell'd his bosom with undaunted might,
 Half-forced and half-persuaded to the fight.
 Like young Lycaon, of the royal line,
 In voice and aspect, seem'd the power divine ;
 And bade the chief reflect, how late with scorn
 In distant threats he brav'd the goddess-born.

115

Then thus the hero of Anchises' strain :
 ' To meet Pelides you persuade in vain ;
 ' Already have I met, nor void of fear
 ' Observ'd the fury of his flying spear ;
 ' From Ida's woods he chas'd us to the field,
 ' Our force he scatter'd, and our herds he kill'd.
 ' Lyrnessus,<sup>3</sup> Pedasus in ashes lay ;
 ' But (Jove assisting) I surviv'd the day.
 ' Else had I sunk oppress'd in fatal fight,
 ' By fierce Achilles and Minerva's might.
 ' Where'er he mov'd, the goddess shone before,
 ' And bathed his brazen lance in hostile gore.
 ' What mortal man Achilles can sustain ?
 ' Th' immortals guard him through the dreadful plain.
 ' And suffer not his dart to fall in vain.
 ' Were God my aid, this arm should check his power,
 ' Though strong in battle as a brazen tower.'

120

125

130

To whom the son of Jove : ' That god implore,
 ' And be what great Achilles was before.
 ' From heavenly Venus thou deriv'st thy strain,
 ' And he but from a sister of the main ;
 ' An aged sea-god father of his line,
 ' But Jove himself the sacred source of thine.
 ' Then lift thy weapon for a noble blow,
 ' Nor fear the vaunting of a mortal foe.'

135

140

This said, and spirit breath'd into his breast,
 Through the thick troops th' embolden'd hero press'd :
 His venturous act the white-arm'd queen survey'd,
 And thus, assembling all the powers, she said :

145

' Behold an action, gods ! that claims your care,
 ' Lo, great Æneas rushing to the war ;
 ' Against Pelides he directs his course ;
 ' Phœbus impels, and Phœbus gives him force.
 ' Restrain his bold career ; at least, t' attend
 ' Our favour'd hero, let some power descend.
 ' To guard his life, and add to his renown,
 ' We, the great armament of heaven, came down.

<sup>3</sup> B. ii. 842 ; xix. 310.

' Hereafter let him fall, as fates design,
 ' That spun so short his life's illustrious line ; 155
 ' But lest some adverse god now cross his way,
 ' Give him to know what powers assist this day :
 ' For how shall mortal stand the dire alarms,
 ' When heaven's refulgent host appear in arms ?
 Thus she, and thus the god whose force can make 160
 The solid globe's eternal basis shake :
 ' Against the might of man, so feeble known,
 ' Why should celestial powers exert their own ?
 ' Suffice, from yonder mount to view the scene ;
 ' And leave to war the fates of mortal men. 165
 ' But if th' armipotent, or god of light,
 ' Obstruct Achilles, or commence the fight,
 ' Thence on the gods of Troy we swift descend :
 ' Full soon, I doubt not, shall the conflict end ;
 ' And these, in ruin and confusion hurl'd, 170
 ' Yield to our conquering arms the lower world.'
 Thus having said, the tyrant of the sea,
 Cœrulean Neptune, rose, and led the way.
 Advanc'd upon the field therø stood a mound
 Of earth congested, wall'd, and trench'd around ; 175
 In elder times to guard Alcides made,
 (The work of Trojans with Minerva's aid,)
 What time a vengeful monster of the main
 Swept the wide shore, and drove him to the plain.<sup>4</sup>
 Here Neptune and the gods of Greece repair, 180
 With clouds encompass'd, and a veil of air :
 The adverse powers, around Apollo laid,
 Crown the fair hills that silver Simois shade.
 In circlø close each heavenly party sat,
 Intent to form the future scheme of fate ; 185
 But mix not yet in fight, though Jove on high
 Gives the loud signal, and the heavens reply.
 Meanwhile the rushing armies hide the ground ;
 The trampled centre yields a hollow sound.
 Steeds cas'd in mail, and chiefs in armour bright, 190
 The gleamy champaign glows with brazen light.
 Amidst both hosts (a dreadful space ) appear
 There, great Achilles ; bold Æneas there.
 With towering strides Æneas first advanc'd ;
 The nodding plumage on his helmet danc'd ; 195

<sup>4</sup> When Laomedon was induced by an oracle to expose his daughter Hesione to a sea-monster, Hercules undertook to kill the monster ; and the Trojans then built the mound as a defence to him in the combat.

Spread o'er his breast the fencing shield he bore,
And, as he mov'd, his javelin flam'd before.

Not so Pelides : furious to engage,
He rush'd impetuous. Such the lion's rage,
Who, viewing first his foes with scornful eyes,
Though all in arms the peopled city rise,
Stalks careless on, with unregarding pride ;
Till at the length, by some brave youth defied,
To his bold spear the savage turns alone ;

200

He murmurs fury with a hollow groan :
He grins, he foams, he rolls his eyes around ;
Lash'd by his tail, his heaving sides resound ;
He calls up all his rage, he grinds his teeth,
Resolv'd on vengeance, or resolv'd on death.

205

So fierce Achilles on Æneas flies ;

210

So stands Æneas, and his force defies.

Ere yet the stern encounter join'd, begun

The seed of Thetis thus to Venus' son :

' Why comes Æneas through the ranks so far ?

' Seeks he to meet Achilles' arm in war,

215

' In hope the realms of Priam to enjoy,

' And prove his merits to the throne of Troy ?<sup>s</sup>

' Grant that beneath thy lance Achilles dies,

' The partial monarch may refuse the prize ;

' Sons he has many : those thy pride may quell ;

220

' And 'tis his fault to love those sons too well.

' Or, in reward of thy victorious hand,

' Has Troy propos'd some spacious tract of land ?

' An ample forest, or a fair domain,

' Of hills for vines, and arable for grain ?

225

' E'en this, perhaps, will hardly prove thy lot.

' But can Achilles be so soon forgot ?

' Once (as I think) you saw this brandish'd spear,

' And then the great Æneas seem'd to fear.

' With hearty haste from Ida's mount he fled,

230

' Nor, till he reach'd Lyrnessus,<sup>6</sup> turn'd his head.

' Her lofty walls not long our progress stay'd ;

' Those, Pallas, Jove, and we, in ruins laid : .

In Grecian chains her captive race were cast ;

'Tis true, the great Æneas fled too fast.

235

Defrauded of my conquest once before,

What then I lost, the gods this day restore.

Go ; while thou may'st, avoid the threaten'd fate ;

Fools stay to feel it, and are wise too late.'

<sup>6</sup> Ver. 123.

'To this Anchises' son : 'Such words employ
 'To one that fears thee, some unwarlike boy ; 240
 'Such we disdain ; the best may be defied
 'With mean reproaches, and unmanly pride :
 'Unworthy the high race from which we came,
 'Proclaim'd so loudly by the voice of fame ; 245
 'Each from illustrious fathers draws his line ;
 'Each goddess-born ; half human, half divine.
 'Thetis' this day, or Venus' offspring dies,
 'And tears shall trickle from celestial eyes :
 'For when two heroes, thus deriv'd, contend, 250
 'Tis not in words the glorious strife can end.
 'If yet thou farther seek to learn my birth,
 '(A tale resounded through the spacious earth,)
 'Hear how the glorious origin we prove
 'From ancient Dardanus, the first from Jove : 255
 'Dardania's walls he rais'd ; for Ilion then
 '(The city since of many-languag'd men,)
 'Was not. The natives were content to till
 'The shady foot of Ida's fountful hill.
 'From Dardanus, great Erichthonius springs, 260
 'The richest once of Asia's wealthy kings ;
 'Three thousand mares his spacious pastures bred,<sup>7</sup>
 'Three thousand foals beside their mothers fed.
 'Boreas, enamour'd of the sprightly train,
 'Conceal'd his godhead in a flowing mane, 265
 'With voice dissembled to his loves he neigh'd,
 'And cours'd the dappled beauties o'er the mead :
 'Hence sprung twelve others of unrivall'd kind,
 'Swift as their mother mares and father wind.
 'These lightly skimming, when they swept the plain, 270
 'Nor plied the grass, nor bent the tender grain ;
 'And when along the level seas they flew,
 'Scarce on the surface curl'd the briny dew.
 'Such Erichthonius was : From him there came
 'The sacred Tros, of whom the Trojan name. 275
 'Three sons renown'd adorn'd his nuptial bed,
 'Ilus, Assaracus, and Ganymed :
 'The matchless Ganymed, divinely fair,
 'Whom heaven, enamour'd, snatch'd to upper air,
 'To bear the cup of Jove : (ethereal guest, 280
 'The grace and glory of th' ambrosial feast.)

<sup>7</sup> This number might seem incredible, were we not assured by Herodotus that there were in the stud of Cyrus at one time (besides those for the service of war) eight hundred horses and six thousand six hundred mares. EUSTATHIUS. P. 2c.

'The two remaining sons the line divide :
 'First rose Laomedon from Ilus' side :
 'From him Tithonus, now in cares grown old,
 'And Priam, (blest with Hector, brave and bold ;)
 'Clytius and Lampus, ever-honour'd pair ;
 'And Hicetaon, thunderbolt of war.
 'From great Assaracus sprung Capys, he
 'Begot Anchises, and Anchises me,
 'Such is our race : 'tis fortune gives us birth,
 'But Jove alone endues the soul with worth :
 'He, source of power and might ! with boundless sway.
 'All human courage gives or takes away.
 'Long in the field of words we may contend,
 'Reproach is infinite, and knows no end,
 'Arm'd or with truth or falsehood, right or wrong,
 'So voluble a weapon is the tongue ;
 'Wounded, we wound ; and neither side can fail,
 'For every man has equal strength to rail :
 'Women alone, when in the streets they jar,
 'Perhaps excel us in this wordy war ;
 'Like us they stand, encompass'd with the crowd,
 'And vent their anger, impotent and loud.
 'Cease then : our business in the field of fight
 'Is not to question, but to prove our might.
 'To all those insults thou hast offer'd here
 'Receive this answer : 'tis my flying spear.'
 He spoke. With all his force the javelin flung,
 Fix'd deep, and loudly in the buckler rung.
 Far on his outstretch'd arm Pelides held
 (To meet the thundering lance) his dreadful shield,
 That trembled as it stuck ; nor void of fear
 Saw, ere it fell, th' immeasurable spear.
 His fears were vain ; impenetrable charms
 Secur'd the temper of th' ethereal arms.
 Through two strong plates the point its passage held,
 But stopp'd and rested, by the third repell'd ;
 Five plates of various metal, various mould,
 Compos'd the shield, of brass each outward fold,
 Of tin each inward, and the middle gold :

* Fearless of provoking Achilles, who, he knew, would hate him the more for it, Æneas makes this the closing article of his genealogy, to show that he valued himself on his relationship to Hector, who had slain Patroclus. Hector was the son of Priam, who descended from Ilus ; and Æneas the son of Anchises, whose descent was from Assaracus, the brother of Ilus.

There stuck the lance. Then, rising ere he threw,
 The forceful spear of great Achilles flew,
 And pierc'd the Dardan shield's extremest bound,
 Where the shrill brass return'd a sharper sound :
 Through the thin verge the Pelian weapon glides,
 And the slight covering of expanded hides. 325
 Æneas his contracted body bends,
 And o'er him high the riven targe extends,
 Sees, through its parting plates, the upper air,
 And at his back perceives the quivering spear : 330
 A fate so near him chills his soul with fright,
 And swims before his eyes the many-colour'd light.
 Achilles, rushing in with dreadful cries,
 Draws his broad blade, and at Æneas flies :
 Æneas, rousing as the foe came on, 335
 (With force collected.) heaves a mighty stone ;
 A mass enormous ! which, in modern days
 No two of earth's degenerate sons could raise.
 But ocean's god, whose earthquakes rock the ground,
 Saw the distress, and mov'd the powers around : 340
 ' Lo ! on the brink of fate Æneas stands,
 ' An instant victim to Achilles' hands ;
 ' By Phœbus urg'd ; but Phœbus has bestow'd
 ' His aid in vain : the man o'erpowers the god.
 ' And can ye see this righteous chief atone, 345
 ' With guiltless blood, for vices not his own ?
 ' To all the gods his constant vows were paid ;
 ' Sure, though he wars for Troy, he claims our aid.
 ' Fate wills not this ; nor thus can Jove resign
 ' The future father of the Dardan line : 350
 ' The first great ancestor obtain'd his grace,
 ' And still his love descends on all the race.
 ' For Priam now, and Priam's faithless kind,
 ' At length are odious to th' all-seeing mind ;
 ' On great Æneas shall devolve the reign, 355
 ' And sons succeeding sons the lasting line sustain.'<sup>9</sup>
 The great earth-shaker thus : to whom replies
 Th' imperial goddess with the radiant eyes.
 ' Good as he is, to immolate or spare
 ' The Dardan prince, O Neptun<sup>9</sup>, be thy care ; 360

<sup>9</sup> See B. xiii. 578. Strabo, B. xiii. supposes that Homer meant to say, that Æneas remained at Troy, and ruled there after Priam's death, and that the story of his going into Italy is consequently a fiction. Dionysius of Halicarnassus, on the other hand, thinks that the prophecy might have been fulfill'd by Æneas reigning over the Trojans, whom he carried with him into Italy, and their descendants.

'Pallas and I, by all that gods can bind,
 'Have sworn destruction to the Trojan kind;
 'Not e'en an instant to protract their fate,
 'Or save one member of the sinking state;
 'Till her last flame be quench'd with her last gore, 365
 'And e'en her crumbling ruins are no more.'

The king of ocean to the fight descends;
 Through all the whistling darts his course he bends,
 Swift interpos'd between the warriors flies,
 And casts thick darkness o'er Achilles' eyes. 370

From great Æneas' shield the spear he drew,
 And at its master's feet the weapon threw.
 That done, with force divine he snatch'd on high
 The Dardan prince, and bore him through the sky,
 Smooth-gliding without step, above the heads 375
 Of warring heroes and of bounding steeds.

Till at the battle's utmost verge they light,
 Where the slow Caucons<sup>10</sup> close the rear of fight:
 The godhead there (his heavenly form confess'd)
 With words like these the panting chief address'd: 380

'What power, O prince, with force inferior far
 'Urg'd thee to meet Achilles' arm in war?
 'Henceforth beware, nor antedate thy doom,
 'Defrauding fate of all thy fame to come.
 'But when the day decreed, (for come it must,) 385
 'Shall lay this dreadful hero in the dust,
 'Let then the furies of that arm be known,
 'Secure no Grecian force transcends thy own.'

With that, he left him wondering as he lay,
 Then from Achilles chas'd the mist away: 390
 Sudden, returning with the stream of light,
 The scene of war came rushing on his sight.

Then thus amaz'd: 'What wonders strike my mind!
 'My spear, that parted on the wings of wind,
 'Laid here before me! and the Dardan lord, 395
 'That fell this instant, vanish'd from my sword!

'I thought alone with mortals to contend,
 'But powers celestial sure this foe defend.
 'Great as he is, our arm he scarce will try,
 'Content for once, with all his gods, to fly. 400
 'Now then let others bleed.' This said, aloud
 He vents his fury, and inflames the crowd:

<sup>10</sup> The Caucons are not mentioned in the catalogue, but were perhaps considered as included under the general appellation of the phlagonians, whose neighbours they are said to have been.

' O Greeks,' (he cries, and every rank alarms,)
 ' Join battle, man to man, and arms to arms !
 ' 'Tis not in me, though favour'd by the sky, 405
 ' To mow whole troops, and make whole armies fly :
 ' No god can singly such a host engage,
 ' Not Mars himself, nor great Minerva's rage.
 ' But whatsoe'er Achilles can inspire,
 ' Whate'er of active force, or acting fire, 410
 ' Whate'er this heart can prompt, or hand obey ;
 ' All, all Achilles, Greeks, is yours to-day.
 ' Through yon wide host this arm shall scatter fear,
 ' And thin the squadrons with my single spear.'
 He said : nor less elate with martial joy, 415
 The godlike Hector warm'd the troops of Troy :
 ' Trojans, to war ! think Hector leads you on ;
 ' Nor dread the vaunts of Peleus' haughty son.
 ' Deeds must decide our fate. E'en those with words
 ' Insult the brave, who tremble at their swords ; 420
 ' The weakest atheist-wretch all heaven defies,
 ' But shrinks and shudders, when the thunder flies.
 ' Nor from yon boaster shall your chief retire,
 ' Not though his heart were steel, his hands were fire ;
 ' That fire, that steel, your Hector should withstand, 425
 ' And brave that vengeful heart, that dreadful hand.'
 Thus (breathing rage through all) the hero said ;
 A wood of lances rises round his head,
 Clamours on clamours tempest all the air ;
 They join, they throng, they thicken to the war. 430
 But Phœbus warns him from high heaven to shun
 The single fight with Thetis' godlike son :
 More safe to combat in the mingled band,
 Nor tempt too near the terrors of his hand.
 He hears, obedient to the god of light, 435
 And, plunged within the ranks, awaits the fight.
 Then fierce Achilles, shouting to the skies,
 On Troy's whole force with boundless fury flies.
 First falls Iphytion, at his army's head ;
 Brave was the chief, and brave the host he led ; 440
 From great Otrynteus he derived his blood,
 His mother was a Naiad of the flood ;
 Beneath the shades of Tmolus, crown'd with snow,
 From Hydè's walls he ruled the lands below.
 Pierce as he springs, the sword his head divides ; 445
 The parted visage falls on equal sides :
 With loud resounding arms he strikes the plain ;
 While thus Achilles glories o'er the slain :

' there, Otryntides ! the Trojan earth
 ' Receive thee dead, though Gygæ<sup>11</sup> boast thy birth ; 450
 ' Those beauteous fields where Hyllus' waves are roll'd,
 ' And plenteous Hermus swells with tides of gold,
 ' Are thine no more.' Th' insulting hero said,
 And left him sleeping in eternal shade.
 The rolling wheels of Greece the body tore, 455
 And dash'd their axles with no vulgar gore.
 Demoleon next, Antenor's offspring, laid
 Breathless in dust, the price of rashness paid.
 Th' impatient steed with full descending sway
 Forc'd through his brazen helm its furious way, 460
 Resistless drove the batter'd skull before,
 And dash'd and mingled all the brains with gore.
 This sees Hippodamas, and, seiz'd with fright,
 Deserts his chariot for a swifter flight :
 The lance arrests him ; an ignoble wound 465
 The panting Trojan rivets to the ground.
 He groans away his soul : not louder roars
 At Neptune's shrine on Helicé's<sup>12</sup> high shores
 The victim bull ; the rocks rebellow round,
 And ocean listens to the grateful sound. 470
 Then fell on Polydore his vengeful rage,
 The youngest hope of Priam's stooping age,
 (Whose feet for swiftness in the race surpass'd ;)
 Of all his sons, the dearest and the last.
 To the forbidden field he takes his flight 475
 In the first folly of a youthful knight ;
 To vaunt his swiftness wheels around the plain,
 But vaunts not long, with all his swiftness slain ;
 Struck where the crossing belts unite behind,
 And golden rings the double back-plate join'd ; 480
 Forth through the navel burst the thrilling steel ;
 And on his knees with piercing shrieks he fell ;
 The rushing entrails pour'd upon the ground
 His hands collect : and darkness wraps him round.
 When Hector view'd, all ghastly in his gore, 485
 Thus sadly slain, the unhappy Polydore ;

<sup>11</sup> There was no town in Lydia called Gygæ. Homer has, "at the Gygean lake," so called from Gyges, King of Lydia.

<sup>12</sup> In Helice, a town of Achaia, three quarters of a league from the gulf of Corinth, Neptune had a magnificent temple, where the Ionians offered every year to him a sacrifice of a bull ; and it was with these people an auspicious sign, and a certain mark that the sacrifice would be accepted, if the bull bellowed as he was led to the altar. Pope.

A cloud of sorrow overcast his sight,
 His soul no longer brook'd the distant fight;
 Full in Achilles' dreadful front he came,
 And shook his javelin like a waving flame. 490
 The son of Peleus sees, with joy possess'd,
 His heart high-bounding in his rising breast:
 And, 'Lo! the man, on whom black fates attend;
 'The man that slew Achilles in his friend!
 'No more shall Hector's and Pelides' spear 495
 'Turn from each other in the walks of war.'
 Then with revengeful eyes he scann'd him o'er—
 'Come, and receive thy fate!' He spake no more.
 Hector, undaunted, thus: 'Such words employ
 'To one that dreads thee, some unwarlike boy: 500
 'Such we could give, defying and defied,
 'Mean intercourse of obloquy and pride!
 'I know thy force to mine superior far;
 'But heaven alone confers success in war;
 'Mean as I am, the gods may guide my dart, 505
 'And give it entrance in a braver heart.'
 Then parts the lance: but Pallas' heavenly breath
 Far from Achilles wafts the winged death:
 The bidden dart again to Hector flies,
 And at the feet of its great master lies. 510
 Achilles closes with his hated foe,
 His heart and eyes with flaming fury glow:
 But, present to his aid, Apollo shrouds
 The favour'd hero in a veil of clouds.
 Thrice struck Pelides with indignant heart, 515
 Thrice in impassive air he plunged the dart:
 The spear a fourth time buried in the cloud,
 He foams with fury, and exclaims aloud:
 'Wretch! thou hast 'scap'd again, once more thy flight
 'Has saved thee, and the partial god of light. 520
 'But long thou shalt not thy just fate withstand,
 'If any power assist Achilles' hand.
 'Fly then inglorious; but thy flight this day
 'Whole hecatombs of Trojan ghosts shall pay.'
 With that he gluts his rage on numbers slain: 525
 Then Dryops tumbled to th' ensanguin'd plain
 Pierc'd through the neck: he left him panting there,
 And stopp'd Demuchus, great Philetor's heir,
 Gigantic chief! deep gash'd th' enormous blade,
 And for the soul an ample passage made. 530
 Laogonus and Dardanus expire,
 The valiant sons of an unhappy sire:

- Both in one instant from the chariot hurl'd,
 Sunk in one instant to the nether world ;
 This difference only their sad fates afford, 535
 That one the spear destroy'd, and one the sword.
 Nor less unpitied, young Alastor bleeds ;
 In vain his youth, in vain his beauty pleads :
 In vain he begs thee, with a suppliant's moan,
 To spare a form and age so like thy own ! 540
 Unhappy boy ! no prayer, no moving art
 E'er bent that fierce inexorable heart !
 While yet he trembled at his knees, and cried,
 The ruthless faulchion oped his tender side ;
 The panting liver pours a flood of gore, 545
 That drowns his bosom till he pants no more.
 Through Mulius' head then drove th' impetuous spear ;
 The warrior falls transfix'd from ear to ear.
 Thy life, Echeclus ! next the sword bereaves ;
 Deep through the front the ponderous faulchion cleaves ; 550
 Warm'd in the brain the smoking weapon lies,
 The purple death comes floating o'er his eyes
 Then brave Deucalion died : the dart was flung
 Where the knit nerves the pliant elbow strung :
 He dropp'd his arm, an unassisting weight, 555
 And stood all impotent expecting fate :
 Full on his neck the falling faulchion sped,
 From his broad shoulders hew'd his crested head :
 Forth from the bone the spinal marrow flies, 560
 And sunk in dust the corpse extended lies.
 Rhigmus, whose race from fruitful Thracia came,
 (The son of Pircus, an illustrious name,)
 Succeeds to fate : the spear his belly rends ;
 Prone from his car the thundering chief descends ;
 The squire who saw expiring on the ground 565
 His prostrate master, rein'd the steeds around.
 His back scarce turn'd, the Pelian javelin go'd,
 And stretch'd the servant o'er his dying lord.
 As when a flame the winding valley fills,
 And runs on crackling shrubs between the hills ; 570
 Then o'er the stubble up the mountain flies,
 Fires the high woods, and blazes to the skies,
 This way and that the spreading torrent roars ;
 So sweeps the hero through the wasted shores :
 Around him wide immense destruction pours, 575
 And earth is deluged with the sanguine showers
 As with autumnal harvests cover'd o'er,
 And thick bestrown, lies Ceres' sacred floor,

When round and round, with never-wearied pain,
 The trampling steers beat out th' unnumber'd grain : 580
 So the fierce coursers, as the chariot rolls,
 Tread down whole ranks, and crush out heroes' souls.
 Dash'd from their hoofs, while o'er the dead they fly,
 Black, bloody drops the smoking chariot dye :
 The spiky wheels through heaps of carnage tore ; 585
 And thick the groaning axles dropp'd with gore.
 High o'er the scene of death Achilles stood,
 All grim with dust, all horrible in blood :
 Yet still insatiate, still with rage on flame ;
 Such is the lust of never-dying fame ! 590

BOOK XXI.

THE ARGUMENT.

THE BATTLE IN THE RIVER SCAMANDER.

The Trojans fly before Achilles, some towards the town, others to the river Scamander ; he falls upon the latter with great slaughter, takes twelve captives alive, to sacrifice to the shade of Patroclus ; and kills Lycaon and Asteropæus. Scamander attacks him with all his waves ; Neptune and Pallas assist the hero ; Simois joins Scamander ; at length Vulcan, by the instigation of Juno, almost dries up the river. This combat ended, the other gods engage each other. Meanwhile Achilles continues the slaughter, and drives the rest into Troy : Agenor only makes a stand, and is conveyed away in a cloud by Apollo : who (to delude Achilles) takes upon him Agenor's shape, and while he pursues him in that disguise, gives the Trojans an opportunity of retiring into their city.

The same day continues. The scene is on the banks and in the stream of Scamander.

AND now to Xanthus' gliding stream they drove,
 Xanthus, immortal progeny of Jove.
 The river here divides the flying train :
 Part to the town fly diverse o'er the plain,
 Where late their troops triumph'd bore the fight, 5
 Now chas'd and trembling in ignoble flight :
 (These with a gather'd mist Saturnia shrouds,
 And rolls behind the rout a heap of clouds ;)
 Part plunge into the stream : old Xanthus roars ;
 The flashing billows beat the whiten'd shores : 10

With cries promiscuous all the banks resound,
 And here and there, in eddies whirling round,
 The flouncing steeds and shrieking warriors drown'd.
 As the scorch'd locusts from their fields retire,
 While fast behind them runs the blaze of fire ; 15
 Driven from the land before the smoky cloud,
 The clustering legions rush into the flood :
 So plunged in Xanthus by Achilles' force,
 Roars the resounding surge with men and horse.
 His bloody lance the hero casts aside, 20
 (Which spreading tamarisks on the margin hide,)

Then, like a god, the rapid billows braves,
 Arm'd with his sword, high brandish'd o'er the waves ;
 Now down he plunges, now he whirls it round,
 Deep groan the waters with the dying sound ; 25
 Repeated wounds the reddening river dyed,
 And the warm purple circled on the tide.
 Swift through the foamy flood the Trojans fly,
 And close in rocks or winding caverns lie :
 So the huge dolphin tempesting the main, 30
 In shoals before him fly the scaly train ;
 Confus'dly heap'd, they seek their inmost caves,
 Or pant and heave beneath the floating waves.
 Now, tir'd with slaughter, from the Trojan band
 Twelve chosen youths he drags alive to land ; 35
 With their rich belts their captive arms constrains ;
 (Late their proud ornaments, but now their chains ;)

These his attendants to the ships convey'd,
 Sad victims ! destin'd to Patroclus' shade. 40
 Then, as once more he plung'd amid the flood,
 The young Lycaon in his passage stood ;
 The son of Priam, whom the hero's hand
 But late made captive in his father's land,
 (As from a sycamore his sounding steel
 Lopp'd the green arms to spoke a chariot wheel,) 45
 To Lemnos' isle he sold the royal slave,
 Where Jason's son the price demanded gave :
 That kind Eëtion, touching on the shore,
 The ransom'd prince to fair Arsë's<sup>1</sup> Bore. 50
 Ten days were past, since in his father's reign
 He felt the sweets of liberty again :
 The next, that god<sup>2</sup> whom men in vain withstand,
 Gives the same youth to the same conquering hand :

<sup>2</sup> That superior Power, Fate or Destiny.

- Now never to return ! and doom'd to go
 A sadder journey to the shades below. 65
 His well-known face when great Achilles eyed,
 (The helm and vizor he had cast aside
 With wild affright, and dropp'd upon the field
 His useless lance and unavailing shield,)
 As trembling, panting, from the stream he fled, 60
 And knock'd his faltering knees, the hero said :
 ' Ye mighty gods ! what wonders strike my view !
 ' Is it in vain our conquering arms subdued ?
 ' Sure I shall see yon heaps of Trojans kill'd,
 ' Rise from the shade, and brave me on the field : 65
 ' As now the captive, whom so late I bound
 ' And sold to Lemnos, stalks on Trojan ground !
 ' Not him the sea's unmeasur'd deeps detain,
 ' That bar such numbers from their native plain :
 ' Lo ! he returns. Try then my flying spear ! 70
 ' Try, if the grave can hold the wanderer :
 ' If earth at length this active prince can seize,
 ' Earth, whose strong grasp has held down Hercules.'
 Thus while he spake, the Trojan, pale with fears,
 Approach'd, and sought his knees with suppliant tears ; 75
 Loath as he was to yield his youthful breath,
 And his soul shivering at th' approach of death.
 Achilles rais'd the spear, prepar'd to wound ;
 He kiss'd his feet, extended on the ground :
 And while above the spear suspended stood, 80
 Longing to dip its thirsty point in blood,
 One hand embraced them close, one stopp'd the dart ;
 While thus these melting words attempt his heart :
 ' Thy well-known captive, great Achilles ! see ;
 ' Once more Lycaon trembles at thy knee ; 85
 ' Some pity to a suppliant's name afford,
 ' Who shar'd the gifts of Ceres at thy board ;
 ' Whom late thy conqu'ring arm to Lemnos bore,
 ' Far from his father, friends, and native shore ;
 ' A hundred oxen were his price that day, 90
 ' Now sums immense thy mercy shall repay.
 ' Scarce respited from woes I yet appear,
 ' And scarce twelve morning suns have seen me here :
 ' Lo ! Jove again submits thee to my hands,
 ' Again, her victim cruel fate demands ! 95
 ' I sprung from Priam, and Laothoë fair ;
 ' (Old Altes' daughter, and Lelegia's heir ;
 ' The original is, daughter of Altes, who ruled over the Leleges. Satnio was a river of Troas, B. xiv. 520.

' Who held in Pedasus his fam'd abode,
 ' And rul'd the fields where silver Satnio flow'd ;)
 ' Two sons (alas ! unhappy sons) she bore ; 100
 ' For ah ! one spear shall drink each brother's gore,
 ' And I succeed to slaughter'd Polydore.
 ' How from that arm of terror shall I fly ?
 ' Some demon urges, 'tis my doom to die !
 ' If ever yet soft pity touch'd thy mind, 105
 ' Ah ! think not me too much of Hector's kind !
 ' Not the same mother gave thy suppliant breath,
 ' With his, who wrought thy lov'd Patroclus' death.'
 These words, attended with a shower of tears,
 The youth address'd to unrelenting ears : 110
 ' Talk not of life, or ransom,' (he replies,)
 ' Patroclus dead, whoever meets me, dies :
 ' In vain a single Trojan sues for grace ;
 ' But least, the sons of Priam's hateful race.
 ' Die then, my friend !<sup>4</sup> what boots it to deplore ? 115
 ' The great, the good Patroclus is no more !
 ' He, far thy better, was foredoom'd to die,
 ' And thou, dost thou bewail mortality ?
 ' Seest thou not me, whom nature's gifts adorn,
 ' Sprung from a hero, from a goddess born ? 120
 ' The day shall come (which nothing can avert)
 ' When by the spear, the arrow, or the dart,
 ' By night, or day, by force or by design,
 ' Impending death and certain fate are mine.
 ' Die then : ' he said, and as the word he spoke, 125
 The fainting stripling sunk before the stroke ;
 His hand forgot its grasp, and left the spear ;
 While all his trembling frame confess'd his fear.
 Sudden Achilles his broad sword display'd,
 And buried in his neck the reeking blade. 130
 Prone fell the youth ; and, panting on the land,
 The gusling purple dyed the thirsty sand :
 The victor to the stream the carcass gave,
 And thus insults him, floating on the wave :
 ' Lie there, Lycaon ! let the fish surround 135
 ' Thy bloated corse, and stick thy gory wound :
 ' There no sad mother shall thy funerals weep,
 ' But swift Scamander roll thee to the deep,
 ' Whose every wave some watery monster brings,
 ' To feast unpunish'd on the fat of kings. 140

* There is much terrible irony in this<sup>4</sup> appellation, by which Achilles ridicules the plea of Lycaon, that he had eaten bread at his table. Cowper.

' So perish Troy, and all the Trojan line !
 ' Such ruin theirs, and such compassion mine.
 ' What boots ye now Scamander's worshipp'd stream,
 ' His earthly honours, and immortal name ?
 ' In vain your immolated bulls are slain, 145
 ' Your living coursers glut his gulfs in vain :
 ' Thus he rewards you with this bitter fate ;
 ' Thus, till the Grecian vengeance is complete ;
 ' Thus is aton'd Patroclus' honour'd shade,
 ' And the short absence of Achilles paid.' 150
 These boastful words provoke the raging god ;
 With fury swells the violated flood.
 What means divine niry yet the power employ,
 To check Achilles, and to rescue Troy ?
 Meanwhile the hero springs in arms, to dare 155
 The great Asteropæus to mortal war ;
 The son of Pelagon, whose lofty line
 Flows from the source of Axios,<sup>b</sup> stream divine !
 (Fair Peribœa's love the god had crown'd.
 With all his reflux waters circled round.) 160
 On him Achilles rush'd : he fearless stood,
 And shook two spears, advancing from the flood :
 The flood impell'd him, on Pelides' head
 T' avenge his waters choked with heaps of dead.
 Near as they drew, Achilles thus began : 165
 ' What art thou, boldest of the race of man ?
 ' Who, or from whence ? Unhappy is the sire,
 ' Whose son encounters our resistless ire.'
 ' O son of Pelcus ! what avails to trace,'
 (Replied the warrior,) ' our illustrious race ? 170
 ' From rich Pæonia's valleys I command,
 ' Arm'd with protended spears, my native hand ;
 ' Now shines the tenth bright morning since I came
 ' In aid of Ilion to the fields of fame :
 ' Axios, who swells with all the neighbouring rills, 175
 ' And wide around the floated region fills,
 ' Begot my sire, whose spear such glory won :
 ' Now lift thy arm, and try that hero's son !'
 Threatening he said : the hostile chiefs advance ;
 At once Asteropæus discharged each lance ; 180
 (For both his dexterous hands the lance could wield ;)
 One struck, but pierc'd not the Vulcanian shield ;
 One raz'd Achilles' hand ; the spouting blood
 Spun forth, in earth the fasten'd weapon stood.

Like lightning next the Pelian javelin flies ; 185
 Its ringing fury hiss'd along the skies ;
 Deep in the swelling bank was driven the spear,
 E'en to the middle earth ; and quiver'd there.
 Then from his side the sword Pelides drew,
 And on his foe with double fury flew ; 190
 The foe thrice tugg'd, and shook the rooted wood,
 Repulsive of his might the weapon stood :
 The fourth, he tries to break the spear, in vain ;
 Bent as he stands he tumbles to the plain ;
 His belly open'd with a ghastly wound, 195
 The reeking entrails pour upon the ground.
 Beneath the hero's feet he panting lies,
 And his eye darkens, and his spirit flies :
 While the proud victor thus triumphing said,
 His radiant armour tearing from the dead : 200
 ' So ends thy glory ! such the fate they prove
 ' Who strive presumptuous with the sons of Jove.
 ' Sprung from a river didst thou boast thy line ?
 ' But great Saturnius is the source of mine.
 ' How durst thou vaunt thy watery progeny ? 205
 ' Of Peleus, Æacus, and Jove, am I ;
 ' The race of these superior far to those,
 ' As he that thunders to the stream that flows.
 ' What rivers can, Scamander might have shewn :
 ' But Jove he dreads, nor wars against his son. 210
 ' E'en Achelous might contend in vain,
 ' And all the roaring billows of the main.
 ' Th' eternal ocean, from whose fountains flow
 ' The seas, the rivers, and the springs below,
 ' The thundering voice of Jove abhors to hear, 215
 ' And in his deep abysses shakes with fear.'
 He said : then from the bank his javelin tore,
 And left the breathless warrior in his gore.
 The floating tides the bloody carcass lave,
 And beat against it, wave succeeding wave : 220
 Till, roll'd between the banks, it lies the food
 Of curling eels, and fishes of the flood.
 All scatter'd round the stream (their mightiest slain)
 Th' amaz'd Pæonians scour along the plain :
 He vents his fury on the flying crew, 225
 Thrasius, Astypylus, and Mnesus, slew ;
 Mydon, Thersilochus, with Ænias fell ;
 And numbers more, his lance had plunged to hell,
 But from the bottom of his gulfs profound,
 Scamander spoke ; the shores return'd the sound : 230

' O first of mortals ! (for the gods are thine)
 ' In valour matchless, and in force divine !
 ' If Jove have given thee every Trojan head,
 ' 'Tis not on me thy rage should heap the dead.
 ' See ! my choked streams no more their course can keep, 235
 ' Nor roll their wonted tribute to the deep.
 ' Turn then, impetuous ! from our injur'd flood ;
 ' Content, thy slaughters could amaze a god.'
 ' In human form confess'd, before his eyes
 The river thus ; and thus the chief replies : 240
 ' O sacred stream ! thy word we shall obey ;
 ' But not till Troy the destin'd vengeance pay ;
 ' Nor till within her towers the perjur'd train
 ' Shall pant, and tremble at our arms again ;
 ' Not till proud Hector, guardian of her wall, 245
 ' Or stain this lance, or see Achilles fall.'
 He said : and drove with fury on the foe.
 Then to the godhead of the silver bow
 The yellow flood began : ' O son of Jove !
 ' Was not the mandate of the sire above 250
 ' Full and express ? that Phœbus should employ
 ' His sacred arrows in defence of Troy,
 ' And make her conquer, till Hyperion's fall
 ' In awful darkness hide the face of all ?'
 He spoke in vain : the chief without dismay 255
 Ploughs through the boiling surge his desperate way.
 Then, rising in his rage above the shores,
 From all his deep the bellowing river roars ;
 Huge heaps of slain disgorges on the coast,
 And round the banks the ghastly dead are toss'd ; 260
 While all before, the billows ranged on high
 (A watery bulwark) screen the bands who fly.
 Now bursting on his head with thundering sound,
 The falling deluge whelms the hero round :
 His loaded shield bends to the rushing tide ; 265
 His feet, upborne, scarce the strong flood divide,

' The precept here alluded to by Scamander can hardly be that which Apollo received from Jove in the eleventh book, by which Hector was forbidden to engage in battle till Agamemnon being wounded should retire, with an assurance that then night only should put an end to his victories ; for that promise has been already performed. I recollect no other of the kind. The scholiast refers us to the speech of Jupiter to Neptune in the beginning of Book xx., but to little purpose ; neither Apollo nor any such command being mentioned there. May we venture to pronounce it an oversight ? Cowper

- Sliddering, and staggering. On the border stood
A spreading elm, that overhung the flood ;
He seized a bending bough, his steps to stay ;
The plant uprooted to his weight gave way, 270
Heaving the bank, and undermining all ;
Loud flash the waters to the rushing fall
Of the thick foliage. The large trunk display'd
Bridged the rough flood across : the hero stay'd
On this his weight, and, rais'd upon his hand, 275
Leap'd from the channel, and regain'd the land.
Then blacken'd the wild waves ; the murmur rose ;
The god pursues, a huger billow throws,
And burst the bank, ambitious to destroy •
The man whose fury is the fate of Troy. 280
He, like the warlike eagle, speeds his pace,
(Swiftest and strongest of the aerial race.)
Far as a spear can fly, Achilles springs
At every bound ; his clanging armour rings :
Now here, now there, he turns on every side, 285
And winds his course before the following tide ;
The waves flow after, wheresoe'er he wheels,
And gather fast, and murmur at his heels.
So when a peasant to his garden brings
Soft rills of water from the bubbling springs, 290
And calls the floods from high to bless his bowers,
And feed with pregnant streams the plants and flowers ;
Soon as he clears whate'er their passage stay'd, •
And marks the future current with his spade,
Swift o'er the rolling pebbles, down the hills 295
Louder and louder purl the falling rills ;
Before him scattering, they prevent his pains,
And shine in mazy wanderings o'er the plains.
Still flies Achilles, but before his eyes
Still swift Scamander rolls where'er he flies : 300
Not all his speed escapes the rapid floods ;
The first of men, but not a match for gods.
Oft as he turn'd the torrent to oppose,
And bravely try if all the powers were foes ;
So oft the surge, in watery mountains spread, 305
Beats on his back, or bursts upon his head.
Yet dauntless still the adverse flood he braves,
And still indignant bounds above the waves.
Tired by the tides, his knees relax with toil ;
Wash'd from beneath him slides the slimy soil ; 310
When thus (his eyes on heaven's expansion thrown)
Forth bursts the hero with an angry groan :

' 'Is there no god Achilles to befriend,
 ' No power t' avert his miserable end ?
 ' Prevent, oh Jove ! this ignominious date, 315
 ' And make my future life the sport of fate :
 ' Of all heaven's oracles believ'd in vain,
 ' But most of Thetis, must her son complain :
 ' By Phœbus' darts she prophesied my fall,
 ' In glorious arms before the Trojan wall. 320
 ' Oh ! had I died in fields of battle warm,
 ' Stretch'd like a hero, by a hero's arm ;
 ' Might Hector's spear this dauntless bosom rend,
 ' And my swift soul o'ertake my slaughter'd friend !
 ' Ah no ! Achilles meets a shameful fate, 325
 ' Oh how unworthy of the brave and great !
 ' Like some vile swain, whom, on a rainy day,
 ' Crossing a ford, the torrent sweeps away,
 ' An unregarded carcass to the sea.'
 Neptune and Pallas haste to his relief, 330
 And thus in human form address the chief :
 The power of ocean first : ' Forbear thy fear,
 ' O son of Peleus ! lo, thy gods appear !
 ' Behold ! from Jove's descending to thy aid,
 ' Propitious Neptune, and the blue-eyed maid. 335
 ' Stay, and the furious flood shall cease to rave :
 ' 'Tis not thy fate to glut his angry wave.
 ' But thou the counsel heaven suggests attend ;
 ' Nor breathe from combat, nor thy sword suspend,
 ' Till Troy receive her flying sons, till all 340
 ' Her routed squadrons pant behind their wall :
 ' Hector alone shall stand his fatal chance,
 ' And Hector's blood shall smoke upon thy lance ;
 ' Thine is the glory doom'd.' Thus spake the gods :
 Then swift ascended to the bright abodes. 345
 Stung with new ardour, thus by heaven impell'd,
 He springs impetuous, and invades the field :
 O'er all th' expanded plain the waters spread ;
 Heav'd on the bounding billows danced the dead,
 Floating 'midst scatter'd arms : while casques of gold, 350
 And turn'd-up bucklers, glitter'd as they roll'd.
 High o'er the surging tide, by leaps and bounds,
 He wades, and mounts ; the parted wave resounds.
 Not a whole river stops the hero's course,
 While Pallas fills him with immortal force. 355,
 With equal rage indignant Xanthus roars,
 And lifts his billows, and o'erwhelms his shores.
 Then thus to Simois : ' Haste, my brother flood !
 ' And check this mortal that controls a god :
